CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

To Preserve

The richness, color, and beauty of the hair, the greatest care is necessary, much harm being done by the use of worthless dressings. To be sure of having a first-class article, ask your druggist or perfumer for AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It is absolutely superior to any other preparation of the kind. It restores the original color and fullness to which hair has become thin, faded, or gray. It keeps the scalp cool, moist, and free from dandruff. It heals itching humors, prevents baldness, and imparts to a silken texture and lasting fragrance. No toilet can be considered complete without this most popular and elegant of all hair-dressings.

"My hair began turning gray and falling out when I was about 25 years of age. I have lately been using Ayer's Hair Vigor, and it is causing a new growth of hair of the natural color."—R. J. Lowry, Jones Prairie, Texas.

"Over a year ago I had a severe fever, and when I recovered, my hair began to fall out, and what little remained turned gray. I tried various remedies, but without success, till at last I began to Ayer's Hair Vigor, and now my hair is growing rapidly and is restored to its original color."—Mrs. Annie Collins, Dighton, Mass.

USE

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for nearly five years, and my hair is moist, glossy, and in an excellent state of preservation. I am forty years old, and have ridden the plains for twenty-five years."—Wm. Henry Ott, alias "Mustang Bill," Newcastle, Wyo.

A Woman's Conclusions.

I said if I might go back again
To the very hour and place of my birth,
Might have my life whatever I choose,
And live it in any part of the earth;

Put perfect sunshine into my sky;
Banish the shadows and sorrows of doubt;
Have all my happiness multiplied,
And all my suffering stricken out;

If I could have known in the years now gone
The best that woman comes to know;
Could have had whatever will make her blest,
Or whatever she thinks will make her so;

Yea, I said, if a miracle such as this Could be wrought for me, at my bidding, still
I would choose to have my past as it is,
And let my future come as it will.

I would not make the path I have trod
More pleasant or even, more straight or wide,
Nor change my course the breadth of a hair,
This way or that, to either side.

My past is mine and I take it all;
Its weakness—its folly if you please;
Nay, even my sins, if you come to that,
May have been helps, not hindrances.

If I saved my body from the flames
Because that once I burned my hand,
Or kept myself from a greater sin
By doing a less—you will understand.

It was better I suffered a little pain,
Better I sinned for a little time,
If the smarting warned me back from death,
And the sting of sin withheld from crime.

Who knows its strength, by trial will know
What strength must be set against a sin;
And how temptation is overcome
He learns who has felt its power within.

So let my past stand just as it stands,
And let me now, as I may, grow old.
I am what I am, and my life for me
Is the best—or it had not been, I hold.

—Phoebe Cary.

THE OLD DRESS.

Mrs. Langdon had sent out cards of invitation to her "dear 500" friends for a grand ball at her elegant residence on Fifth avenue in honor of the entrance of her twin daughters into society.

They had just been graduated at some fashionable "finishing off" establishment, and their debut was intended to be a very magnificent affair.

Mrs. Gregory, husband and daughters were on the invited list. As the former and two latter sat in their parlor looking at the elegant cards, with the interesting subject under deep discussion, they were broken in upon by the entrance of Mr. Gregory, who looked harassed and weary.

"Papa!" cried Lena, the elder daughter, "see our invitations to Mrs. Langdon's great ball," showing him the cards she held in her hand. "And there is the loveliest silk at Stewart's that I want to wear. Can I go and order it to-morrow?" she pleaded, laying her white hand, flashing with jewels, on his arm, and looking up into his face.

"Haven't you any dresses to wear?" he asked somewhat moodily.

"Plenty of old ones, which have already been worn and will not answer for this particular event," she returned.

"How much will it cost?" Mr. Gregory asked.

"Oh, perhaps a hundred and fifty," said Lena carelessly, with as little idea of the value of money as an unfledged bird.

Her father groaned and said something about "foolish extravagance;" then drawing out his pocketbook slowly counted out the required sum and laid it on the table.

"How much do you want, Bertha?" he asked, turning toward her.

"I don't think I want any, papa. I have a pretty dress, which will answer very nicely," she replied.

"You're a sensible girl, and the man that gets you for a wife will have some one to help him keep his head above water," said Mr. Gregory, as he left the room.

"What is the trouble with papa? What does make him talk so dolefully when he is asked for a little money?" said Lena. "Any one would think he was a poor man."

"It is one of his money nervous spells; he is always so afraid his business affairs won't come out just so straight; then it is economy and retrenchment, or everything will drift into bankruptcy. That is the way business men always talk till it has become quite an old story with me," said Mrs. Gregory, drawing a breath of relief.

"I don't think papa is trying to frighten us at all," said Bertha. "I think his business does really perplex him. I've noticed for a week that he looked pale and careworn and he said but little. I asked him yesterday if he was not well, and he said there were anxieties preying upon his mind."

"Was that the reason you did not want a new ball dress?" asked Lena.

"Yes, I'd rather wear an old one than place papa to the expense of a new one now, while money is so hard to raise," replied Bertha.

"Really, Miss Bertha, you are becoming quite learned in financial affairs. I should think papa would give you the position of private counselor in his counting room. With your wise brain to aid him, he might sail through seas of trouble, dry shod," said Lena with sarcasm.

"Pray inform us how you came to know so much about monetary affairs, my daughter," said Mrs. Gregory.

"I heard papa and Mr. Ainsley talking about business when he was here the other evening, and he said it was almost an impossibility to get any money at all now," said Bertha.

"Well, you are a little goose; if you will go to the grandest ball of the season in an old made-over ball dress, and be ridiculed by all the elite, you can do so. A few hundred dollars can't make much difference anyway. And when you see the victory which may, perhaps, be won over a certain attractive gentleman of our mutual acquaintance by your elder sister's more stylish toilet, you will regret your decision in favor of Mme. Noah's antediluvian costume," said Lena sneeringly.

"I'm perfectly indifferent to the praise or contempt of the fashionable world, for their is neither heart nor sincerity in it. And concerning the gentleman of whom you so strangely hint, if his heart is only susceptible to the influence of costly apparel, he can pay court to it as long as he wishes without once exciting my jealousy, as I want no dry goods worshiper for my future liege lord. So, ma chere sister, you have the field open and clear to yourself."

"March on, march on, ye brave, to victory or death!" sang Bertha, jubilantly, waving her handkerchief at Lena, who was picking up her money from the table where her father had laid it and humming a gay opera air.

"Bertha, what dress have you to wear? You haven't any that you've not already worn two or three times at least, and I desire my daughters to make as elegant an appearance as any of their friends on this occasion," said Mrs. Gregory.

As Mrs. Gregory was a particular friend of Mrs. Langdon, she felt in duty bound to honor, as much as possible, the advent of her daughters to the fashionable world; and the attire of her own daughters on this occasion was an important consideration.

"I'm going to have Mme. Leicester make over my blue gros grain silk, and you know she is a noted genius for renewing worn ball dresses; but if, after it is done, it looks antediluvian and smells musty, I'll do penance by staying at home," said Bertha.

Lena purchased the new dress and had it made up without regard to expense.

Bertha's dress came from the mantuamaker's hands as beautiful as it could be, and none would ever have suspected it had already been trice worn unless she had been seen with it on. It harmonized admirably with her hair, blonde complection, forming a vivid contrast to Lena's more brilliant style of personal attractiveness and bright, orange colored robe.

The day previous to the ball Clara Ainsley called, a sister of Hugh Ainsley, who was the fixed, central star around which the feminine luminaries had ambitiously beamed for the last two seasons, each fondly hoping to be the finally favored one.

But to the secret chagrin of each, he still maintained the same quiet courtliness of manners toward them all. He seemed quite as indifferent to their heart affairs as he would have been to the pyramids of Egypt. This was the gentleman Lena was bending all her energies to insnare and bring to her feet before the present season closed.

Clara was an intimate friend of both the girls, and she was invited up stairs to see the dresses, which had just been sent home. Their beauty she warmly expatiated on, but Lena would not allow her to leave until she had told her of Bertha's wonderful fit of economy, and laughingly said she should certainly take her own opera glasses with her to the ball, that she might descry some interesting, poor young gentleman, with whom she must have a secret understanding, and for whose benefit she was carrying out this whim of prudence.

The combined entreaties of all the trio could not induce Mr. Gregory to accompany them to Mrs. Langdon's. He pleaded a headache and fatigue. This was a cover to the real reason. His business affairs were daily becoming more entangled by means of several heavy failures of parties owing him to a great extent, and all he could see before him was ruin and disgrace; but he would keep his forebodings to himself until after the fete was over, when, if he found no means of extricating himself, he would make a clean breast of the whole thing to them.

Hugh Ainsley was quite attentive to Miss Lena that night, who looked very queenly in the gay throng, and his attentions were received with deep satisfaction to herself. Nor was the less interested Bertha, who had laid no siege to him, overlooked.

He inquired at once where her father was, as he had not seen him there. To her reply that he had resisted all entreaty to come, from great fatigue, he uttered a prolonged "Ah!" and fell into a reverie.

Hugh was thinking of the vague report he had heard in Wall street that morning, that the commercial house of Gregory & Co. was fast tottering toward bankruptcy.

The next morning at an early hour Hugh called at Mr. Gregory's counting house and offered him loans to any amount to help him through the financial crisis that was upon him. Mr. Gregory had done the same deed years before for Hugh's father, and he (Hugh) kindly pressed the favor back upon him, which was accepted with tears of gratitude in the eyes of the panic stricken merchant.

As Clara and Hugh sat at dinner the next day after the ball discussing the costumes brought out there, she related what Lena had told her of Bertha's streak of economy.

"Is that so, Clara?" he asked. "Was she as self sacrificing as that? But she looked as sweet as a rose bud in her dress, if it had been worn three times."

Then he told her in confidence of the state of Mr. Gregory's affairs, and the reason which had probably deterred Bertha from outlay for a new dress.

"She is a noble girl, Clara, and I'm afraid we couldn't number many like her among that gay assembly at Mrs. Langdon's. Surely 'all is not gold that glitters.' "

A week after this the footman at the Gregorys brought up a card to the parlor for "Miss Bertha, and the gentleman is waiting below in the drawing room."

Bertha glanced at the card and saw "Hugh Ainsley" inscribed thereon.

"Did you say this was for me, John?" she asked, thinking it might have been intended for Lena.

"Yes, ma'am. He said 'Miss Bertha,' " replied the servant.

Lena pouted at this. She had thought he had made a mistake, and an angry frown clouded her face as Bertha descended to the drawing room.

"Was it me you wished to see, Mr. Ainsley?" she asked after saluting him.

"It was you yourself. Why? permit me to inquire?"

"I thought it might be one of John's blunders, and that sister Lena was the one desired," said Bertha.

"No, Miss Bertha; it is you with whom I have special business," he said, at the same watching the sudden enlargement of her blue eyes when he said business.

"For several years, Miss Bertha, I've been searching in the circle of my acquaintance for a noble, truehearted woman to ask to become my wife. I have just been fortunate enough to find her, and have now come to ask her if she will bear my name and share with me my earthly lot. Bertha, you are the chosen one, and my heart's best and purest affection I lay at your feet. Will you answer me 'Yes?' "

"Give me time to think, please; it is so sudden," she stammered, covering her face with her hands to conceal her blushes.

"You shall have three whole months to consider the subject; then I shall demand an unconditional answer," said Hugh, drawing the hands from her face and pressing them to his lips.

In three months Bertha decided to say "Yes," and their engagement was announced to the gay world.

Another three months and the gay world was invited to their public wedding in church. After much coaxing Lena was prevailed upon to be Bertha's bridesmaid, but it was a bitter disappointment to stand in that place, instead of next to the groom.

In after years she learned that Bertha's "old ball dress" had turned the scale in favor of her and won Hugh Ainsley. He reasoned that the daughter who would sacrifice her own desires for the sake of lessening the burden weighing upon the shoulders of her father could not fail to make a true wife.—Buffalo News.

SHE STUMPED IRA.

Little Marjorie, from the city, is a great source of amusement to her Uncle Ira up to a certain point. Her questions made him laugh heartily until she asked about 300, and then they began to pall. Here is the way she began: "Are you going to harness the oxen now, Uncle Ira? What makes them have wooden bridles? Sometimes why don't you drive the big pig in the cart, Uncle Ira? Don't the pigs ever take any bath? When do the thistles be ready to mow? What makes this catnip prickle my fingers so? (It is a nettle.)

"Uncle Ira, why don't there be any beefsteaks up here in the country? Don't you have any markets? What makes you have a bunting sheep, Uncle Ira? What makes only just the bunting sheep have horns?" About this time Uncle Ira ceased to find the questions funny, and began to answer them with mere grunts.—Boston Transcript.

WESTERN JUSTICE.

Mr. Theodore Roosevelt seems to have found the genuine Bret Harte cowboy, and in the Century thus repeats one of his stories told in genial chat after supper:—

One of them asked the other what had become of a certain horse, a noted cutting pony, which I had noticed the preceding fall. The question roused the other to the memory of a wrong which still rankled, and he began (I alter one or two of the proper names):—

"Why that was the pony that got stole. I had been workin' him on rough ground when I was out with the Three Bar outfit, and he went tender forward, so I turned him loose by the Lazy Branch, and when I come back to get him there wasn't anybody at the ranch, and I couldn't find him. The sheepman who lives about two miles west, under Red Clay Butte, told me he had seen a fellow in a wolf-skin coat ridin' a pinto bronc' with white eyes, leadin' that pony of mine just two days before; and I hunted round till I hit his trail, and then I followed to where I'd reckoned he was headin' for—the Short Pine Hills. When I got there a rancher told me he had seen the man pass on toward Cedartown; and sure enough, when I struck Cedartown I found he lived there in a 'dobe house just outside the town. There was a boom on the town, and it looked pretty slick.

"There was two hotels, and I went into the first, and I says, 'Where's the justice of the peace?' says I to the bartender.

"'There ain't no justice of the peace,' says he; 'ther justice of the peace got shot.'

"'Well, where's the constable?' says I.

"'Why, it was him that shot the justice of the peace,' says he; 'he's skipped the country with a bunch of horses.'

"'Well, ain't there no officer of the law left in this town?' says I.

"'Why, of course,' says he; 'there's a probate judge; he is over tendin' bar at the Last Chance Hotel.'

"So I went over to the Last Chance Hotel, and I walked in there.

"'Mornin', says I.

"'Mornin', says he.

"'You're the probate judge?' says I.

"'That's what I am', says he. 'What do you want?' says he.

"'I want justice,' says I.

"'What kind of justice do you want?' says he. 'What's it for?'

"'It's for stealin' a horse,' says I.

"'Then, by—, you'll get it,' says he. 'Who stole the horse?' says he.

"'It is a man that lives in a 'dobe house just outside the town there,' says I.

"'Well, where do you come from yourself?' says he.

"'From Medory,' says I.

"'With that he lost interest, and settled kind o' back; and says he, 'There won't no Cedartown jury hand a Cedartown man for stealin' a Medory man's horse,' says he.

"'Well, what am I to do about my horse?' says I.

"'Do? says he. 'Well, you know where the man lives,' says he. 'Then sit up outside his house to-night, and shoot him when he comes in,' says he, 'and skip out with the horse.'

"'All right,' says I; 'that is what I'll do;' and I walked off. So I went off to his house, and I laid down behind some sage-brushes to wait for him. He was not at home, but I could see his wife movin' about inside now and then, and I waited and waited, and it growed darker, and I begun to say to myself, 'Now here you are lyin' out to shoot this man when he comes home; and it's getting dark and you don't know him, and if you do shoot the next man that comes into that house, like as not it won't be the fellow you're after at all, but some perfectly innocent man a-comin' ther after the other man's wife.'

"So I up and saddled the bronc', and lit out for home,' concluded the narrator, with an air of one justly proud of his own relf-abnegating virtue.

WHAT FOLLOWED.

A young man, arrested for swindling his employer out of thirty thousand dollars, sat alone in a criminal's cell, out of which daylight had faded. Cowering on his hard bed, he pictured to himself the world outside, full of warmth, and light and comfort.

The question came to him sharply: "How came you here?"

Was it really for the stealing of that great sum? Yes and no.

Looking back twenty years, he saw himself a school-boy ten years old. He remembered one lovely June day, with the roses in full bloom over the porch, and the dress his mother wore while at her work, and the laborers in the wheat-fields.

Freshest of all, he remembered his Uncle John—such a queer, kind, forgetful old man. That very morning his uncle had sent him to pay a bill at the corner store, and there were seventy-two cents left, and Uncle John did not ask him for it. When they met that noon, this boy, now in prison, stood there under the beautiful blue sky, and a great temptation came. He said to himself, "Shall I give it back or shall I wait until he asks for it? If he never asks, that is his lookout. If he does I can get it together."

He never gave back the money.

A theft of twenty thousand dollars brought this young man to a prison door; but when a boy he turned that way years before, when he sold his honesty for seventy-two cents.

That night he sat disgraced, and an open criminal, in his chilly cell.

Uncle John was long dead. The old home was desolate, his mother was broken-hearted. The prisoner knew that what brought him there was not the man's deed alone, but the boy's.

Had the ten-year boy been true to his honor life now would have been all different. One little cheating was the first of many, until his character was eaten out, and could bear no test, and he wrecked manliness and his life.—Budget.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER.

She was a bright mathematical scholar and pretty, and when she rattled at the stamp window and laid down the dollar bill the handsome young clerk in a blue necktie on the inside was all attention.

"There's a dollar," she said; "give me four times as many twos as ones and the rest in threes."

"I beg your pardon," he stammered.

She repeated her request.

"Certainly," he said, and began to lay out the stamps.

He worked at it ten minutes without success, she waiting patiently the meanwhile. He wasn't busy with any one else and she didn't seem to mind watching him calculate, so she gave him five minutes more.

Then a customer came in.

"Just keep the dollar," she said sweetly, "and I'll come round in the morning and get the stamps in the proper proportions."—Detroit Free Press.

TWO IRISH MISERS.

An old miser lived in Connaught, and seemed to be an utterly forlorn creature, without "chick or child" belonging to him. It was rather fortunate for the non-existent chick that such was its state, for if it had had an existence it surely would have lacked the means to support it. This old miser was so mean that he denied himself bread, and only kept his miserable lift in its tenement by gifts of food from charitable neighbors.

But he was known to have plenty of money hidden away in his wretched shanty, and his neighbors at last got tired of giving to one so entirely unworthy.

For some days no one went near the old man, and the cabin stood desolate. No one was seen to go in or out, and at last the constable determined to take the obstinate old creature to jail. The door was broken open and the old miser was found dead. In his wretchedly starved condition, and frantic at the thought of leaving his loved money behind him, he had died trying to swallow one of his own bank notes. Pieces of them were clutched in his

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 25, 1893.

"WHAT-ARE-WE-HERE-FOR?" Flanagan of Texas has been hoist with his own petard, having been requested to resign as collector of customs at El Paso.

THERE are already more than 35,000 unemployed workingmen in New York, and the Boston Journal suggests that "probably about 34,000 of them voted for a 'change' last autumn, and are already in the shadow of it."

THE Populists have called their state convention for September 6th at Lynn, the same day as that of the Prohibitionists at Worcester. One party will have about as much effect on the result in the state this fall as the other.

GOVERNOR RUSSELL says he will not be a candidate for reelection this fall, and with his well known persistency when he sets about a thing, it is certain that the Democratic party will have to look in other directions for a standard bearer.

UNCLE SAM is being benefited in at least one direction by the hard times and lack of employment: they are driving men to enlist in the army. The limit is 25,000 men, and while there are not usually over 22,000 men in the ranks, there are now few vacancies.

IT does not take the foreigners who come to our shores a great while to "catch on" to our ways of doing business. Tuesday at Jersey City a gang of Italian 'longshoremen refused to unload a ship unless their employer would discharge all the Americans in his employ. They were not to blame—it was just what we have taught them.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS will probably furnish the candidate for state treasurer on the Republican ticket, and the choice seems likely to lie between Col. Henry M. Phillips, postmaster of Springfield, and Gen. John L. Otis of Northampton. Both are good men, and either would be pretty sure to poll the strength of the party in this part of the state.

WHILE John E. Russell of Leicester has not said that he would consent to be the Democratic candidate for governor this fall, he has made some remarks which can hardly be construed in any other way than that he is willing, and the ticket is quite likely to be Russell and Carroll, though W. L. Douglass of Brockton, he of the Douglass shoe fame, would like second place on the ticket, and will make a push to get it.

MAY it not have been a case of retributive justice, the act of the Brooklyn, N. Y., mob last Friday evening, when it sacked the saloon of a man who refused to give temporary shelter in his building to the women and children rendered homeless by a tenement-house fire? The saloon and every thing in it was destroyed, and threats of lynching the owner were freely made, but he escaped.

S. F. CUSHMAN of Monson, senator from the first Hampden district, has announced that he will not be a candidate for reelection. Mr. Cushman could have had a renomination if he had desired it, but has been far from well during the past year, and this action is no doubt due to his health. His withdrawal will without doubt send the nomination to the western part of the district, probably to a Springfield man.

IN these days when there is so much unemployed labor, and many men are glad to get enough to do to support their families, the 'longshoremen at New York who struck Monday against a reduction of five cents an hour in wages during the present condition of things were killing the goose which laid the golden egg. It cannot be hard to fill their places at the rates offered, twenty-five and thirty cents per hour for day and night work.

IT is strange how little sympathy woman gets from woman. Put a woman in a prison cell and she is forsaken by the majority of her former friends and acquaintances. At the trial of Lizzie Borden the greater portion of the women present seemed to think her guilty, and last week in New Jersey an elderly woman, on trial for the killing of her son, was condemned by nearly all the women who were present, though she was acquitted by the jury. Put a man in jail accused of the same crime, no matter how revolting in its details, and these same women would fawn upon him and think him much abused.

THE committees of the special session of Congress have been announced this week, and Mr. Gillett of Springfield gets the place he wanted on the committee on military affairs, where he can look after the interests of the armory at Springfield. The Massachusetts members fared very well on the whole. The South controls the larger portion of the committees; that section, with less than a third of the population and less than a quarter of the business, commerce or wealth, has charge of thirty-one committees, while two-thirds of the people and more than three-quarters of the business, commerce and wealth, have charge of but twenty-three committees. It is rather a case of the tail wagging the dog.

MASSACHUSETTS criminals are a fastidious set. And why should they not be? They are better fed and have more done for their entertainment than those in like condition in any other state. At Deer Island in Boston Harbor last Friday noon the 1200 prisoners refused to go to work after dinner because the potatoes in the fish chowder were too small and the chowder wasn't rich enough. The potatoes were raised on the island and were perfectly wholesome, but were too small. And that such injustice should happen in Boston! Ye shades of Caesar's ghost! But don't blame the men. They have been accustomed to the fat of the land, and of course could not be expected to eat small potatoes now. It is time Massachusetts adopted a different course with some of her convicts

LET Dame Nature have her own way and she will usually bring things out all right in the end; but try to force her into anything, and with the usual perverseness of her sex she refuses to be driven. This the farmers in Bloomfield, Ct., found out last Saturday when they tried to make it rain. There were a few clouds around when they commenced to send up their dynamite balloons in the morning, but after they had exploded a few the clouds scurried off and the sun came out to see what the racket was all about, while all around, except in that locality, there were refreshing showers during the day. The fifth balloon declined to ascend, but hung about just out of reach above the heads of the crowd, which lost no time in making itself scarce. Fortunately the thing was reached and pulled down and the fuse of the cartridge put out before any damage was done.

IT is claimed that by a surveyor's error, made a century and a half or so ago, a large slice of the upper part of this state really belongs to Vermont, and a boundary commission, acting under the authority of our Legislature, is considering what had best be done about it. The territory which we are accused of wrongfully including in our borders aggregates some 50 square miles on each side of the Connecticut river, and if now given over large parts of Bernardston, Leyden, Coleraine and Heath, half of Rowe and the whole of Monroe and Clarksburg would find themselves in new company, while Williamstown would lose a third of its territory, including Williams College, and the further end of the Housac Tunnel would look out upon Vermont. Massachusetts would lose a couple of millions in valuation, New Hampshire gaining half a million and Vermont the balance. It is not likely, however, that after remaining undisturbed for all these years any change will be made now.

PALMER NEWS.

The Storm of Yesterday.

The weather department has at last remembered this section in its distribution of the much-needed rains. The showers of yesterday morning were welcomed by all, even if they were accompanied by a high wind which did considerable damage to the trees by breaking off numerous of the smaller branches and stripping many leaves. The fruit trees also suffered. Many of the farmers and fruit growers are mourning the loss of a great part of their winter apples, pears, etc. One man stated that from his pear trees nearly all the fruit was shaken. It ought to have remained upon the trees at least two weeks longer. Corn also was obliged to bow its head before the wind. A portion of the board fence back of the Congregational church was blown over. The fire alarm wire was broken by the wind about 10.45 yesterday morning in front of Barnes's fruit store. The alarm struck and Chief Engineer Hitchcock made for the engine house. On arriving there he found something about the batteries which he thought caused the difficulty. He repaired it and the alarm worked all right. He returned to the store, congratulating himself that he was out of it so easily. Meanwhile Superintendent Rollins of the Palmer Electric Co. had discovered the break and repaired it. The sign over the entrance to Royce's restaurant on Commercial street was blown over into the street, and one of the braces which supported it was thrown across the street, where it shattered a pane of glass in one of the doors in Caryl's block. The lines of the Western Union Telegraph Co. were in pretty bad shape part of the day. This morning they were so that business could be done, but not as well as usual. The wires from Palmer to Ware were broken by a train on the Ware River road striking a partially fallen pole. Communication has not yet been established directly with Ware. The telephone company was in about as bad a fix as the telegraph company, having 12 or 15 of their lines either broken or crossed. There was one wire in operation to Springfield this morning, and the eastern connections have been partly patched up. Seven or eight of their wires are not in operation yet, one being the Ware line, which was broken along with the telegraph wires. Reports of a large amount of damage come from all along the New England and New York coast, and also to the crops in the state of Connecticut. The storm in that section was said to greatly resemble a West Indian hurricane.

The Child is Not in Palmer.

The following item appeared in the Lowell Mail of Monday:

Editor of the Mail:—Under the heading of a "Child Kidnapped" the News of Saturday did me a great injustice in the following paragraph:

About a year ago Alice M. Howland, 10 years old, daughter of Waldo A. Howland, disappeared from home without leaving word with her parents. Some time after she was found at the home of Mrs. Nellie Moore, a sister of Mr. Howland's first wife, who resides at Palmer, Mass., and was brought back to her home in this city. Yesterday the girl disappeared again, and her stepmother supposed she had gone to see her father, who is an engineer at the Faulkner mills. When the father returned home last night the child was not about and no clue as to her whereabouts could be obtained. The matter was reported at the police station and it is now being looked up. It is thought to be a case of kidnapping.

The fact of the case is that when the child was with me at Palmer last year she was sent, there by her father, who asked me to do him the favor of caring for the child for a time, but for which he has never yet paid me. The disappearance of the little girl Friday was voluntary on her part, as she came to my residence in this city that evening and I notified her father of the fact Saturday morning by mail. The child's story is a sad one, although some doubt it; but I never caught the child in a lie, and while with me at Palmer last year she was a little Christian girl, and loved by all her teachers and companions, being eight years old in July last. I laid the case before Agent Drury of the Humane Society, Saturday, and he decided to return the child to the father; but it would be a charity if the Christian people would look after her case. I stand ready to prove every word I have stated in the above article. I am in no way related to the child. They were and are all strangers to me.

MRS. NELLIE M. MOORE.

Mrs. Moore lived in the first house on the left on the road from the old Ferrell place near Three Rivers to the farm of G. W. Ely on the Springfield road, and last winter the father of the child came and took her away, giving his note for the board of the child. Last Saturday the father telegraphed the officers here that his child had left him and to search the home of Mrs. Moore. The officers went there but found that the woman had packed up and left a week before.

Who or What Was It?

What promised to develop into a sensation of no mean magnitude was run to earth in the Baptist church about 11 o'clock yesterday morning and found to consist of—nothing. It started in with all the elements for a successful ghost episode, but with the usual result—the ghost refused to materialize. A customer in the store of W. E. Stone happened to be standing in the door looking toward the Baptist church, and at the glass transom over the main entrance saw what looked to be a face against the glass. It appeared to be a large round face, with no beard, and moved from the right hand corner out to the center and back. Others were called and they saw it. Still others and they declared that there could be no mistake about the matter—they were positive that it was the face of some one, and it was some fifteen minutes before it disappeared. The janitor of the church was sent for and the company started for the building, gathering reënforcements by the way. Of course the first thought was of Emmons, the crazy Springfieldian who has developed such a strange malady regarding religious matters, and the possibility of its being he was discussed. The structure was entered by a rear door, the small boys who had gone thus far not caring to be in the company, and the door locked. Then the search began. High up and low down; beneath the seats and back of the big organ; in the closets and behind the doors; down cellar and up in the gallery; everywhere there was a space large enough to by any possibility conceal a person; but alas, nothing came of it. Not even a trace of any one could be found, and the party was finally compelled to give it up. None of those who saw the face are believers in the supernatural, and are consequently wondering what could have produced what they saw, for they know they saw something.

C. H. Bannister has moved into the house of Mrs. Brainerd, on Park street between School and Pearl.

A new yeast route has been started in town this week, the proprietor being William Meserve.

A night-blooming cereus opened its handsome blossoms at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Shaw Tuesday evening.

Mrs. H. F. Davis gave a five-o'clock tea to a number of her friends at her home on State avenue Wednesday afternoon.

The managers of the bicycle tournament are trying to arrange for a fat man's race between Ware and Warren parties.

Mr. Peck, fireman on the 8.05 train north on the Ware River road, has moved into J. H. Tuthill's house on Pleasant street.

The house on Fox avenue, formerly occupied by Charles Saunders, was sold at auction Tuesday to Louis A. Conant for $1305.

Truesdell & Brown expect to occupy the room on Commercial street vacated by F. L. Pierce as additional room for their meat market.

The subject at the Baptist church next Sunday morning will be "Constancy in Well Doing," and in the evening "Almost Persuaded."

Charles E. Dewey has moved from his former residence on South Main street into the house formerly occupied by W. C. Dewey on Central street.

The body of Christopher Porter, a former resident, brother of Mrs. Sarah Wallace, was brought to this place from Hartford for burial Tuesday morning.

Charles D. Holbrook has been away on a vacation this week. The business at the grain store has been in charge of J. Stever Knox during his absence.

Frank Pierce has moved his harness shop this week into the building back of Commercial Block. His present location gives him plenty of room and a pleasant store.

An examination was held this morning of the applicants for the vacant positions in the corps of school teachers. The committee met this afternoon to make the appointments.

R. J. Henry will move his family and household effects next week from his present residence on Pond street to the house owned by George Hastings on Central street.

T. Denny, conductor of the 8.40 train south on the New London Northern road, has moved his family to this place from Brattleboro, and will occupy Mrs. Hatch's house on Maple street.

General Superintendent Baldwin and Division Superintendent McKenzie of the Central Vermont road passed over the New London Northern division on a tour of inspection Tuesday.

Frank W. Washburn will take the position as night clerk and operator at the New London Northern freight house after Mr. Mundell, the present incumbent, leaves for California.

The subject of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning will be "Where We Draw the Line of Battle." In the evening the pastor will give the last of his special addresses to the men of Palmer, taking for his subject "Poor Wages."

The Palmer Iron Foundry has been closed part of the week. The proprietor is happier than many of the manufacturers, as he has orders which warranted his commencing business again this morning. It is the first shut-down that has been necessary this summer, and he hopes it will not occur again.

Contractor Morgan has commenced the alterations on the new Masonic block on Central street. In the store of Thompson & Bannister the shelving has been moved to the side of the room next Hitchcock's store, and the width of the stairway to the upper floor will be taken from the other side of the room.

The Central Vermont road is offering tickets to the Grand Army encampment at Indianapolis and return for $18.50. They are good going from Sept. 1st to 4th, and returning to reach destination any time before Sept. 16th. The passage can be made either by way of Montreal, Norwood or Ogdensburg.

Tickets will be offered for sale by the Central Vermont road to the ninth annual exhibition of the Vermont Association of Horse Breeders, which is to be held at White River Junction next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, for $2.70. Tickets will be good going from the 28th to 31st, inclusive; returning until Sept. 2d, inclusive.

A. N. Baldwin of Easthampton conducted the rehearsal of "Wanita" at the Converse House parlors Tuesday evening. Mr. Baldwin is the brother of the composer of the opera, and assisted in the arrangement of the music for the original performance of the work. The next rehearsal will be held Tuesday evening at 7.30 at the Converse House parlors.

Much interest is being manifested in the bicycle races to take place on the park Labor Day, and entries are coming in rapidly. Monson, Warren, Ware and Ludlow will send good delegations for the mile races for each town, the winners of which will compete in the final for the championship of the five towns. The ten-mile race will also be hotly contested, and in all Palmer will be well represented.

Since the 9.13 p. m. train from Springfield was discontinued Sunday evenings on the Boston and Albany road the express going through at 7.55 has been stopped in its place. Under this arrangement Palmer people who may happen to be in Springfield on Sunday evening and wish to return home should make it a point to be at the depot at 7.31, and not at 8.48 as on week days.

The New London Northern road announces an excursion to-morrow to Lake Pleasant and return for only $1. This is the only excursion that will be run by the road to the Lake this season. Passage can be taken on either the 8.35 or 11 o'clock train in the morning. Those going on the first train will arrive at the Lake at 9.55, and those going on the second will arrive at 12.15 p. m. The return train leaves the Lake at 5.30 p. m.

Some persons, probably envious of the proposed "free silver," decided to have "free whisky" last Friday night, and proceeded to a car in the New London Northern freight yard which was known to contain some barrels of the much-desired ardent. The seal of the car was broken and soon a barrel was rolling on its way down the tracks. Their anticipated enjoyment was short-lived, however, for they were driven away by the night watchman, and escaped capture themselves.

The Christian Endeavor excursion, run by the New London Northern road last Saturday, took 20 people from this place. Quite a fair crowd was picked up along the line. Wednesday an excursion train of 11 cars was run to Saratoga by way of Millers Falls and the Fitchburg road. Twenty tickets were sold from this station. Those who went did not lack music, such as it was, for an organ grinder was brought along by the delegation from Norwich. They returned about 10 o'clock last night.

Ladies who contemplate taking articles of fancy work to the fair in September will be glad to know that the upper hall, which has always had a barn-like appearnance, and has not always been as clean as it might be, is to be sheathed up on the inside, which will add greatly to the cleanliness and attractiveness of the room. The order for the work has already been given, and it is expected to be completed next week. Several other changes are also to be made which will improve the arrangement of things.

There is considerable talk among the business men of the central part of Main street in favor of signing a petition, to be presented to the street lighting committee of the town, asking them to have an arc lamp located upon the pole in front of the store of F. J. Wassum. That part of Main street certainly needs better light than it is now affored. Commercial street also ought to come in for more light. A great many of our townspeople, and strangers, too, are obliged to travel on that street after dark, as it is the most direct route to the depot.

People who intended to make a trip to Block Island Monday had the pleasure of stopping over one day somewhere on the route, as the steamer only went as far as Watch Hill. The weather was very rough on the water, and the steamer broke two or three hawsers in making the landing at Watch Hill. No boat made a landing on Block Island during the day. Those who were staying on the island say the storm was well worth seeing. The velocity of the wind at the weather station one time during the day was as high as 72 miles an hour.

The entertainment season at the opera house commences to-morrow evening, with the famous Lucier Minstrels on the boards. They made a good impression on their last visit, and will this time present a new and varied programme which will be sure to please all. Tickets for reserved seats can be had at Allen's drug store. Next Monday evening Cosgrove & Grant's comedians will appear in the "Dazzler," one of the merriest of farce comedies, acknowledged to be one of the cleverest things of the kind offered to the public. Reserved seats at the usual place.

After the sewer under the engine house on Park street was dug up last week it was found that it had been laid on an entirely original plan. The sewer was laid of cement pipe, and in running from the washing room to the sewer outside the building the pipe rose six inches, which made an obstruction to the free escape of the waste water by forcing it to flow up hill. Also at each joint of the pipe was found a ridge of cement. A new pipe has been laid by Chief Engineer Hitchcock, and he says he can wash out anything that can be put into the pipe through the opening in the floor of the hose washing room.

The Palmers played ball with the Bondsvilles on the park last Saturday, and the score was 16 to 4 in favor of Palmer. Sedgwick did not pitch for Bondsville, as announced, and the boys took kindly to Shea, Roach hitting to left field for a home run, and Kee was finally put in the box. After the game there was a mile bicycle race between Ludlow and Wilbraham riders, which was won by King of Wilbraham in 3.05. There was to have been a ball game yesterday afternoon between the Palmers and Northamptons, but the rain interfered. To-morrow the game will be with the Warrens, followed by a bicycle race for which riders from Chicopee, Rockville, Ct., and several other places are already entered.

The subject taken for the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening was the wild lettuce family. An essay was read by Miss Lilla Allen and various specimens of members of the family were exhibited. The society added one new member at the meeting. Next week the subject taken up will be the hawkweed family, with an essay by Miss Natalie Young. The meetings of the society of late have been disturbed by the ungentlemanly conduct of certain boys who congregate in the reading room, and who are unmindful of the rules governing the conduct of persons using the rooms. It is earnestly hoped by the officers and members of the society, who desire to learn, that these interruptions may not occur in the future.

The street lights in all the villages of the town were put into operation by the Palmer and Monson Electric Company for the first time Sunday evening. The company is now stringing an 00 wire from the Blanchardville station by way of the road which is south of the station and comes on to the road from Monson near the farm of C. M. Foley. From there it will be brought up the road to the village. The company is endeavoring to have the telephone company unite with them and erect 45-foot poles from the railroad bridge near the Weeks House down Main street to Central or thereabouts, and string all the wires of both companies upon them. That end of Main street at present has three lines of poles set in it, and they carry in all about 30 wires. It would be a great improvement to the appearance of the street if this could be brought about. The Western Union Telegraph Co. also has 19 wires running over the bridge, but as the poles are set on the land of the Boston and Albany road they do not obstruct the street.

State Primary School Notes.

The boilers of the institution were inspected last week.

Miss Royce of Middletown, Ct., visited her mother Tuesday.

Rev. James Tufts, Jr., of Monson, spoke to the children last Sunday.

Judge McDaniels, one of the trustees, visited the institution Tuesday.

E. G. Buss and wife are spending their vacation in New Hampshire.

Harry Sisk starts Monday for a visit with Supt. Bradley of the Boston Farm school.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore have resigned their position and left for the eastern part of the state.

District Court.

Saturday Margaret Hubert was fined $5 for assault on her daughter, Bertha Hubert, and was ordered to recognize in $100 bonds to keep the peace for one year. The following civil entries were made: Buffalo Carriage Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., against Thomas Blanchard; J. W. Perkins of Grand Rapids, Mich., against D. F. Holden; G. S. Barry of Springfield against J. H. McCarthy of Monson all actions of contract. The case of Sherman M. Stebbins of Monson against George T. Ballard of Hampden, action of contract, came up and the defendant was defaulted.—Monday Michael McInerny of Monson paid a fine of $10 for drunkenness.—Tuesday afternoon a man from the eastern part of the state was seen wandering around the streets quite perceptibly under the influence of the ardent. In his travels he struck the post office, and after peering into the boxes and both windows stepped to the desk and, laying down a $5 bill in a forcible manner, demanded beer. It is unnecessary to state that it was not forthcoming. He then tried at the town clerk's office, with no better success. He was soon taken in by an officer, and Wednesday morning had a chance to spend his $5 bill in settling the fine imposed upon him.—Wednesday morning the testimony of the plaintiff in a suit for damages entered by Albert Demorest against Joseph Wizard was heard. It developed that the son of Demorest was bitten by a dog owned by Wizard. The testimony on the other side has not yet been presented.

Personal.

Deputy Sheriff Brainerd has returned from Block Island.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buffington are visiting in Meriden, Ct.

C. K. Hubbard of Worcester spent Sunday at H. W. Stimson's.

Mrs. G. C. Ellis and son George are visiting friends in Gardner.

G. W. Brainerd of Boston is the guest of his cousin, W. H. Brainerd.

Mrs. William Rhodes has been visiting friends in Warren this week.

William A. Barnes left Wednesday for a few days' visit with friends in New Haven, Ct.

E. B. Spaulding of Stonington, Ct., has been the guest of Charles Gamwell this week.

Miss Bridgie Cronin of Springfield was the guest of Misses Minnie and Magriete Walsh over Sunday.

J. Porter Lynde is spending his vacation at Block Island. He left for that place Wednesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Winter left Wednesday for a visit to the World's Fair and among friends in Illinois.

Mrs. J. A. Breckenridge has been spending a part of the week with friends in Holyoke and South Hadley.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Knox and daughter returned Tuesday afternoon from a vacation spent in New Hampshire.

Fred Royce, employed at the New London Northern freight house, went Saturday for a vacation at Block Island.

Miss Maria Maloney of Indian Orchard spent last week with her cousins, Misses Mell and Bridgie Murphy.

Misses May Wilder and Mamie Roach have spent a portion of the week with Miss Maggie Rohan of Springfield.

Miss Emma Worten of Needham is visiting her friend, Miss Annie Blodgett, at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. C. Trumble.

Miss S. A. Dryden of San Francisco, who for the past few years has been residing in China, was the guest of A. G. Newton Tuesday.

Miss Anna Fisherdick is home from Chadron, Neb., where she has been employed as a teacher in the academy for the past year and a half.

Arthur Andrews, son of Amos Andrews, former superintendent of the state primary school, is visiting F. U. Wetmore at the institution.

District Attorney Gardner and wife, accompanied by their son Edwin, started Wednesday morning for the World's Fair, to be gone about three weeks.

Dr. William Holbrook went to Lynn today to visit his son, and to-morrow will attend the reunion of his regiment, the 18th Massachusetts, in Boston.

Alfred Adams, clerk for E. A. Buck & Co., returned Monday from a vacation trip to New York and New London. Mr. Adams rode his bicycle as far as New Haven and from there to New London, and reports very fair traveling.

BONDSVILLE.

John Quirk and family of Lowell are visiting Daniel Quirk.

Miss Bertha O'Connell of Lowell is visiting Miss Katie Quirk.

Fred E. Getchell of Hyde Park is visiting his father, C. E. Getchell.

Miss Etta Girouard has returned from a visit at Greenville, N. H.

William Landers starts this week for a month at the World's Fair.

Carmody's and Sullivan's new blocks are rapidly nearing completion.

The Boston Duck Co. is supplying its employes with coal at low rates.

Miss Maggie Bruce is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. J. B. Paige, in Amherst.

George Chaffee returned Monday from Willimantic, where he had been attending camp meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles White of Amherst have been visiting Mrs. White's mother, Mrs. S. D. Weld.

The M. E. Sunday school had a picnic at Forest Lake last Friday. An enjoyable time is reported by all who were present.

Miss Mabel Fairbanks of Ware, who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Henry Morgan, the last two weeks, returned home Wednesday.

Quite a number from this village went to the excursion to Boston last Friday. Several took advantage of the excursion to Saratoga Wednesday.

Mrs. Charles Harrington of Boston, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Richard Russell, the last two weeks, returned to her home Wednesday.

The electric street lights were started Sunday night for the first time. As two of the lights are not running, a part of the village is in darkness as before.

The mills ran only four days last week on account of low water, and will run only three days a week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, until further notice.

A large number from this village attended the ball game at Palmer last Saturday and witnessed the defeated of our boys by a score of 16 to 4. It was the poorest game they have played this season.

A number of young people gathered at the residence of C. E. Getchell Monday evening to attend a party given in honor of Misses Elva and Stella Reynolds, of Brockton, who are visiting there, and the time was very pleasantly spent in games, etc.

The ball team will play the North Danas on the grounds here to-morrow, with Sedgwick in the box. The boys are wondering why it was that the game with the Palmers last week was so persistently advertised as being for $100 a side, and many of them think that it was done to keep Sedgwick, the pitcher, out of the game, as the Palmer manager well knew that he would not play if there was any money connected with the game.

THORNDIKE.

Charles White has gone to Canada for a short stay.

George Williams has returned from his visit in Maine.

John Malloy has recovered from his illness and is out again.

Miss Annie McKenzie returned this week from the seashore.

Michael Riley and family are visiting friends in Amherst.

Miss Mary Clifford of Millbury is the guest of her brother, T. J. Clifford.

Michael Holden and sons returned from their vacation during the week.

John Molloy is to start Sunday for a carriage drive through Worcester county.

Mrs. Washington Keith is visiting her brother Wilson in Indiana for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gerald have returned from their visit with friends in Claremont, N. H.

Mrs. George Matthews and family have been the guests of her brother at Bondsville this week.

The services at the Congregational church and Sunday school will be resumed as usual next Sabbath.

Mrs. James Loftus and family have returned from a short stay with her parents in South Hadley.

The store of J. F. Luman has been closed by C. L. Gardner of Palmer, an attachment having been placed on the stock.

News feaches here from Vermont that Frank Mayett, who left this place a short time ago, is not enjoying the best of health.

Miss Lizzie Leary and Miss Nellie Gaffney of Worcester, Mrs. D. Nolan of Ware and Mrs. M. Sullivan of West Warren were the guests of W. J. and M. McCormick of Commercial street during the week.

The members of the Columbian Band are pleased to learn that H. M. Dean is to again come to the place to teach school, as he will be a great addition to the band. The band resumed practice on Thursday evening.

Camile Paro and wife have retrned from their vacation in Montreal. Mr. Paro says that he took his wheel with him and had to pay $35 to take it across the line, which was refunded to him when he returned home.

The electric lights, which were turned on Sunday evening for the first time, seem to give general satisfaction so far as the strength of the lights are concerned, but there should be a few more added to the list by spring, and if nothing can be done now those interested will wait for the spring town meeting and see what can be done then.

Mrs. Michael O'Neil, an old resident of this place, passed away at her home last week Thursday after a few days' illness. Mrs. O'Neil was 56 years of age, was well known and had a large circle of friends. Her funeral, which was largely attended, took place from the Catholic church on Saturday, during which a high requiem mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. F. J. Lynch. The interment took place on the hill.

False Alarm.

About 10 o'clock Sunday night the people of the village were given a grand scare in the shape of a fire. Certain parties, it seems, secured a lot of barrels and brought them to Harvey's Hill and set fire to them, then went to the night watchman at No. 1 mill and told him there was a house on fire and asked him to ring in an alarm, which he did and brought out the whole village, only to find out that it had been a joke.

The Mills are Not to Start.

The announcement that the mills were not to start on Monday next as was expected has thrown a gloom over the people of the place. Many families are beginning to feel the effects of the four weeks' shut-down severely, and to think that they are liable to be out four weeks more is still worse. The company claims that owing to the present condition of affairs it is unable to start, and does not set any special time, but will give the help one week's notice before starting. Many who were waiting during the past four weeks, when they learned that the mills would not start, began to move out of town, some looking for work elsewhere, while others are going to Canada. It is to be hoped that the company will be able to start at some early date.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Clara Green visited friends in Northampton Monday.

Mrs. Nichols spent this week in Haverhill with her mother.

Miss Sarah Gates is spending a vacation in Enfield, with her brother.

Miss Sturtevant of Ware is spending a few days with Miss Effie Upham.

Miss Della Gage is attending the Methodist camp meetings at Laurel Park.

S. P. Barnes has engaged Will Herren to paint his house at Millers Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheney have returned from Saco, Me., after an extended vacation.

Mrs. O. Powell is the possessor of a new piano, purchased of Springfield parties.

Samuel Holt of Worcester spent a few days during the week with Fred White.

Mrs. Powell, Jr., and family spent a part of this week in Springfield among friends.

The Sunday school of the Baptist church picnicked at Flynt's Park in Monson to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Needham and daughter Fanny have returned after a few weeks' absence.

Miss Walker of Belchertown called upon a number of friends in this place during the week.

Arthur Brown and family, and Miss Carrie Johnston are away on a vacation to Block Island.

Mrs. Caroline Smith of Palmer has been visiting her brother, J. Burlingame, on Baptist Hill.

Five from this place availed themselves of the privileges of the excursion to Saratoga Wednesday.

Joseph Stockley of Providence, R. I., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Holt on East Main street this week.

Mrs. Stebbins of New York and Mrs. Stephens of Missonlia, Me., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Murdock.

Mrs. Fred Burlingame and two sons of Springfield are at the Mountain View House on Baptist Hill for an outing.

Local sportsman intend to give a performance with their blooded equines on the Palmer driving park this evening.

The mills will not start next Monday, as was expected, and there is no knowing when they will be in operation once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Heman Fish are again enjoying home life on Maple street, after a three-weeks' vacation spent among relatives in Connecticut.

Large numbers of French people are leaving every day for Canada, and it is said that from ten to fifteen families intend to leave here to-morrow, the Dominion being their destination.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boyce and Mr. Troughton have left here for their respective homes in Ireland, with no intention of returning to this country. It is also said that several others contemplate taking their departure for Erin at an early date.

Residents on Kelly street are not satisfied with the arrangement of the electric lights, because there are some heavy tax-payers in that vicinity who are sure that it must be obvious to all that the lamps on Main street only serve to intensify the darkness on the former highway.

Mr. Trudeau was the victim of a discomforting accident a few days ago, while going on his usual meat route. As he was getting off his cart he made a mistep and fell under the wheel, which passed over his leg, considerably bruising it. However, he escaped serious injury, being only a few days confined to his house.

Jennie, the four-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Harper, was run over one evening this week by an out-of-town bicyclist. The child received numerous injuries, but is recovering under the care of a doctor. A rumor was afloat that the man had ignored the accident and hurried away after the mishap, but it seems that this was erroneous, for he left his address as B. L. Johnston of Greenville.

The overseers of the mills in this place have challenged the overseers of the Thorndike mills to a game of ball, but whether the latter will accept or not is still unknown.

The home of Cyrile Roberts was the scene of rather boisterous action one day this week. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have not been on amiable terms for several years past, and the erisis was reached a few days ago, when in the absence of the head of the family Mrs. Roberts moved into a new tenement, taking with her all the effects contained in the former habitation. Most of these were claimed by Roberts, who on arriving home and finding that his other half had flown and carried away every available article, became exasperated and immediately instituted a search for her whereabouts. On discovering her location he found the new dwelling locked and was met by an absolute refusal to admit him. He became wrathy, broke in the door and demanded that the goods be sent back where they belonged. But while he was giving an exhibition a courier was despatched for Officer Lavine, who arrived toward the end of the disturbance and assisted in compromising the affair. The conditions of settlement were that Mrs. Roberts renounce all claims on her husband, while he relinquishes his right to the furniture.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

A WELL ROUNDED LIFE.

Mrs. Fanny Bradford, Who Was 99 Last Sunday.

On Sunday, the twentieth inst., Mrs. Fanny Bradford entered upon her hundredth year. Her birthdays, always remembered by near friends, have of recent years become seasons of interest to the whole community. This year as usual she has been made the recipient of everything her friends could bring to please the eye, tempt the appetite or in any way contribute to her comfort. Several from long distances have sent letters of congratulation. Thus far during the passing summer

Mrs. Bradford's health has been better than for years, and it is hoped by every one that it may be so continued as to enable her happily and heartily to round out the century now so nearly complete. Among the remembrances of the day were the following lines from Dr. Rand.

Myaged friend, the years have come and gone
Till now the hundredth stands before thy door.
O bid him in, nor let him hasten on;
A welcome waits, please God, for many more!

They throng thee now, since thou so much hast done
To bless the pilgrim years gone on before.
Beggars they come; thou greetest every one
As if he were a king and purple wore.

I see them—lo! a long line stretching on
Into the shadowy distance of the past;
Each bears some cherished work thy hands have done,
Some gracious message treasured to the last.

Thus do they honor thee. Nor less than they Would we in turn our glad devotion prove;
Thy faithfulness our hearts would fain repay
In filial care, and sympathy, and love.

'Twere joy to live, like thee, endeared to all;
To walk unscathed howe'er hate's shafts are hurled;
To feel upon one's silvered temples fall
The benedictions of a grateful world.

'Twere joy to trust, like thee, the Hand Supreme;
'Twill hold thee in its love forevermore;
Thy feet shall scarcely brush the mystic stream
Whose waters lave the amaranthine shore.

The following lines were also written and presented by Miss Gay McNulty:

Ninety-nine years of life
To thee the Lord has given.
I know that through the pain and strife
Right nobly you have striven
To walk upright with a reverent fear,
And a heart of love and a life sincere,
With its highest hope in heaven.

Few lives have borne as many years
Of earthly harvesting,
But from the field of toil and tears
Some precious sheaves thou'lt bring,
For many a life in days gone by
Has blest thy helping hand,
And many a heart holds thee as high
As any in the land.

Oh may we, when another year
To thee a century shall bring,
Greet thee, still left among us here,
Thy many friends receiving;
And may good gifts be brought to thee,
And all joy's fullest measures—
Hope's majesty, sweet Charity,
And Faith's divinest treasures.

And may our Father, in His love,
His holy spirit send thee,
A comforter and friend to prove
In all that shall attend thee;
To be a guiding, strengthening stay
If pain to thee be given,
And bring thee with each passing day,
A little nearer Heaven.

Among Mrs. Bradford's many callers this year were three little girls whose birthdays come on the same day of the month as that of their host—Catharine Fay, aged nine, Nellie Beckwith, six, and Alice Norcross, four.

Mrs. Bradford retains all her faculties to a remarkable degree, being only slightly deaf, and not confined to glasses. She gives many entertaining reminiscences of her life, among them that of hearing her father, who was a Revolutionary soldier, recount the execution of Major Andre, at which he was present; also of her "boys," as she calls the many students of Monson Academy who have been under her care from time to time, and who in turn call her "Mother," and Grandma," among them the Japanese, who by the way were some of the first sent to this country by their government to be educated, (1867). Mrs. Bradford was born August 20, 1794, in the house now owned and occupied by Calvin Pease. She was married in 1823 to Otis Bradford, and with the exception of twelve years spent in Leverett has lived in Monson all her life. She has had four children, Mary Ann, Jenny, who was married and died in 1857, Anna, who died in 1881, and Sarah, with whom Mrs. Bradford now lives. Mr. Bradford died in 1875 at the age of 78 years.

A concrete crosswalk has been laid from Pendergast's market on Main street to the property of G. H. Newton, opposite. A concrete walk has also been laid along the whole front of the market.

Henry Thresher of Hampden, a former student at Monson Academy, died at his home Saturday, of consumption, and was buried Monday. Rev. W. H. Marble officiated at the funeral.

Some of the shade trees along Main street have been trimmed up recently, and the effect is quite noticeable. It would improve the appearance of the street if more of the same work were done.

It is evident from the appearance of Main street that Monson people have not yet heard of the law, passed by the last Legislature, prohibiting the tacking of signs or posters on shade trees. The statute has been in force nearly two months.

Reynolds's old mill was shut down entirely Tuesday night. The carding, spinning and weaving departments have been idle about a month, the finishing department being run to finish the goods already in the works. There is no time set for the starting up again, and the outlook is poor.

Frank R. McFarland, who has conducted a meat market in Bogan's block, has failed to make the business profitable, and has quit. The fixtures in the place are not owned by him, and several other parties have been looking over the ground with a view of continuing the business.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dustan have returned from the World's Fair and are now at Mr. D's home in Weston. Mr. D. expects to go to Marion in about a week to complete the arrangements for the year. Mrs. Dustan's father, about 75 years old, while assisting a man with a balky horse, received a kick in the leg, fracturing the bones so that amputation was necessary, which operation was successfully performed Friday last. Mrs. Dustan will remain for the present with her parents.

It rather makes the cold shivers run down the backs of the property owners when they stop and think what the result might be if a fire should get started in any one of a dozen places in the town, especially at this time, when everything is so dry. The village has practically no protection from the fire fiend, once it gets a good start. And then what a chance there was on the day of the business men's excursion to Watch Hill; almost everybody in the place away from home! The town ought to have some protection from fire, and it may be that it must suffer a severe lesson before any move will be made, but it is sincerely hoped that such may not be the case.

It is expected that the straw works of Heimann & Lichten will shut down to-morrow night for a few days, to make repairs which cannot be done while there is steam in the boilers, and to put in new piping. A number of changes have been made in and about the works, including a resetting of the machines in the sewing room, the putting in of new floors, whitewashing and painting the interior. A new bleacher has been built, also a shed for storage. On Washington street a curbing has been set about a foot away from the building in order to keep the water which comes down that street in the spring and during heavy rains away from the sills of the structure, the opening at the top being closed. Considerable concreting has also been done in the yard at the rear of the works.

The will is dated Nov. 30, 1888.

How Much Was it Worth?

Brimfield people are greatly interested in the outcome of the suit of Mrs. Mary A. Randall against Mrs. Mary B. Smith of Wales, administratrix of the estate of Achsa Drury, late of Brimfield, sister of Mrs. Smith, for the amount of her bill for care of the deceased, which was tried at Palmer last week. Miss Drury had always lived in Brimfield, and after the death of her mother about 20 years ago lived alone. She was exceedingly miserly in her habits, clothing herself in the poorest of garments, and for an estate that at one time her apparel was horse blankets which she had taken in payment of a debt at the settlement of an estate. She died in April, 1892, at the age of 72 years. About five years before she died she made arrangements with Mrs. Randall, who lived near, to care for her, promising that she should be well paid for her trouble, and she did so, visiting the house as often as was necessary, the latter part of Miss Drury's life as many as six or seven times a day. Her work was not of the pleasantest, for her charge would have no physician, and until about nine months before her death would not go to bed, sleeping in a chair. She wore a pair of rubber boots until her legs became so sore that it was necessary to cut the boots off. Running sores developed, and these needed constant attention, their condition being frightfully offensive. About nine months before her death Miss Drury fell from her chair and was then got upon a bed by Mrs. Randall, from which she never rose. Under these conditions Mrs. Randall cared for her, furnishing her with food, doing the washing and all work about the house, and even cutting the wood with which the patient's meals were prepared. After her death the administratrix of the estate, a sister of the deceased, Mrs. Mary B. Smith of Wales, told Mrs. Randall to bring in her bill and she would see that it was paid. She was told to be sure and make it large enough, as she ought to be well paid for her work and care. Mrs. Randall brought in a bill for $2220,—$2 a week for three years, $10 a week for a year and three months,—and $28 a week for the last nine months, on which there was credit given for a piece of land purchased of the estate, and other items, leaving a balance of about $1700. This Mrs. Smith claimed was too much, and offered to settle for $700 and the home place, which was appraised at $500. This offer Mrs. Randall declined, but offered to take $1200 and the place, which is hardly worth the appraisal. There were some 16 witnesses in the case, which was not decided, but referred to A. M. Copeland of Springfield as auditor.

Leon's Sarsaparilla!

Only one case among a thousand.

To Leon Sarsaparilla Co.:

Gentlemen:—After a very severe attack of La Grippe, I was much reduced in strength. My stomach was out of order, I had no appetite, and a severe cough set in. People told me that with the coming of warm weather I should get better, but as the summer passed, I found that unless I got relief, I should soon be a confirmed invalid. I became despondent, and entirely without energy. Early in the autumn I commenced to use Leon's Sarsaparilla regularly, and occasionally took the Liver Granules. After two months, I find their use has changed me completely. I now have a good appetite, my food digests well, my cough is all gone, my strength has returned, and I am helped in every way. I am well and able to work.

Yours very thankfully,
MRS. LOVINA PHILBRICK.

My Neighbor.

My neighbor was a widder and she hed a run-down farm,
An' her cows an' pigs an' chickens done a mighty lot o' harm
To my fields ajinin', an' I stood it quite a while,
Till I wouldn't be imposed on in no sich kind o' style;

So, I looked my very maddest es I walked up to her door,
Till she looked up at me smilin' while a washin' up the floor,
An' her cheeks was red es roses an' her hair es black es night—
I forgot to scold an' sass her fer she seemed so sweet an' bright.

But my hand was to the plough now, as' it wouldn't never do
To forgit them deperdations jes' by lookin' at her shoe,
So I gathered up my anger an' I said: "Now, Mrs. Brown,"—
An' my tone put out her eyes' light an' ther lashes they fell down.

But I ain't no man fer foolin', an' I went right on to say,
How her pigs et all my melons, an' her cows et tons o' hay;
How her chickens scratched my corn out, an' I wouldn't hev it so,
Gittin' harder all the time, like a madman will, you know.

Then the widder she looked up, with a teardrop on her cheek,
An' a-somethin' in her throat thet wouldn't let her speak,
But she sobbed an' cried out in a kind o' teary tone,
Thet she had no one to help her, an' was poor an' all alone.

An' my hand was off the plow then an' a reachin' out fer hern—
I hed learnt a sudden lesson that I never thought I'd learn.
Well, my scoldin' was a failure, seein' what I thought to do,
For her pigs an' cows are all here, an' the widder's with em, too.

GATHERING FRUIT.

The growing of fruit to maturity is the least difficult task to the orchard owner. His responsibility up to this point is only that of an assistant to nature. But the fruit full grown the task of the tree is done and it falls upon the man to handle the results of its work with judgment all his own.

A correspondent of the Cultivator calls attention to the points that must be borne in mind in successfully reaping the harvest. When a fruit is thoroughly matured decay begins to set in very shortly, and unless the conditions are such as to prevent this the fruit will rapidly become worthless. Fruits picked for the market must be gathered before they are thoroughly ripened, except in the case of very perishable fruits, which have to be gathered, marketed and sold within a few days after picking. The winter apples, pears, and similar fruits are picked before they are fully ripened, and their keeping qualities then depend upon the fruit-houses in which they are stored.

In picking fruits that are to be kept any length of time some system should be adopted, which will prevent unnecessary bruising, puncturing of the skin and mellowing. Apples or pears that are shaken from the tree will not be fit for keeping with the sound ones unless they were caught in their fall by muslin bags prepared for them. The skins should be sound and no sign of bruising visible on the fruits before storing them into the fruit-house. It is not so much the loss of one fruit that is to be deplored, but the fact that one decaying apple will communicate the decomposition to the others.

A fruit house for storing fruits is invaluable to those who raise many for the market and home use. It can first be used for storing the strawberries, raspberries and all of the smaller fruits during hot weather. The summer pears and apples and peaches will come in next for a share in the benefits of the house. Later in the season the winter fruits can be stored in the house and kept until needed for the market or for home consumption. The celler is a poor place for the fruits, and it should not be put to this use.

The fruit-house should be separate from the living-house, and if possible it should be placed partly under ground. In this way more warmth is obtained in the winter time and more coolness in the summer. The walls and roof should be non-conducting, in order to keep the heat out in the summer and the cold in the winter. A low, even temperature is the most essential thing about the fruit house at all seasons, and if this can be obtained the fruit will keep well. A method of ventilation should be provided, for the circulation of pure air around the fruit is also essential to the preservation of the fruit. The temperature should be kept at a few degrees above the freezing point, and decomposition will then be arrested. The cost of a fruit house is not great, and the profits made from it will soon repay the cost of construction. The old method of keeping the fruits in the basement is generally productive of disease, for the escaping gases from the fruits invariably generate germs of poison that must be breathed in by the occupants of the home. Whether raising fruit simply for the home use or for the markets, a small fruit-house is desirable.

TROUBLESOME CHILDREN IN PARIS.

The troubles of M. Lacroix, respectable husband and father of four children, might well pass on to the boards of the Palais Royal. It was just those four hostages to fortune and France that caused his misfortunes. A family of four in this happy land is nothing less than a flagrant indecency and a wanton insult to society. Consequently M. Lacroix found himself absolutely unable to get a flat in a position convenient for his business. No reputable concierge would consent for a moment to superintend a house where such a disgusting exhibition was to be held. At Vincennes M. Lacroix did indeed engage a dwelling, but upon appearing there with his family had the door shut in his face. It is obviously difficult for him to conceal such palpable testimony to his own dishonor as four healthy children. At present he lives like the pariah he is, in the forest of Vincennes, under a large tent. No one will take him in. This is hardly creditable, but it is nevertheless a fact. Concierges rule the roost in French houses, and they hate children like cats hate water. One child or two at the outside is the regulation number allowed to all respectable French fathers, and since the good Lacroix has so far forgotten himself as to have four he must put up with the consequences.

"I can tell you something that you haven't got," said a German to an American. "We have built a church so long that it takes half an hour to walk from the porch to the pulpit." "That is nothing!" replied the Yankee. "We have a church where a little boy is carried to his baptism through the east porch and at the west porch he walks out as a minister with his second wife."—Ausland.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NELLY'S LOVER.

"I wish I could go to the seashore," said Nelly Green, softly.

She sat like a little pale shadow in the moving gleams of the Madeira vines which Marian had twined back and forth over the tenement-house window, her eyes fixed dreamily on the one bit of blue sky which was visible between factory-walls and clustering chimney-pots.

"To the seashore!" said Aunt Penelope, grimly. "Marian, them vests ain't pressed yet, and they're to be called for at noon, you know."

"But the seashore!" went on Nell, as if she had not heard the crabbed old woman's words. "The great, cool waves, full of green and violet lights; the wet, crinkly sands; the sweet wind and the fringes of white foam! Oh, Marian, I know I should be better if I could go to the sea."

Nelly Green had been the flower of all the family—the beauty, the youngest, the pet. But when Nelly fell sick and was obliged to give up school—when she continued to droop, day by day, Aunt Penelope began to question the justice of Providence.

Marian had listened wistfully to her sister's piteous words. She looked at Aunt Penelope.

"Aunt Pen," said she, "there's that money I have been saving for a button-hole machine; it would just take us all to the seashore for a week."

"And what's to become of the button-hole machine?" said Aunt Pen, working her jaws in unison with the motion of the scissors with which she was cutting out several layers of white Marseilles.

"We must do without it," said Marian.

"No, dear, no!" said Nelly, looking up with a faint smile. "I am not yet selfish enough to allow such a sacrifice as that. You have been saving up for the button-hole machine a whole year—you could work a deal faster with it."

Marian kissed her sister and said nothing. But the next evening when she came in from delivering her latest batch of work at the vest factory, she held up three slips of paper.

"Tickets for Long Branch!" said she. "Get ready, Nell and Aunt Penelope! We are to go on Thursday for a week!"

"Goodness gracious me!" ejaculated Aunt Pen. "And me without a dress-cap and not a yard of ruffling done-up!"

"You can make up the dress-cap to-night," said Marian, "and as for the ruffling, we must do without it, for once."

"But about the button-hole machine," said Nell, drawing her sister's face down close to hers. "Oh, Marian—Marian, what have you done?"

"Darling," whispered Marian. "I would make button-holes by hand all my life to see the color back in your cheek."

And Marian felt that she was indeed rewarded when Nelly's cheeks reddened and something like the old light came back to her eyes as the Long Branch boat steamed past the Narrows and the cool salt breeze fluttered her veil and lifted the little fringes of golden hair from her forehead. Marian and Aunt Pen, in her well-worn black alpaca, sat beside her; and Miss Cynthia Culpepper, who boarded at the same house, and was a "saleslady" out for her two weeks' vacation, was opposite, in a dress hat, imitation gold bracelets, and pea green kid gloves.

Presently a tall, handsome young man, who sat on the other side of the boat, rose and approached the party.

"I beg your pardon," said he, courteously, to Marian, "but I see that the young lady is an invalid. Would she not prefer a seat on the shady side? Mine is quite at your disposal."

"Thank you," said Marian, gratefully. "It would be pleasanter."

And then began a pleasant little traveling acquaintance, which was further cemented by the handsome stranger carrying their bags to the train for them.

"Which hotel are you for?" he asked, when at length the train came to a standstill in the depot.

"Oh, no hotel," said frank Nelly. "We have engaged board at a private house. A boy will meet us. We are very much obliged for all your kindness."

"What a fool you are, Nelly Green!" cried Miss Cynthia Culpepper. "Don't you see he's bound for the West End? You could easily pretended you were going to one of the swell hotels, too."

"But it wouldn't have been true."

"True!" echoed Miss Cynthia. "I've no patience with you! You'll never see him again! And him with diamond studs in his linen and a real Panama hat! Who knows what might have become of it?"

"Please to give me the cheapest bathing-suit you have," said Nelly, the next morning, when the three girls went down to take their sea-baths.

"There you go again!" grumbled Miss Cynthia. "Must you advertise the fact of your poverty all through Long Branch? I'd never have come with you, if—"

She stopped here, startled by Nelly's little cry of pleased surprise. For there, looking out of the window where the bathing-suits were piled up for hire, was the tall stranger in the diamond studs and the Panama hat.

"Oh," cried Nell, instinctively, "how glad I am to see you! But who would have expected to meet you here?"

"Renting out bathing-suits at fifty and twenty-five cents an hour," said the young man, with a mischievous sparkle in his dark eyes. "Which shall I have the pleasure of selecting for you, ma'am?" to Miss Cynthia Culpepper.

That young lady drew herself up.

"The nicest you have," said she.

"Marian," she added, afterward, "those diamonds are California, and nothing else. And the hat is most likely borrowed. And you really ought to teach that silly little sister of yours some of the ways of the world! She's making as much of that young man as if he was a gentleman!"

And Miss Culpepper gave the dark-eyed offender the cut direct, when she met him strolling on the beach, when bath hours were over, and the sunset breeze came freshest.

"Are you strong enough to walk up as far as yonder stranded sloop?" said he to Nell. "I thing you would enjoy the sight. And, with my arm—"

"I should like it so much," said Nelly.

But Miss Cynthia could not endure this.

"Young man," said she, loftily, "I don't think your employer would like this."

"My employer!"

"The genleman that owns the bathing suits.

"But I have nothing to do with the bathing-suits nor their owner," said the stranger with an amused look.

"Indeed!" said Miss Culpepper with scorn. "Then may I ask what you were doing there this morning?"

"Oh, certainly!" answered the stranger. "I found, when I got down to the bathing grounds, that I had left the key of my room in the door; so I just stepped in for a moment while the man ran up to the hotel to get it for me."

Miss Cynthia Culpepper opened her mildly blue eyes very wide. All of a sudden the diamonds assumed their original glitter; the mien of the suspected vendor of bathing suits became aristocratic and Lord-Byronish again. How, then, in the names of Guy Livingstone, Sir Charles Grandison and all the other heroes of modern and ancient romance, had she made such a mistake? But if he wasn't the hotel employee, who was he?

The week at Long Branch glided away and when they were seated in the steamer, on their homeward way, Nell whispered to Marian, with gleaming eyes and cheeks all rosy:—

"Dear Marian, is it wrong to be engaged to him after only a week's acquaintance?"

"Wrong? No, dear," Marian answered; "for I think he loves you dearly."

* * * * *

"Who do you think he is—" demanded Cynthia Culpepper, bouncing into the room where the three sat at their vestmaking—"Mr. Newton, I mean."

"He is Mr. Newton," said Nelly.

"He is the new partner in our firm!" gasped Cynthia. "I saw him looking over the cashier's books this morning."

"Marian," said Nelly, turning to her sister, "the first present I make you after I am married shall be a button-hole machine; for all this happiness has come of your sweet, generous self-denial."—Amy Randolph, in New York Ledger.

OXEN AND HORSES.

Had farmers better use oxen or horses to do their farm work? asks a correspondent of the Vermont Standard, who answers his own question as follows: Cost of keeping a pair of horses: Six tons of hay, at $10 a ton, $60; forty bushels of oats, at 50c. a bushel, $20; harness wear, $10; shoeing, $15; decrease in value, $30; total cost, $135. Cost of keeping a pair of oxen: Four tons of hay, at $10 a ton, $40; ten hundred of meal, $12; total cost $52; gain on oxen, $30.

Loss on horse team, $135; loss on ox team, $12; making a saving to the farmer that uses oxen of $123 in one year. We have made no account of the keeping of oxen or horses during the summer months.

If a farmer should save $123 a year for twenty years and put the money at interest it would be enough to buy a good farm and a fast yearling colt thrown in.

WHY WEAR MOURNING?—The custom is outworn; it is an achronism in the nineteenth century. It is unchristian; it clouds the spiritual significance of the resurrection with the ever-present expression of temporal loss. It is cruel; it forces helpless and innocent people into action which entails privation and unnecessary suffering. It is untruthful; it makes false outward show of changes in sentiment. And it is essentially vulgar; for it presses private affairs upon public notice; it thrusts claims of fashion and frivolity upon a time which most greatly moves the heights and depths of being; and it forces its superficial worldliness into the fiercest throes which can ever rend human nature. Why, then, do we still wear mourning?—Mary Elizabeth Blake, in North American Review.

THE KIND THAT CURES

WILLIAM I. ASH, Malden, Mass.

"Heavy Deathly Feeling!"

A REMARKABLE CURE IN MALDEN, MASS.

"FROM THE FIRST DOSE I FELT BETTER!"

The following from one of Malden's reliable citizens, and certified to by the Manufacturing Firm of H. A. & F. L. Miner, that owns the TWO LARGE STORES at Nos. 259 and No. 255 Pleasant St., reads like a fairy tale. "YET 'TIS TRUE, EVERY WORD OF IT."

DANA SARSAPARILLA Co.

GENTLEMEN:—About a year ago I was troubled with HEAVY DEATHLY FEELING in my stomach, everything I ate caused severe distress.

I noticed your ad. in a Boston paper and being a native of that place, and reading of the benefit old acquaintances had received from it, I secured a bottle of at Miners' Drug Store in this city, they being the only ones that kept it in stock at that time. Strange to say, that FROM THE FIRST DOSE I FELT BETTER, and continued to improve and after taking two bottles I had a hearty appetite and could digest almost anything I ate.

Have recommended it to at least a dozen friends, and all I have heard from, have derived great benefit from it.

Very truly yours, WM. I. ASH.
No. 1 Rockland Place, Malden, Mass.

We hereby certify that we sold Mr. Ash DANA'S SARSAPARILLA, and the statement we know to be true in every particular.

Very respectfully, H. A. & F. L. MINER.

Dana Sarsaparilla Co., Belfast, Maine.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. No vital force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Sold by LEGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

Best Cure For

All disorders of the Throat and Lungs is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has no equal as a cough cure.

Bronchitis

"When I was a boy I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary remedies, but recommended me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take a bad cold, and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."—J. C. Woodson, P. M., Forest Hill, W. Va.

Cough

"For more than twenty-five years I was a sufferer from lung trouble, attended with coughing so severe at times as to cause hemorrhage, the paroxysms frequently lasting three or four hours. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after taking four bottles was thoroughly cured."—Franz Hoffman, Clay Centre, Kan.

La Grippe

"Last spring I was taken down with la grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete."—W. H. Williams, Cook City, S. Dak.

The Happy Household.

It's when the birds go piping and the daylight slowly breaks,
That, clamoring for his dinner, our precious baby wakes;
Then it's sleep no more for baby, and it's sleep no more for me,
For, when he wants his dinner, why, it's dinner it must be!
And of that lacteal fluid he partakes with great ado,
While gran'ma laughs,
And gran'pa laughs,
And wife, she laughs,
And I—well, I laugh, too.

You'd think to see us carrying on about that little tad,
That, like as not, that baby was the first we'd ever had,
But sakes alive! he isn't, yet we people make a fuss
As if the only baby in the world had come to us!
And, morning, noon and night time, whatever he may do,
Gran'ma, she laughs,
Gran'pa, he laughs,
Wife, she laughs,
And I, of course, laugh, too!

But once—a likely spell ago—when that poor little chick
From teething or from some such ill of infancy fell sick,
You wouldn't know us people as the same that went about
A-feelin' good all over, just to hear him crow and shout;
And, though the doctor poohed our fears and said he'd pull him through,
Old gran'ma cried,
And gran'pa cried,
And wife, she cried,
And I—yes, I cried, too!

It makes us all feel good to have a baby on the place,
With his everlastin' crowing and his dimpling, dumpling face;
The patter of his pinky feet makes music everywhere,
And when he shakes those fists of his, good-by to every care!
No matter what our trouble is, when he begins to coo,
Old gran'ma laughs,
And gran'pa laughs,
Wife, she laughs,
And I—you bet, I laugh, too!

REUBEN CAGGS'S THEORY.

I was sitting in a café below Fourteenth street, with my friend Reuben Caggs. It was a sultry July day, and he ought to have been at his country house on Long Island, where he had invited me to spend a couple of weeks. He was, however, a heavy operator in stocks, and as the market was feverish he thought it safer to keep his middle finger on the pulse of Wall street than to be driving a spanking team and listening to the rolling and roaring surf.

Caggs was said to be many times a millionaire. Exactly what the term signifies, I can't explain; for any multiplication table ends long before it reaches six figures. I never stood in the shoes of such a man, and never looked at life through his eyes. I don't know what it means to be worried over one's surplus, or to be hurried because one has a couple of fortunes in the bank not drawing a cent of interest. If I manage to make both ends meet on the first of January, and can face the new year free of debt, having given the usual half dollar to the elevator boy who takes me to my room at odd times of night, and a bright sixpence to the old lady who brings me morning and evening papers, I consider myself fortunate. But to have so much money that one can't even count it in his dreams, to be pointed at on the sidewalk as Jabez Cressus, Esq., who has seventeen horses in his stable, and a box at the opera—well, that's the kind of a life my friend Caggs led, and, on the whole, he seemed to enjoy it.

He could say to the jeweler, "Send that home to my wife," and not ask the price of the article. Yes, he could; but I noticed that he always asked the price, and always managed to get a discount. Now, I pay the asking price for everything I buy; he never does; but then he's rich, and can afford to do such things. Being poor, I don't enjoy that prerogative. The salesman seems pleased to take ten per cent off for Caggs; but if I should ask the same favor, he would probably doom me to one hundred and fifty different kinds of death.

Well, we sat at the table chatting.

"My dear boy," he said, "I'm sorry I cannot go down to Clover Hill as we proposed; but you see the bears are after me, and unless I have as many eyes as a spider, and keep them all wide open, feræ naturæ will get their claws on me, and then—"

Here followed the most elegant shrug of the shoulders I ever witnessed. I interpreted is at meaning two things: first, that the bears would find that he wasn't within reach when they clawed at him; and second, that if they should happen to scratch him he wouldn't lose a wink of sleep.

How I envied him. He was poor twenty years ago when he and I were in the freshman class, and so was I. He had changed his mind about remaining poor, but I had not. I maintained my consistency, and at forty-one hadn't a sou marquee. Caggs, on the other hand, was able to hobnob with Solomon in all his glory, and could buy all the bric-a-brac which the Queen of Sheba brought as a present to the king, and store it in the attic of his Long Island house.

"Now, there's my wife, Julia," he said, rather petulantly, as he poured out another cup of mocha—"there's my wife, Julia. She is a most peculiar woman. She runs to philanthropy, goes into ecstacies over a beggar and reels off a lot of nonsense about reforming the world." A sip of coffee followed this remark, and as he buttered his toast he added, serenely: "The world don't need reforming. Heigho! it's all right as it is. It's made up of two classes of people; those who have money and those who have lost it. I say with Shakespeare: "If money go before all ways do lie open.' There you have it just as it is. No, I don't agree with Julia. She says the poor ought to be lifted up. A pretty big contract that, don't you think so. I don't say this at home, you know, because—well, for a good many reasons; but between you and me, it's all bosh. The higher you lift the poor up, the greater distance they fall. Poverty is the normal condition of nine-tenths of the world, always has been, always will be. It's their forte to be poor; they have a genius for it. Give 'em a fiver to-day and they want another to-morrow, and they are on hand promptly the next day. If you refuse the two fivers don't count, and they curse you because you won't keep giving. I have a fixed policy, never to give to any one. It works best in the long run."

The difficulty with Caggs was that he had looked at a dollar so long that he could not see anything else. Doctors tell us that a man may think a disease and catch it by thinking. Caggs thought of dollars continuously; and, as a consequence, all the other and finer qualities, having no exercise, took revenge for their neglect by becoming arrested developments.

"I like to see money multiply itself," he continued. "You say, you fellows who haven't any money and don't know the joys of accumulation, you say it's sordid. Bah! There isn't one of you who wouldn't do as I do if you had the chance and the—"

"Brains," I suggested.

"Yes, brains. Look at the farmer; doesn't he take pleasure in seeing things grow? Is that mean and sordid? He plants one kernel of corn, and who can measure his delight when he takes four full ears from the stalk produced by the single kernel? Well, I plant a dollar, and when the right time comes I scoop in a bushel of dollars. That's my gift. I like to do it over and over again. As for benevolence, why it's out of my line. I'm not benevolent, and don't want to be. Hard-hearted? Yes, if the term suits you. Let the poor take care of themselves; it's none of my business to furnish the world with waffles."

Just here a little mut thrust his head in at the door and shouted "Extree!" He could not have been more than eight years old, and was barefooted and bareheaded. His hair and eyes were coal black, and there was a curiously earnest expression on his face. I don't take to newsboys much; they are altogether too pushing and insolent, but this one interested me. Perhaps it was because I had had a solid breakfast and felt good-natured. There is nothing like a broiled steak to make a man philanthropic. If you add to the steak a cup of steaming hot coffee—with cream, mind you—and a toasted muffin, you become temporarily religious.

The eight-year-old mut crossed the room and stood wistfully looking into Caggs' face. He was evidently nervous and excited; for he stood on one leg and then on the other, moving restlessly every instant, but every time fixing his gaze on Caggs.

"No; get out," was the only response.

"All about the big fire, Mister."

"Didn't you hear me tell you to get out?"

But the little fellow was persistant. At last, and in order to get rid of him, Caggs pulled a handful of loose change out of his pocket, at the sight of which the boy fairly glowed.

"Guess you're a nob, ain't you?" he said.

Caggs looked at him, but said nothing.

"A whole handful! Golly! Say, Mister, do you have as much as that all the time? Ain't you afraid to go round alone? If I was as rich as you, I'd hire a cop to go wid me."

Then came a curious crisis. The little fellow's eyes filled with tears and his hands trembled.

"Say, Mister."

"Well, haven't I paid you?"

"Yes; but my sister's dead to home. She died las' night, an' I'm selling these papers to pay funeral 'spenses. Won't you give me some money, Mister, to bury sis?"

Caggs was simply dumbfounded. As for myself, I broke into a loud laugh. It was a very melodramaic scene. What a consummate actor the young rogue was. Precocious was hardly the word to cover the case. He was an infant prodigy. Caggs was getting roiled. He dipped the corner of his napkin in the finger bowl and carefully wiped his lips; but I could see that he was becoming very angry.

"Bury your sister, you young scoundrel! I'd like to bury the whole lot of you."

Then he turned to me. "What did I tell you Hugh? The poor prey on the rich. They won't work, and"—

"My mother works," broke in the mut, in stout defense of himself and his family.

"I ain't no liar, neither. A fellow can't help his sister dyin', can he? 'Taint my fault cos she's dead."

He was pallid with excitement and grief. There was a defiance in his eyes, too; and he stood his ground against odds.

Caggs was puzzled. "Who told you that story?" he asked, sternly.

"Nobody didn't tell me that story," answered the boy. "It ain't no story. It's true's you live. If you don't believe it, come along. Guess when you see Sis dead, you'll know I ain't shammin'."

Caggs actually had an impulse to go. He hesitated, however.

"You darsn't," cried the youngster. "You're a great big feller, and can kick me around the block; but you darsn't go home wid me and see my dead sister."

"Hugh, will you go with me?"

"Certainly," I replied. It was a new experience for both of us; a curious chapter in the history of city life, and I was not sorry to read it.

"By Jove!" said Caggs, as we reached the street. "I feel like a fool. Now, if Julia were here, she would give that young scoundrel a hot breakfast, and believe every word he said; but I'm made of different stuff. I don't like to be played by a boy no bigger'n a loaf of bread. We'll follow him, and then I'll have him sent to a reformatory, or somewhere. Somebody's got to put a stop to this kind of thing, and we may as well begin right here. Come, you young gamester, go ahead and we'll follow. But none of your dodges, mind."

He was so small that his head hardly came up to Caggs' knee; but he stretched out his hand, and said:—

"Say, mister, if you think I'm goin' to jump, just take hold of my hand, will you?"

"It was a queer sight—two big men and one small boy. The boy was so delighted at his triumph that he forgot to cry "Extree!" and the two men were so embarrassed that they hardly spoke to each other.

"Pretty business, this!" said Caggs, at length, in a disgusted tone. He looked "as crestfallen as a dried pear. "I wouldn't have Julia meet me now for a thousand dollars. It would look, you know, as though I had gone back on my principles. I've a great mind to kill that youngster and throw him into somebody's back yard."

Round the corner into Thompson street we found our way, two well-dressed men and the shabby little mut.

"By thunder!" said Caggs, "this is no place to live. I'd blow my brains out within twenty-four hours. My horses are better cared for. Do you know, Hugh, I'm beginning to think we've carried this joke quite far enough. Julia tells me she comes to such places every week; but, phew! one visit is enough for me. Besides, I feel as though this little bunco-steerer were a poodle dog driving us two stupid oxen into the slaughter-pen. I've a great mind—"

"Here we be, mister."

The slender fingers were withdrawn from the big hand of Caggs, and the boy became almost wild.

"Right up here, mister. Look out for that stair, cos the board's busted."

It was dark and stuffy, with "the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril;" but we stumbled up one flight, then groped our way around the corner and found another flight.

"Great Scott! I've a mind to take a header out of the window," growled Caggs. "I was never in such a fix in my life. We may have to fight for it, Hugh; but won't it look queer in the papers to-morrow, 'Reuben Caggs picked up dead' in this den! What in thunder did I come here for, anyhow? But I'll make this scamp pay for it: see if I don't; I'll have him up in Elmira for a ten-year trip, as sure as you live."

We reached the door of the back second story room at last. The mut burst in with a loud yell. It seemed like a signal agreed upon, and I fully expected to see half a dozen toughs, and to lose my watch and my money. My fist got into rigid condition, and being somewhat of an athlete, I determined to give one fellow at least a blow straight from the shoulder which would do credit to my muscle.

"Mamma! mamma! I've got 'em; here they be."

How could so small a boy show so much viciousness? I looked at Caggs, burly fellow, and noticed that he was pale.

"You haven't a weapon of any sort, I suppose?" he whispered.

"Not a thing," I replied.

"Well, we may as well prepare for some hot work."

Just then from the dingy room on the side, a poor, worn-out woman came. She was startled at the sight of the two grim gentlemen on her premises and turned inquiringly to the boy.

"Mamma," the youngster began, "this man said he'd come and help you bury Sis. 'Pon my word he did, didn't you, Mister?"

"I beg your pardon for the intrusion, ma'am," said Caggs, with great courtliness, "but—"

"Mamma, he thought I was a ginooine bunco-steerer. Say, now, didn't he?" turning to me.

The woman's eyes filled with tears. It was all so unexpected, and she didn't know the meaning of it.

"Don t cry, mamma," said the little fellow, putting his arms about his mother's knees and looking imploringly into her face. "'Taint no cop, mamma; he's a reg'lar stunner, he is. He's got a dray load of money in his pocket, an' he's going to give us some. An' I've got some, too. See? Here's eight cents, mamma, an' I'll go right out again an' bring in a lot more."

The woman, Mrs. Carney, told her story. The like of it can be heard any day in any quarter of New York. But it was new to Caggs. Those keen eyes which coldly watched the rise and fall of the stock market were moistened as she went on.

She came from Keene, New Hampshire, she said.

"Why, that's where I was born," said my millionaire.

Then they looked at each other steadily and long.

"Why! Is it possible? You are not Mollie Flanders?" he asked.

"That was my name before I married James," she answered.

"And you don't know me?" he queried.

She looked again, and through her tears saw that peaceful New England village, and recalled the bright and careless days of her girlhood in the long, long ago.

"I seem to remember," she began, but then hesitated.

"You can't have forgotten me," said Caggs. "We went to school together at the Cross Roads."

I thought him really handsome at that moment. There was a flush in his cheeks, and a fire in his eyes, and I understood why Julia Warden had fallen in love with him.

"Are you Reuben Caggs?" she asked, timidly.

"Yes, indeed, I am," he replied, warmly.

They talked for half an hour. My friend forgot that he was in the second story back of a tenement house, forgot the stuffy smell of the apartment, even forgot the stock market, and listened to the sad history of a life which began in sunshine, but was now clouded with gloom and bereavement. The husband had taken to drink through ill-luck, and his body was lying in Potter's Field. Mollie had struggled for her two children, little Bill, whom we thought a bunco-steerer, and Mamie, who lay in her shroud in the other room.

Bill insisted that we should look at "Sis" before we went. The body was on a pine board supported by two rickety chairs. There was a white, partly faded carnation in her hand. Bill had found it on the street.

What a strange scene! Caggs melted at the sight, and as for me—well, no matter. The woman on the front had brought in a motto and hung it on the wall. The legend was, "Of Such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Caggs looked about the room, then at the face of the pale sleeper, and I saw his lips tremble. Four months before he had buried his only child, beautiful Alice. When his eyes fell on that motto it seemed too much for him. The eyes of the many times millionaire were filled with tears.

"My God, Hugh," he said hoarsely; "let us get out of this. I can't stand it."

Then he turned to the fragile, suffering woman.

"Mollie," he said, "I don't know much about these things, but—" he choked a little—"but I'm sorry for you. I shall ask my wife, Julia, to come and see you this afternoon. She will attend to the details of the funeral." His hand went into his pocket. Giving her a roll of bills, he added, "Take this for old time's sake, and when you want more come and see us."

When we reached the sidewalk he turned on me almost fiercely. "Hugh," he said, "I can't talk much to-day. You go up town, I will go down town. I've had a new experience, and I shall have to give up some of my theories about the poor. Possibly Julia is right, after all. Good morning."—Salem Register.

WHAT ONE MOUSE DID.

It was a sweet June day in town. The hour was on the stroke of 10. The people of Amsterdam avenue had breakfasted and were gazing from the windows of the six-story flats upon the steam drill, the shovelers, the blasters, the masons, the roofers, the hod-carriers, the iron workers and the other similar characteristics of that booming neighborhood. The distant hum of the great business city seemed to come purring among the solid rows of brownstone palaces like the sounds of a sleeping kitten, anon rising above the nearer sounds of the builder. Nature appeared to smile upon busy man and to graciously approve of his industry. The sun shone upon not a single visible idler.

Upon this scene a little innocent inch-and-a-quarter mouse obtruded. He had come from some debris of the morning, and, frightened by his own temerity or calculating on the general occupation to pass unnoticed, hurriedly scught to cross the road.

A grocer's boy forgot his lazy gait, quickly dropped his basket and dashed after the terror of elephants and women. A driver stopped his cart and jumped down and headed the fleeing animal off. He struck wildly at him with his whip, and the grocer's boy yelled with pain. Four men at work on a new excavation joined in the chase, and two shovels were smashed to fragments on the stones. Work on all the adjacent buildings ceased, and people came out from the stores and markets and took a hand in the scrimmage. They butted against one another and stamped on each other's toes in attempting to put an end to his frightened mouseship. In the meantime the latter, so everlasting scared that it had no wit left, ran about in a circle and this way and that, untouched, from the sheer multiplicity of its pursuers. Getting nearer the opposite curb it finally discovered the friendly grocer boy's basket and made a break for it. So did the now frantic mob. In two seconds the walk was strewn with green peas, tomatoes, cucumbers and other garden truck. One man who had no part in any of this stepped on a tomato and fell with force enough to break every bone in his body, but only spoiled a suit of clothes. The grocer himself ran out and kicked the boy for setting down the basket. The whole neighborhood was excited and demoralized.

The mouse got away. Evading the kicks and blows of a dozen men and 20 boys, it dashed into a cellar head first. It had found the world pretty busy, but not too busy to knock off and give a mouse a little exercise. —New York Herald.

The Maiden's Choice.

Two youths once lived in a country town,
And one was a giant fair,
With a Saxon viking's golden crown
And a blacksmith's muscles smooth and brown
When he made his right arm bare.

The other youth was of dapper size.
So slender and short was he
That he found small favor in maiden's eyes,
And the giant boasted in merry wise,
"I could lay him across my knee."

These twain both courted the village belle,
But short was the race they run;
At the giant's feet the maiden fell,
And the little man, though he pleaded well,
Naught more than her pity won.

They marched away to the wars one day,
In haste for the battle's van,
And the people cheered when the giant gay
Strode stoutly past for the distant fray,
And they smiled at the little man.

But the earliest ball by a fo

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 1, 1893.

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES celebrated his 84th birthday Tuesday.

THE anarchists and socialists of New York are said to be at war with each other. Good! Just hang 'em up like the Kilkenny cats and let 'em go it, and may the result be the same!

HISTORY repeats itself; communication between Philadelphia and New York by means of the stage coach is being established once more. By way of comparison the trains between New York and Buffalo run at the rate of a mile a minute and faster.

THE vote for the repeal of the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act was taken in the House at Washington Monday, and the silver men were badly worsted. The friends of repeal had been counting on a majority of about 50, but it was 129, the vote standing 239 to 110.

REPORTS to the effect that President Cleveland was in poor health and unlikely to live through his term of office have been extensively circulated during the past week or more, but they are apparently without foundation, there being evidently nothing the matter with the chief executive beyond "that tired feeling" brought on by too close application to work, and a few troublesome teeth, which he has had extracted.

DURING the storm of last week 24 men were drowned within a line of 10 miles along the New Jersey coast. Where were the life saving stations? Right there, four of them, closed from May 1 to September 1 because of an economical streak which Congress has had in this matter for some years. The loss of life in shipwrecks during August was not less than 100, and it would have cost the country $300,000 to have kept the life saving stations open. Only $3000 a life; the country can't afford it.

SELDOM does New England experience such a storm as that of last week Thursday, and two such storms in five days, the other following on Tuesday of this week, is an unheard-of event. Both were regular West Indian hurricanes, that of last week sweeping along the gulf stream and doing much damage to shipping. That of Tuesday had its center well inland and covered a territory of about 1500 miles. The loss of life is considerable, and the damage to fruit on the trees and to fruit and shade trees is great.

As a means of relieving the distress of the many men thrown out of employment it has been suggested from various sources that the government give them employment on public works and improvements. Aside from the fact that the money for their wages would have to be borrowed at high rates of interest and then paid back at some future date, would not such a course rather give color to the claim made by many that the world owes them a living, and give the unemployed in every section and at all times just as good a claim?

THE new Chinese minister has arrived in this country, and in speaking of the Geary law said that if this country took no further steps toward enforcing it the Chinese government would do nothing, but,that if its enforcement was attempted it might lead to developments of which he did not care to speak. This is understood to mean that the Chinese government will probably aim at the expulsion of Americans from that country. They could scarcely be blamed for such a course. In this case the cry "America for Americans" will bring back the echo "China for the Chinese."

A RAILROAD accident on a Long Island road Saturday night which resulted in the loss of some 20 lives was caused by the utter disregard of the block signals by the engineer of the rear train. His was the last train over the road for the night, and he had been running it about as he pleased, deliberately running by at full speed the signal set for him to stop. At a certain Japanese ford where passengers are carried over in chairs on the backs of porters, the law is that the life of the chair-bearer is the forfeit for the loss of a passenger. The custom of some barbarous nations, if adopted in more civilized countries, might result in greater security to human life. It is rather a pity that the engineer cannot be hung once for each passenger killed by his deliberate action.

AFTER all a savings bank is as safe as the average of places in which to keep your money, though all do not think so, and many who have drawn their savings from these institutions during the past few weeks have occasion to regret their action. A Ware woman sat up all night watching her hoard, and then took it back to the bank in the morning, having lost some $14 in interest; a Buffalo man took $1000 in gold into the water with him at the seashore, and his "sinking fund" is that much larger; a Pennsylvania farmer hid several hundred dollars in the lining of his coat and hung the garment on the fence while he worked, and also while a swarm of locusts worked, for when he went for the coat it and the bills were full of holes and both practically useless. These are only a few instances, but they serve to point out the moral.

FOR the first time in 25 years pool-selling on Hampden Park in Springfield received attention from the city officials last Friday. The police notified the sellers that they were under arrest, but after giving bonds for their appearance in court they went to work selling again. In court the next day Judge Bosworth sent the cold sweat down their spinal columns in large quantities by fining them $1000 each and sentencing them to three months in jail. They appealed. The mayor and the city marshal, as well the judge, are highly commended by the better class of citizens for this action, as for years the pool-sellers have paid handsomely to the track association for the priviledge of plying their trade, and by many it has been looked upon as a price for immunity from interference by previous city governments. The law is very strict, and the decision of the lower court is likely to be sustained.

THE most terrible accident ever known in the history of the Boston and Albany road, in which 14 persons were killed and about 30 injured, occurred at a bridge a mile and a half this side of Chester about 12.30 yesterday afternoon. No. 16, the "Chicago special," drawn by one of the heaviest passenger engines on the road, and made up of a combination baggage and buffet car, two vestibule cars, a dining car, two ordinary passenger coaches and a smoker, with nearly 200 people on board, left Chester a few minuets late and was going at its ordinary rate of speed when it reached the bridge, which went down while the train was upon it. The engine and tender passed over, but tipped to one side on the farther bank. The four forward cars went down to the river bed, the buffet and first vestibule cars faring the worst. One vestibule car and one passenger car hung over the brink, and the last car, the smoker, was not derailed nor badly damaged. The news of the disaster was received in Springfield about 1 o'clock, and the wrecker and several doctors were sent to the scene. The dead and some of the injured were carried to Springfield. The supposed cause of the accident is that the bridge was weakened by the repairs which were being made upon it. It appears that the floor of the bridge went down as a whole, and the collapse of the bridge was due probably to the weakening of the truss work by the removal of some of the binding plates, which were to be replaced by stronger ones, but had been left off while the repair gang was at dinner.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

A New Course of Study at the High School —The List of Teachers.

A subcommittee of the school board, together with Superintendent Small and Principal Knox, has been for some time considering not exactly a revision, but rather a change in the course of study for the high school. The object of this change is to make more prominent the practical and business side of the school. To this end a purely English course has been devised. This course, as indeed the entire programme, has been made just as broad as possible in view of the limited number of teachers. It is hoped that in the near future, by an increase of the teaching force, to make it unnecessary for any pupil of Palmer to leave town for a practical business training. The following course of study will be reported to the full committee, and while subject to changes, will probably be adopted substantially as printed. The part enclosed by the rules constitutes the English course:

All the schools of the town will commence next Tuesday. In June the school committee voted that all children not previously vaccinated must be previous to the commencement of school, but many have forgotten, so the committee has extended the time to October 1st. The law is very direct in this matter, saying that the school committee shall not allow a child who has not been duly vaccinated to be admitted to or connected with the public schools. The following will be the corps of teachers: High school, H. B. Knox principal, Miss C. A. Marsh and Miss Anna Fisherdick assistants. Palmer, grammar, Mrs. Eva E. Cady; first intermediate, Miss Abbie J. Wallis; second intermediate, Miss Helen L. Robinson; first primary, Mrs. Ellen Leach; second primary, Miss Lizzie F. Brown. Thorndike, grammar, Harold M. Dean; first intermediate, Miss Marion R. Paine; second intermediate, Miss Mary M. McFarlane; first primary, Miss Lucy A. Talmage and Miss S. Beulah Thayer; second primary, Miss Mary E. Murdock. Three Rivers—grammar, George Adams; first intermediate, Miss Addie L. Walker; second intermediate, Miss Mabel Sedgwick; first primary, Miss Cora B. Clark and Miss Catherine M. Twiss; second primary, Miss Crane. Bondsville—grammar, H. E. Fuller; first intermediate, Miss Nellie O'Brien; second intermediate, Miss Josie Shea; first primary, Miss Maggie T. Shea; second primary, Miss Harriet G. Martin. Ungraded — Wire Mill, Mrs. Minnie B. Lawson; Palmer Center, Miss Annie B. O'Connor; Blanchardville, Miss Bridget Dowd; Whiting, Miss S. Amy Graves; Shorley, Miss Effie W. Moffatt; Mason, to be supplied.

A PALMER MAN KILLED

In the Wreck on the Boston and Albany Road Yesterday at Chester.

Palmer people will have a large portion of sympathy for Mrs. F. E. Sedgwick, whose husband was killed in the railroad accident at Chester yesterday, and also for his parents. Mrs. Sedgwick was formerly Miss Ella Crance, and has one son, about three years old. Mr. Sedgwick, who was known by his middle name, Everett, was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Sedgwick of this place, his father holding a position as conductor on the Ware River road. He was for a time express messenger on the Ware River road, but was afterwards transferred to the main line of the Boston and Albany, his run being from Springfield to Boston, passing through Palmer at 4.30 in the afternoon, then running the next day from Boston to Albany. From there he returned to Springfield without working, taking his run again at the latter city. He passes through Palmer at 9.20 in the evening without stopping, but it has been the custom of his father to be at the station and get a glimpse of him as the train rushed by, and get the letter which was almost invariably thrown off. Wednesday night the train was late and he did not wait, but the letter was thrown off and taken to him. When the bridge went down yesterday Everett was on his return to Springfield and was in the baggage car, asleep on the mail sacks, and when the crash came he was thrown into the end of the car with the baggage on top off him, being instantly killed, a large bruise on the back of the head showing where he was struck. The funeral will be held Sunday at the house of his father on Pleasant street. The Royal Arcanum Council, of which he was a member, will attend in a body, and all members are requested to meet at the rooms at 1 o'clock, the funeral being at 2.

Entries for the Labor Day Bicycle Races.

If the weather is good next Monday there will be some interesting bicycle races on the park track. The riders who have entered have been training steadily, and will each make a hard fight for first place. Several entries which are expected have not yet come in, but the list so far is:—

MILE RACE.

Palmer—William Graham, Henry Barber, Fred Adams, M. Scott French.
Ludlow—Herbert A. King, E. D. Tufts, Howard A. King, John Brennan, F. W. Sturgis, H. C. Walker, J. B. Henderson.
Warren—E. C. Bliss, C. E. Upham, Edward Price, Jr., F. P. Wood, A. S. Bennett, C. P. Webber.
Ware—H. F. Barnes, J. F. Gleason, W. G. Cummings, W. A. Newcomb.
Monson—Ralph Darling, Joseph Nobert, A. E. Shaw.

10-MILE RACE.

William Graham and Fred Adams of Palmer; H. A. King, G. M. Scott, E. D. Tufts, Howard A. King, John Brennan, F. W. Sturgis, H. C. Walker, A. E. Craw and J. B. Henderson of Ludlow; Edward Price, Jr., F. P. Wood, A. S. Bennett of Warren; W. G. Cummings and W. A. Newcomb of Ware; A. E. Shaw of Monson.

BOYS' RACE.

Fred Gegenheimer of Bondsville; M. Scott French of Palmer; A. LeRoy Halford of Ludlow; Frank StPeter and C. P. Webber of Warren; Ralph Darling of Monson.

LADIES' RACE.

Mrs. A. E. Craw of Ludlow; Miss Alice King, Miss Alice E. Darling and Miss Mollie Lewis of Monson.

C. W. Johnson has the contract to move the Quarry school house at Monson.

John Dawson of Warren has taken a position in the barber shop of Oliver LaSalle.

James McBride has leased the opera house fruit stand and will open a barber shop in the room.

Prof. Shipman of Tufts Divinity School will preach in St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday.

About 40 from this place attended the Odd Fellows' picnic at Laurel Park, Northampton, yesterday.

Mrs. C. Moulton and Mrs. William Rhodes, with their families, picnicked on Flynt's Park at Monson Wednesday.

A piece of land on Walnut street, north of Converse avenue, will be sold at auction tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Revere chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will initiate several new members at its meeting next Wednesday evening.

Next Monday is Labor Day, and the banks will be closed. The business places will probably close during the afternoon.

Holden & Fuller's mill has been closed since Wednesday night, but work will be commenced again Tuesday morning.

Thomas Blanchard has taken several of his trotters to the races at Pittsfield and other places in the western part of the state.

S. W. Lawrence has so far recovered from the assault made upon him by the tramp Field that he is about the streets once more.

All the electric lights operated by the Palmer and Monson Electric Co. were started from the Blanchardville station Monday evening.

The Ridge's Food advertising sign on Knox hill across the river, which was blown down by the wind last week, has been set up and repainted.

Charles Harrison has been employed in the post office this week, while the regular clerk, Charles Kempton, is taking a vacation at Block Island.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Young Men's Library Association will be held in the rooms of the association next Monday evening at 7.15.

Mayor Kendrick of Springfield, representing Grand Master Lawrence, will pay an official visit Monday evening to Washington Council, Royal and Select Masters.

Fred Winter of Boston bought the piece of land on North Main street, formerly belonging to the Knox estate, at auction Monday for $175. It is reported that he will build upon it.

The pastor of the Congregational church, assisted by John Page, is having a religious census taken of the village. The pastor will employ the results of the census in his church work.

At the Baptist church next Sabbath morning the pastor will preach. Subject: "The Touch of God a Source of Power." Evening service at 7 o'clock. Subject: "Parable of the Talents."

A meeting for men only will be held in the Baptist church every Sabbath evening at 6 o'clock. A special invitation is extended to young men to attend and make these meetings a success.

Oscar Marcy's barn is receiving a coat of paint. The premises have been wired for electric lights, which will be put into operation when the all-night service is commenced by the electric light company.

Miss M. E. Marsh will not begin the fall term of her private school on Church street at the usual time on account of illness. Miss Marsh has left her house for the present, and is boarding with Mrs. Cobb on Pleasant street.

J. W. Garno, the night operator at the telephone exchange, has resigned his position and returned to his home at Rutland, Vt., where he will take a position in the same line of business. He is succeeded by Mr. McDermott of Worcester.

The funeral of Mrs. Julia Bliss, 85, who died at her home on the Wilbraham road Monday afternoon, was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. S. Howard of Wilbraham officiating. The deceased was well known to Palmer people.

A horse attached to a carriage was found wandering about Church street Monday night without a driver, and was hitched to a post by some of the residents in that vicinity. The animal was heard until a late hour in the morning, but had disappeared at daylight.

A paper was read by Miss Young on the hawkweed family at the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening. It is ascertained that six members of the family are to be found in this town. Next week an essay will be read upon the thistles by Miss Kate Buck.

Silas Keith was exhibiting the champion trout of the season Tuesday. Its weight was 26 ounces. It was caught from the King brook. Mr. Keith also captured several other large trout the same day. Eight of his string, including the big one, weighed four pounds.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach Sunday morning on "What We Expect of Our Young People," in view of the opening of our schools next week and of the college year of our college students. In the evening he will speak on "Palmer's Recruiting Stations."

Rev. F. E. Jenkins, pastor of the Congregational church, will be away on his vacation September 10th and 17th, but whether there will be preaching services those Sundays or not is as yet undecided. O. P. Allen will have charge of the Tuesday evening class in the church parlors during the absence of the pastor.

Something of a mad dog scare developed at the union depot Monday afternoon. A small dog, belonging to some one waiting at the depot, showed signs of being mad. The animal was captured by John Manning, porter at the Converse House, who held it until it was shot by the driver of the Southbridge stage.

The management of Forest Lake Gardens is making a bid for the entertainment of people Labor Day. The usual attractions are offered; boating, bowling and other games all day, skating in the rink in the forenoon, and dancing in the afternoon and evening. Good music will be furnished for dancing and John L. Bacon will prompt.

Petitions have been made to the superior court by T. J. Chalk and William A. Breckenridge for a jury to be appointed to determine the damage done their land by the putting in of the new railroad bridge at Tenneyville. Franklin Blanchard also wants a jury to decide on the damages to his land by the separation of grades at Blanchardville.

Yesterday was the last opportunity of the season to lawfully catch trout, and after the rain of Tuesday there were many who availed themselves of the favorable conditions to take a final indulgence in the sport for this season, and some good strings are reported. Next come the game birds, the law on partridge going off September 15th. The birds are said to be plentiful this year.

The face which appeared in the window of the Baptist church Thursday forenoon of last week has not been seen since—in the church. There is a suspicion, however, that it belonged to a young fellow who has been seen several times in that vicinity, and when accused of being responsible for the apparition his conduct only strengthened the conviction in the minds of those who were present.

The fence on the corner of Mrs. Maria Lawrence's lot on Main and Church streets has become quite a roosting place for tired individuals these summer evenings, they finding it a convenient place to back up against while smoking and making comments upon passers-by. The fence has been repaired this week and painted, and several of its supporters are now engaged in looking for something which will remove paint from clothing.

Housewives who have neglected to purchase their peaches for canning purposes are mourning the fact that the wind storms of this and the past week have caused a material advance in price. It is estimated that in Delaware and New Jersey over 150,000 baskets of peaches have been blown from the trees, and of course the greater part are unfit to put on the market. A great many of the native peaches have also suffered from the same cause.

J. R. Wellman was severely injured yesterday forenoon. He was driving his team near the mill of the Grosvenor Woolen Co. when the horses became frightened and ran, throwing Mr. Wellman out. He struck on his back and was considerably bruised. He was attended by Dr. Wilkins, who thinks there were no bones broken. Mr. Wellman is over 70 years of age, and as he has a strong constitution it is hoped that nothing serious will result from the accident.

The New London Northern road has been running the last excursions for the season to Block Island this week. The one Wednesday included stations from Brattleboro to Northfield; yesterday, from Millers Falls to Three Rivers; to-day, Palmer to South Coventry, 6 tickets being sold from this station; to-morrow, Willimantic and stations south. All tickets are good for a stopover of one day. The steamer Block Island makes its last trip of the season Monday.

The local theatrical season opened at Holden's opera house last Saturday evening with the appearance of Lucier's Minstrels. The audience was not large, but the show was good. Several new features have been introduced since last season. Monday evening Cosgrove & Grant's comedians appeared in the "Dazzler," and were greeted by a better house than the minstrels. The "Dazzler" is a laughable farce comedy, and kept the audience in almost a continuous roar.

Palmer got only a touch Tuesday of the West Indian hurricane which was announced as on its way north, but had all it wanted. Rain began to fall about daylight and continued all the forenoon, accompanied by a high wind which took off a goodly portion of the fruit left on the trees after last week's storm, and damaged shade trees more or less. The telephone and telegraph wires also suffered a general tangling up. A few signs were blown down and shutters taken off by the gale, but no serious damage was done. Reports from other places, particularly along the southern part of the Atlantic coast and that part of the country lying west of us, state that great damage was done.

Palmer merchants are not feeling in the best of humor these days, for the announcement was made last week that the mills at Thorndike and Three Rivers, which shut down four weeks ago with the expectation of starting on Monday, would not do so, and that it could not be told when they would begin again, but probably not for four weeks more. The carpet mill has been idle some time, and the burning of the mill at North Monson has affected the dealers here not a little. The mills at Bondsville, which started up again two weeks ago after a stop of two weeks, are running only three days a week. On the whole the outlook for trade is not bright.

The ball game last Saturday between the Palmers and the Warrens resulted in a victory for the Palmers by a score of 10 to 4. After the game there was a mile bicycle race with eight starters, the race being won in 2.44 ½ by Stacy of Belchertown. The game to-morrow afternoon will be with the Northamptons, one of the strongest teams in the state outside of the leagues, and a good game may be looked for. The Palmers now have two batteries, Ash and Sullivan, and Hanifin and Lombard. Another attraction will be a horse race between animals owned in Three Rivers, Thorndike and Bondsville, there being already seven entries. The Palmers will play two games next Monday with the Southbridge team at Southbridge, and September 9th will play the Wares on the grounds here for $100 a side.

District Court.

Saturday a case in action of tort was entered by Lloyd G. Harris against C. M. Foley of Monson. — Monday Timothy Connor and Joseph Hall, both of Monson, paid fines of $10 each for drunkenness. Joseph H. Long of this village, for a similar offense had his case continued until Oct. 7th. Martin Stokes of Thorndike, for assault, had his case continued until Nov. 4th.—Thursday the continued case against William Ferguson was again continued, this time until Oct. 7th. The continued case of Maxime Paro was settled by his paying a fine of $5.

State Primary School Notes.

Miss N. J. Rice left Wednesday to enter upon her duties at Hammond Hall, Monson.

Mr. Adams has accepted a position as principal of the grammar school at Three Rivers.

Miss Walker of Belchertown rode in on her bicycle yesterday morning and spent the day with Dr. Gable.

D. H. Brigham, Miss Denver and Mrs. Gardner of Springfield were guests of the superintendent Wednesday.

Mrs. Annie B. Richardson of Lowell, Mr. Pratt and Dr. Woodbury of Boston, of the Board of State Charities, visited the institution this week.

The heavy wind on Tuesday did much damage to the fruit and ornamental trees. E. G. Ward and S. B. Keith braved the storm and returned with a very handsome string of trout. The largest caught by Mr. Keith, weighed a pound and 10 ounces.

Personal.

Miss L. S. Cady of Stafford is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Cady.

Mrs. Wood of Boston is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Henry Atkins.

J. B. Shaw and family have been spending the week at Winthrop Beach.

Mrs. F. H. Hobson of Lowell is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Wilkins.

Byron Shanks of St. Albans, Vt., has been visiting friends in town this week.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Hamilton returned this morning from the World's Fair.

Mrs. M. J. Dawson and son have been visiting friends in Holyoke this week.

Mrs. W. W. Leach has been spending a part of the week with her sister in Athol.

Carmody and Sullivan have their new blocks ready for the plasterers.

The mill was stopped Wednesday afternoon on account of the wheel breaking.

The Morse family picnic and reunion was held Wednesday at Slate's grove.

Earl O'Regan is visiting his grandfather, Emerson Hastings, at Belchertown.

Miss Lida LaCroix left Monday night for Roxton Falls, P. Q., to visit her parents.

Nearly all the Odd Fellows in the place attended the picnic at Laurel Park yesterday.

Considerable North Dana money was left in town last Saturday night as a result of the ball game.

L. R. Holden has sold his house on the Palmer road and will move into Landers's block.

Miss Kittie A. Burns, for the past three years one of the teachers in the public schools, has resigned to accept a more lucrative position at West Springfield. Many parents and pupils will regret her departure.

The ball game here last Saturday between the home team and the North Danas resulted in favor of the home team 8 to 0. It was one of the best and most exciting games seen here this season. The victory was won by clean hard hitting. The North Danas had a battery from Orange and had boasted that they would shut the home team out. However, the boys took kindly to Newell's curves, finding him for 16 hits with a total of 19. Sedgwick was invincible. Not a hit was made off his delivery. He struck out 14 men and did not give a base on balls. The features were difficult catches by Sedgwick, Shea and Scanlon, Key's batting and the playing of Goodman at first for the North Danas.

THREE RIVERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Geer are rejoicing in the birth of a daughter.

Miss Carrie Knox of Palmer has been the guest of Mrs. C. Ruggles this week.

Miss M. Martin of Medford spent this week with her cousin, Miss M. J. Martin.

N. M. Nichols is expected to return early next week, after a long tour on his bicycle.

Herbert Willis and family have returned from Putnam, Ct., after a two-weeks' vacation.

Miss Osgood of Springfield has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Percy during this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Twogood and family have returned from Sandy Beach, after a few weeks' absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown have returned after a two-weeks' vacation spent at Block Island.

Parties on Bourne street are complaining that their potato patches are rifled during the silence of night.

Miss Sturtevant of Ware has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Upham the greater part of this week.

Mrs. Nettie Merrill of New York city is spending a few weeks with her cousin, Mrs. Abbie Higgins, and other relatives.

One of Charles Haynes's horses, while hitched to a buggy one evening this week, ran away and made match-wood of the vehicle.

The annual grove meetings are to commence at Red Bridge on the 12th of this month. It is expected that five societies will participate in the services.

Ed. Macenney and sister Kate, Lizzie Cole, James Henry Cole and Mary Vernard took their departure last Saturday, with the Emerald Isle as their destination.

Many people are wondering why the electric lamp at the Athol station is being run on half time, as it has not been lighted two nights in succession since being put up.

George Adams, who has acted as night watchman at the state primary school at Palmer for some time past, has been appointed principal of the grammar school here, and will occupy rooms at Charles Ruggles's residence.

Cornelius Shugrue received a painful injury to one of his knees Wednesday evening in Palmer, while scuffling. In company with several others he was trying his strength for amusement, and fell on some broken glass, some of which lodged in his knee. Dr. Bliss dressed the injuries, and thinks they will not prove serious.

A dispute took place between O. Marion, who runs a meat cart, and one of his customers yesterday morning while the former was soliciting payment for some meat which he had just sold the party. In a few minutes the altercation became so bitter that there was danger of a riot until Officer Lavene appeared on the scene and dispersed those who were aggravating the disturbance.

The game of base ball which was played here Wednesday between the overseers of the Thorndike Company's mill and the overseers of the mill at this place was a very amusing affair, as on both sides the players were amateur athletes. Nevertheless, the performance gave as much satisfaction to the spectators as anything of the sort that has been seen here recently. The score was 38 to 31 in favor of Three Rivers.

THORNDIKE.

Dennis Dailey of Holyoke is home for a few weeks.

Miss McMaster of Springfield is visiting relatives here.

Marshal L. Hitchcock of Lynn is in town for a short stay.

D. F. Sullivan returned during the week from his vacation.

Daniel Hartnett of Holyoke spent Sunday with his parents here.

Miss Alice Jackson of Worcester is the guest of Miss Nellie Riley.

Miss Margaret Shea of Cold Springs is the guest of Miss Nellie Coffey.

Horace Messia is receiving congratulations on the arrival of a 12-pound girl, which came to him Monday evening.

Minnie O'Connor, who has been visiting her sister for a week or more, returns to her home in South Hadley to-morrow.

The choir of St. Mary's church will resume duty after a few weeks' vacation. Services will be at 12.30 a. m. on Sunday next.

William E. Sikes of Woonsocket, R. I., who has been visiting George Williams for a week or more, returned to his home on Tuesday.

The friends of D. J. Lawlor wish to correct the statement which has appeared regarding his disappearance. The members of the family knew of his whereabouts and knew he was to leave, the cause being to secure an opening in another place in the undertaking business.

Nancy A., 73, wife of E. G. Murdock, died at her home on Main street last Friday after a painful illness. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, Rev. E. B. Blanchard officiating, and was largely attended. The interment was in the Four Corners cemetery. A quartette consisting of Messrs. Clark, McKenzie, Emery and Williams sang. A husband and three children survive her.

Dr. Ellery, the horse dentist from Brimfield, had a narrow escape on Sunday evening. Which about to return home the horse became frightened and ran, throwing him out, but he managed to hold on to the reins, though dragged on the ground for several yards, and succeeded in stopping the horse. The carriage was badly damaged. The doctor escaped uninjured, as did Mr. Sheridan, who was with him at the time.

What's the Matter with the Electric Lights?

The people of the village are commencing to wonder what is the matter with the electric lights. On several evenings of late there have been several lights which did not work, and on Tuesday evening there was only one light in the whole village which was on.

To the devisees, legatees, creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of David Knox, late of Palmer, in said County, deceased, testate:

Whereas, Louis E. Moore, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court for allowance the first and final account of his said administration, together with his petition praying that he may be allowed to resign his trust as such administrator, and whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court to grant a letter of administration with the will annexed on the estate of said deceased, not already administered, to J. Stever Knox of said Palmer.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be holden at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the allowance of said account and the granting of said petitions.

And said J. Stever Knox is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in a newspaper called the Palmer Journal, printed at Palmer, the last publication to be two days at least before said court.

Witness, WILLIAM S. SHURTLEFF, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twelveth day of August, in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bradway, Mr. and Mrs. William J., William L. and Charles Ricketts, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Squier and Miss Ella Bills leave to-morrow for the World's Fair.

Numerous reports regarding the future of the mills at North Monson have been circulated this week, but as yet nothing is determined upon, as the insurance has not yet been adjusted.

Contractor Nelligan's horse got frightened Thursday afternoon, and in plunging about threw the dump cart to which he was attached against a hitching post nearly opposite Pendergast's market and broke it off. No further damage was done.

Charles Smith left early Monday morning to drive to Eastern Point, near Groton, Ct., where he has a cottage and will remain for a week or more. His business here is in charge of George H. Gates during his absence.

As Mrs. Myron Leonard and little child were driving down Main street yesterday afternoon the front wheel of the buggy came off and so frightened the horse that he ran quite a distance, but was stopped before doing any damage.

Henry E. King of Springfield has sold the Dwight King farm to Frank M. King for about $2000. Joel Thompson has bought the Isaac Robbins farm for $1600. William Holloway has bought of Horace Squier a house and lot on Pease avenue for $1600.

The latest changes in the schools are:—Miss Converse will teach the seventh and eighth grades at the room in Day's block; Miss Cantwell the fifth and sixth grades at No. 1; Miss Sutcliffe the third and fourth, and Miss Logis the first and second; Miss Corbin No. 7.

Rev. James Tufts, Jr., was to occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church next Sunday, but has been obliged to decline on account of overwork. Rev. Mr. Blackford not having returned from his vacation the pulpit will be occupied next Sunday by Rev. W. A. Start of Boston.

Nothing of importance was developed last week at the inquest regarding the cause of the fire in the mill at North Monson. The time of its discovery cannot be determined exactly, but was between ten and thirty minutes after one. No clue as to the cause of the fire could be obtained.

The storm of Monday did great damage to fruit in this section, ruining much that was left by the storm of last week. Part of a large maple tree opposite the Cushman mill office was blown down, falling across the electric light wires and causing them to sag considerably, but not breaking them.

The members of the Friendly Aid endowment society have been receiving their portion from the receiver this week. They started in with the expectation of getting $100 for about $40. They paid in $128 each and this week received $7 and a few cents. Ono family had five certificates.

Monson takes but little interest in politics this fall as far as the Republicans are concerned. Last year two Monson men were on the ticket, Senator Cushman and Representative Gage, but Mr. Cushman declines a renomination and the naming of the legislative candidate belongs to one of the other towns in the district, probably Wilbraham.

George H. Newton of this place has been granted a patent for ornamental trimming for ladies' bonnets. The design consists of a flower or plant, the leaves of which move by the action of the wind something like the arms of a windmill, the motion of the leaves causing the blossom to open and close. He has already received numerous applications for the goods.

The Grange picnic, which was booked for Tuesday was, on account of the storm, postponed until Wednesday. A large number of townspeople, with many from the neighboring places —Longmeadow, Ludlow, Agawam, Springfield, Wilbraham, etc.— were present. Dr. Ballard was to have been the speaker of the day, but was detained, so short speeches were made by others. There was music and the reading of a paper on farming.

Prof. Joseph Culver Hartzell. and Miss Helen Hitchcock Thresher of this town, were married at 6 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's uncle, Albert Thresher, at Dayton, Ohio. The bridesmaid was Miss May Compton. The bride wore a trained gown of cream-colored satin, trimmed with duchess lace and satin ribbon, and a veil. Prof. Hartzell retains his position as teacher of sciences at Claflin University, Orangeburg, South Carolina. They will be "at home" after October 1st.

Mrs. J. W. Barker of Gouverneur, N. Y., is visiting her son, C. G. Thompson. Mrs. Barker reached Monson Wednesday afternoon, 19 hours late, after a narrow escape from a railroad accident between St. Albans and Essex Junction. For some reason the train made an unusually long stop at a station, and on arriving at a bridge a few miles further down the road it was found that the structure had commenced to settle in the middle, and soon after it went down. Had the train been on time it would probable have reached the weakened bridge before its condition became apparent, and an accident followed.

Monson Academy will begin its fall term next Tuesday, and the prospects are bright for a large attendance, probably larger than last year. All the rooms in the dormitory are engaged. Miss N. J. Rice, for 15 years a teacher in the state primary school, has been engaged as matron, and will be assisted by Miss Tapley, for five years employed at the state primary school. Extensive repairs have been made in the dormitory, and a large new hotel range placed in the kitchen, with hot water attachment. Concrete walks have been laid about the academy building, the money having been raised by subscription. The faculty is increased this year, and consists of Prof. A. N. Burke, principal and teacher of the sciences; W. E. Morse of Chesterfield, Me., classics and mathematics; Miss Harriet R. Pease of Somers, Ct., preceptress, German and literature; Miss Ada G. Wing of Palmer, English and history; Miss Maud E. Strong of Northampton, assistant in classics and mathematics; Miss Ada Smith of Monson, librarian and assistant in English. Mr. Morse is a graduate of Wesleyan, and has been principal of the high school at Portland, Ct., for two years; Miss Pease taught in the academy in '88, '89 and '90, after which she studied at the Boston University for a year and last year taught in Wichita, Kan., and the trustees are fortunate to secure her; Miss Wing is reëngaged from last year; Miss Strong is a graduate of the academy class of '92.

LUDLOW.

An attachment for $1000 has been placed on the property of Gilbert Clark by Jarvis W. Gibbs of Russell.

BELCHERTOWN.

John Bardwell and Dwight Nutting have started for the World's Fair.

Prof. Lyman has returned from his trip to the World's Fair and other places.

Dogs have recently killed a number of sheep for E. Witt, having visited his flock twice.

A ball game Saturday afternoon between nines composed of single and married men resulted in a victory for the single men, 15 to 13, but the married men are not discouraged.

BRIMFIELD.

H. L. Converse is having a new front put on his store.

The town hall is to receive a new dress inside and out.

Mrs. Rebecca Sibley, aged 87, died at her home Sunday morning.

Miss Carrie Smith is preparing a class of young people to enter the high school.

Miss Fannie Gates is visiting her sister, Mrs. Arthur P. Carpenter, at Charlton, Mass.

The friends of Rev. W. K. Peirce have presented him with a purse of $75 as a World's Fair present.

Mrs. Ella Haynes, daughter of the late E. T. Sherman, died at her home in New York Friday, and the body was brought to this town for burial Monday.

Rev. W. K. Peirce, A. G. Tarbell, George Streeter, Mrs. Oscar F. Brown, Mrs. A. W. Pierson and Miss Minnie F. Pierson leave to-morrow for the G. A. R. encampment and World's Fair.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The public schools reopen for the autumn term next Tuesday.

Miss Eunice Bell is spending her vacation in the eastern part of the state.

Fred Fletcher spent a short time with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fletcher this week.

Miss Nettie Stacy has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stacy the past week.

Miss Maude Bemis has been visiting Rev. Mr. Allen at Ludlow Center for a few days.

The base ball club of this place defeated the Fairfields in a closely-contested game last Saturday afternoon.

Rev. William Rice Newhall will occupy the pulpit of Grace church next Sabbath, and will administer the sacrament.

A number of the Masonic fraternity visited Brigham lodge at Ludlow Tuesday evening. A good time was reported.

Mrs. M. O. Weed has returned from the West, where she has been visiting relatives for the past two months, having spent a very enjoyable time.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Minnie Orcutt has returned to Worcester.

The schools in this village commence next Tuesday.

Miss Jessie A. Johnson is visiting friends in Springfield.

Several families from the No. 4 mill have moved to Canada this week.

Morton Dutch and family have gone to his home in Maine for a few weeks.

The severe storms of the 24th and 29th ults., nearly ruined the fruit in this vicinity.

Our wheelmen are all interested in the bicycle tournament at Palmer Labor Day.

George B. Anslow will soon move to Miss Belle Bowdoin's house on Chapel street.

Miss Jennie Barton, formerly of this place, now of Millbury, spent the Sabbath in town.

Druggist E. T. Hall is moving his stock of goods from the old stand in Crossman's block to the store in J. E. Lombard's building.

The Epworth League of the M. E. church is invited to a group convention at Ware village next Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Barton, on their return from their wedding trip last week Thursday evening, were met at the depot by the Cornet band, of which Mr. Barton is a member, and escorted to their home at Mr. Gilberts', where a reception was given them by a large number of their friends.

WALES.

Rev. Mr. Phelps of Westfield will preach in the Baptist church Sunday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. John Moran has been dangerously sick this week, but is now slightly better. A council of physicians was held twice, who give but little encouragement in her case.

The worst storm experienced here for years visited this place Tuesday, tearing up many trees and destroying all kinds of fruit. Hardly an apple or pear can be seen on the trees. Corn all lays flat.

The public schools commence next Monday. Miss Edith Webber, who has taught the primary school several terms, has resigned to attend the Quincy training school at Quincy, Mass. Her successor will be Miss Bertha Bryant, a former teacher of this school.

Rev. Mr. Swafield of Boston, with his family, left for home Monday after spending a week at the Lyon Mountain View House. Several others will soon come to take their places. The little pet dog about as large as a medium-sized cat, which was dispatched for a mad dog by two burly and courageous hackmen that day at Palmer belonged to the Swafield family, going home to Boston. Just before they left their boarding place the children felt afraid their pet would be hungry before he got home, and gave him a large quantity of fresh meat, which threw him into convulsions. If let alone he would have come out all right in a short time.

An Enormous Snake.

One of our townsmen who owns a team has quite often during the last two weeks, since the mills shut down, taken his wife out to pick berries. While assisting her in picking near a wood pile one day he was startled by the appearance of a large black snake, which he insists reached clear across the 4-foot pile with head erected two feet and his body and tail reaching down to and along the ground some distance, the body being about the size of common stove pipe in diameter. Since that time he has carried a 10-foot pole, and before entering a patch of berry bushes he has spent several minutes in threshing the brush to be sure and scare away the reptiles. His wife says the threshing is all right, but it makes poor picking.

WARREN.

Miss Edith M. Converse is visiting friends in Springfield.

The roof of the new Sayles & Jenks woolen mill is being put on.

Mrs. C. A. Delan l and daughter are visiting friends in Beverly.

William E. Nichols is away on a two-weeks' visit at Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

Charles D. Tufts and family are enjoying the refreshing breezes in Belchertown.

George S. Butler gave a picnic Saturday on the banks of the Quaboag river above the Cutler bridge.

A reservoir is being built on land of W. A. Jenks on Mark's Mountain, to connect with the new woolen mill.

Clarence A. Brodeur, superintendent of schools, has moved into the house lately vacated by W. B. Davis.

The public schools will open next Tuesday. Miss Eva Oaks will take the place of Miss Gertrude Rand, who resigned.

The bicycle club is to refurnish its room in Quaboag block, and has bought a pool table. The club now has nearly 50 members.

Rev. D. O. Clark, a former pastor, preached in the Congregational church last Sunday, the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hale, preaching in Salem, his former home.

At the special town meeting last Saturday the article regarding the buildings on Main street in the vicinity of Factory Hill was laid on the table. It was voted to repair the old wall but not to change the sidewalks.

The Knowles pump works started up Monday morning, but with only 40 hands and a cut of 10 per cent in the wages. More hands will be given employment as fast as the business will warrant.

The funeral of Mrs. Alfred L. Converse will be held at her late home to-morrow afternoon at half past two. Mrs. Converse will be remembered by many Palmer people as Almira Sedgwick, daughter of John and Asenath Sedgwick. Her early married life was spent in Brimfield, and her later years have been spent in Warren. For the last two years she has suffered much from ill health, but has borne all with a cheerful unselfishness. A husband and one son survive her.

The two steamers recently purchased by the town for fire protection were tested at West Warren last Friday. The West Warren steamer was set at the No. 3 mill pond and 1200 feet of hose laid to the Warren engine, then 1200 feet more was laid, all the way up hill. The water was thrown 148 feet from a 1⅛ inch nozzle. Then both machines were set by the river and 150 feet of hose laid from each. Water was thrown 236 feet against the wind and 258 feet with the wind. Both steamers worked alike. The work was done with a steam pressure of 125 pounds and a water pressure of from 150 to 180 pounds.

WARE.

The East Congregational church has given sufficient from the treasury, added to the contribution taken for Rev. Henry Perkins, to make the sum $100, to aid him in missionary work in China.

The vestry of the Unitarian church has been entirely remodeled, and is now called "Unity Hall." The stage has been put at the north end, and the entrance to the hall at the south end is reached by outside stairs and a board walk on the west side.

The storm of Tuesday did considerable damage in this vicinity. The barns at the trotting park were part of them completely torn in pieces, and the remainder turned just bottom side up and left lying on the roof.

Contractor Buckley has done a quick job on J. B. Green's house on Eddy street. It was commenced the first day of August, and is now nearly if not altogether plastered. The situation is one of the very finest in town.

Allie Marsh, 9 years of age, son of F. E. Marsh, fell some 15 feet in the barn that is being erected for J. B. Green on Tuesday, where he was playing with the boys. He was taken up insensible with a severe cut in his head. He was attended by Dr. W. W. Miner, and is coming out of it all right.

Judge A. J. Fargo of Easthampton presided at the district court last Friday, when the case of Mrs. Sidelinger of Huntington, formerly Miss Delia McKenny of Ware, against the estate of the late James O'Connor, was tried. The plaintiff claimed $300 for services as housekeeper and nurse to Mr. O'Connor for 25 weeks previous to his death. O'Connor had outlived two wives and paid attention to Miss McKenny, who lived near by, in 1891, much to the displeasure of his children. He became seriously ill in 1892 and sent for Miss McKenny to keep house and nurse him, again in opposition to his children and relatives. Mrs. Sidelinger testified that she was engaged to be married to O'Connor, and had received a ring, gold watch and chain from him as presents, while the children testified that the articles were in payment for her services, and that in their hearing Miss McKenny said she had no further claim and was satisfied. Judge Fargo decided that the estate should pay Mrs. Sidelinger $73 and all costs. P. J. Moore represented the plaintiff, and H. M. Coney the defense.

CARD.—The undersigned desire to thank their friends and neighbors for their sympathy and acts of kindness in their bereavement.

E. G. MURDOCK AND FAMILY.

Many people n t aware of the dangers of constipation, neglect the proper remedy until the habit becomes chronic, or inflammation or stoppage results. A dose or two of Ayer's Pills in the beginning would have prevented all this.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the few remedies which are recommended by every school of medicine. Its strength, purity, and efficacy are too well established to admit of doubt as to its superiority over all other blood-purifiers whatever. Ayer's Sarsaparilla leads all.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was inclined in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I could my own work. On my recommendation [illegible] others are taking this valuable remedy." [illegible] Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

The Case Against Corsets.

This is the shape of a woman's waist on which a corset tight is laced. The ribs, deformed by being squeezed, press on the lungs, till they're diseased. The heart is jammed and cannot pump the liver is a torpid lump;
the stomach
crushed, cannot digest; and in a mess are all compressed. There fore this silly woman grows to be a fearful mass of woes,
But thinks she has a lovely shape, though hideous as a crippled ape.

This is a woman's natural waist, which corset never yet disgraced. Inside it is a mine of health. Outside of charms it has a wealth.
It is a thing of beauty true, and a sweet joy forever new. It needs no artful padding vile or bustle big to give it "style."
It's strong and solid,
plump and sound, and hard to get one arm around. Alas! If women only knew the mischief that these corsets do, they'd let Dame Nature have her way, and never try her waist to "stay."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the finest, the purest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest selling of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has exactly the popular flavor that pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

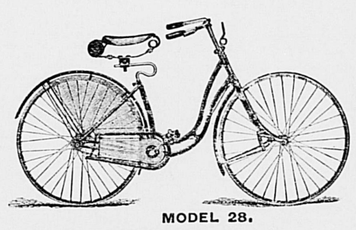
MODEL 27.



MODEL 28.

BEAUTIES, AREN'T THEY?

u can have them with cushion tires at $110 each, or with pneumatic tires at $115 and $125 each, cash, according to the quality of the tires.

The tire on the $125 machine is our best Columbia pneumatic, the best and most expensive tire to manufacture ever used on a bicycle, fully guaranteed against puncture for the year; moreover, we guarantee the whole machine from rim to hub, from handle bar to pedal.

HOW TO GET ONE.

Go to our nearest agent. If you don't know who or where he is, write to us and we will tell you, satisfy him of your honorable intentions and ability to pay, pay $25 in cash and arrange to pay the balance within one year. This is an easy way to possess a bicycle worth two or three of the fourth grade machines which are hawked about in auction rooms. If you wish to take advantage of this offer you should attend to the matter at once, as we have but a few of them.

You are welcome to our catalogue, it is a beautiful little book, beautifully illustrated. Call on our agents for free copy, or send us two two-cent stamps for postage and we will mail it.

THE SERVANT WAS HORRIFIED.

Dr. S. had a newly-arrived Hibernian for a servant. He had also recently purchased a pair of porpoise leather boots. His wife, attracted by the novelty of the new footwear, asked the doctor in the presence of the servant what they were made of, to which he responded "porpoise hide."

Shortly after the lady from the Emerald Isle interviewed Mrs. S. and announced her intention of "laving whin me week is up." Mrs. S., somewhat surprised, asked the disturbed domestic the reason for her announced departure, to which Bridget responded with a horrified air:

"Your husband is a docther, mum, an' I've heard them docthers do be cuttin' up people, an' didn" I hear um wid me own ears say that the boots of him were made of pauper's hide. It's me own ould father that died in the poorhouse, an' I wouldn't be servin' a haythen that uses the skin of the poor to cover his dirthy feet wid."—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

AMBIGUOUS.—"I congratulate you, Mrs. Familias, on your husband's safe return."

"Thank you, Mr. Cardiac. It's no joke to have the man of one's family on a steamer a week overdue in December."

"I had made up my mind that if he went down I would write you a letter of condolence."

"That was kind of you. What were you going to tell me, Mr. Cardiac?"

"Well, I wanted to express my appreciation for him, and lots of sympathy and encouragement for you, and I had about made up my mind just to say 'There's just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught,' and let you take it either way."—Life.

A SOCIETY EVENT.—"I want somebody to show me where to unload this coal," said the grimy-looking man at the kitchen door.

"You needn't ask me about it," retorted the young woman. "I don't have anything to do with unloading the coal. I'm the kitchen-lady."

"I can't help that," he rejoined. "I'm the coal-gentleman and the father of three kitchen-ladies, one laundry-lady and one cash-lady, and if you don't show me where to put this coal I'll call the woman of the house."

"I—I'll show you, sir," she humbly replied, leading the way to the coal house.—Chicago Tribune.

HIS MAIDEN SPEECH.—He was a young lawyer and was delivering his maiden speech. He was florid, rhetorical, scattering and tedious. For two weary hours he talked at the court and jury until everybody felt like lynching him. When he got through, his opponent, a grizzled old professional, arose, looked sweetly at the judge and said, "Your honor, I will follow the example of my young friend who has just finished, and submit the case without argument." He then sat down, and the young lawyer felt as though cold water was coming down his back.

The large, rough man from the mountains, with a pot of money on his person, was resting comfortably in an easy chair at the Auditorium in Chicago, lazily watching the "help" tidying up the writing room.

"So," he said to the menial, "you call this hotel the Auditorium, do you?"

"Yes, sir."

And you call one of the show buildings at the fair grounds the Spectatorium?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well," and he stretched himself out a little further, "s'pose you shove one of them expectatorium over this way, I want to take a chaw of the weed."—New York Sun.

Mouldy Mike—"By all th' saints, has yer lost yer mind? Wot you carryin' that saw for?" Ragged Robert—"It's all right. I stop at houses and offer to saw wood for me dinner." "You'll be expelled from the Trav elin' Gentlemen's Union." "No, I won't. After dinner I tell 'em I can't work till I file me saw. They lend me a file an' tell me to go way off where they won't hear me filin'. Most any saloon will give me a drink for a good file."—New York Weekly.

An Attractive Child.

The Unfortunate Occurrence of Her Life.

And How It Came Near Making Her Existence Unhappy.

Her Mother Tells a Story That Will Greatly Interest All.

Stories of children are always interesting. Parents often vie with each other in seeing which can tell the best story or most interesting anecdote about their children.

But here is a story told by one mother which, while it may awake echos of sadness in the minds and hearts of some parents, will be to others a message fraught with hope and joy.

The child whose short history of mingled sorrow and gladness is here given is the daughter of the well-known Mrs. J. Learmonth, who resides at 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass.

"At ten years of age," said Mrs. Learmonth, "my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack.

"The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk.

CORA LEARMONTH.

"She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"Three bottlefuls entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old and has been well ever since and to-day is a picture of health."

Children are prone to have weak nerves and delicate health. Neglect of a nervous condition, a pale look, a disordered digestion or a general lack of health and vigor in a child may result in fits, St. Vitus' dance, or some other serious nervous disease.

Give your infants and children this glorious children's remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy in the beginning of the disease—when you see them nervous, restless, wakeful, pale, spiritless, without appetite, or with appetite irregular and bowels constipated. It will make their nerves strong, their blood pure, their sleep sound, natural, refreshing. In fact it will make them well and strong.

It is purely vegetable and harmless and all druggists sell it for $1.00. It is the discovery and prescription of a physician, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple place, Boston, Mass., well-known as the most successful specialtist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

MONKEYS' THUMBS.

The hands, the fingers, and, above all, the thumbs belonging to Chico attracted my particular attention. Now you must know that it is because man has a thumb, and for the reason that his thumb is so beautifully jointed, supple and adjustable, that he has been able to overcome all difficulties. The other fingers are all very well in their way, but it is the thumb that controls the real movement of the hand. Without a thumb you never could wield a heavy sledge-hammer or the most delicate of watchmakers' tools. It is not out of the way to say that man is the master, holding every other thing "under his thumb."

Here is a little bit of natural history which must be remembered about monkeys. All the monkeys of the old world have some kind of a thumb. As St. George Mivart, a great zoölogist, writes: "Any old world monkey with a rudimentary thumb (that is, a thumb key even if imperfect) is superior in that respect to an American monkey." In fact, the American monkey has no thumb at all. Nature compensates, in a measure, in our new world monkey by giving him a wonderful tail. This American monkey tail is prehensile. It answers almost the purpose of a fifth limb. A South American monkey gives his tail a hitch around the limb of a tree, and there he hangs quite comfortably, independent of hands or feet.

Chico's thumbs are superb, being fully 4½ inches long. The ordinary length of the human thumb is about 2½ inches. Chico's middle finger is a trifle over 5 inches. Mine is 3½ inches. The ourang-outang's hand was narrow apparently, but I think about the width of that of a human being's, only the sense of proportion was lost, owing to the extreme length of the fingers. The knuckles were small and perfectly in line. The stretch of such a hand as Chico's would be enormous, fully 13 inches. The octave on the piano measures seven inches. If Chico were a pianist he could with little effort cover two octaves, and would leave Paderewski quite in the shade. If Chico had a taste for the double bass, once that those long fingers of his were wound around the neck of a big fiddle, what a wonderful performer he would be, providing the instrument would stand the strain.—Barnett Phillips in Harpers Young People.

TOO MUCH SUNSHINE.

It is seldom wise to go to the woods for trees to be set in the open, either in dooryards or by the roadside. I would much prefer a sugar-maple taken from a pasture or at the edge of a wood, where it had had plenty of sunlight, though it were but two or three feet high, than a ten or twenty foot tree taken from a dense wood.

Every wood chopper knows that a single tree left to stand with all its companions cut away in a wood lot is usually killed or severely injured by the exposure to sunshine. How much more severe the change when the tree is dug up with scarcely any roots and set in the open. Every year I see "bean poles" of maples set by the roadside or upon lawns that never come to anything. One reason the sugar-maple is considered tender is because of the ill-treatment it gets when transplanted. The pole is cut off square at the top and a rotten center is the result. If in good land it may make a fair growth for some years, but it is a weak tree always, and sooner or later breaks down for the want of a sound trunk. All the maples I have set have been young and sound and have continued sound and large. Maple wood rots rapidly when exposed to the weather, and it is not saved by being surrounded in part by live growth. Let the entire tree be well covered by live bark and it will not rot or die young.—New England Farmer.

Unless you understand that in England it is not "second-hand clothes," but "left-off clothes," this sign in a Piccadilly window is startling:

"Mr. and Mrs. Brown have left off clothes of every description, and invite your careful inspection."

A YOUNG ARTIST'S SKETCH.

Little Douglas, though only four years old, has quite an idea of drawing, and makes beautiful carts with four entire wheels visible, and four-legged animals with a leg protruding from each corner. But engines and cars baffle him. He brought his slate to his father one day with this request:—

"Dwaw a wailwood twack with tars wunning on it."

His father did as he was asked, and told Douglas to make a copy of it and show it to him. The little fellow puzzled over this for some time, and finally brought the slate back with his picture, consisting of two parellel lines only, made underneath his father's.

"Yes," said papa, "that's a very nice track, but wher is the train?"

"W'y," said Douglas, "those twains is wacin', and mine's out of sight."—Harper's Bazar.

"The war was responsible for many queer things," said Dr. Eugene Hardeastle, a St. Paul surgeon, now at the Southern. "Up in Northern Minnesota lives a man who entered the service in 1861. He was a very dull fellow, almost a fool. During one of the sorties made by the Confederates at Donelson he received a buckshot in the head. The surgeons could not find it, and the wound healed. He returned to duty one of the brightest men in his company, and in time became second lieutenant. At the close of the war he returned home, married a superior woman, prospered in business and was elected sheriff of his county. Three years ago his head began to give him a great deal of trouble. He came to St. Paul and I located the buckshot and removed it. He is now as healthy as ever, but is the same stupid dolt that he was before the fight at Fort Donelson."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Cut your nails on Monday, cut them for news;
Cut them on Tuesday, a pair of new shoes;
Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for health;
Cut them on Thursday, cut them for wealth;
Cut them on Friday, cut them for woe;
Cut them on Saturday, a journey you'll go;
Cut them on Sunday, you'll cut them for evil,
For all the next week you'll be ruled by the devil.—Philadelphia Times.

GEORGE H. COOK, Newburyport, Mass.

IT CURES! : : : :

MR. GEORGE H. COOK IS A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF NEWBURYPORT, MASS. READ THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT MADE BY OUR REPRESENTATIVE:

On Last February I was taken with "LA GRIPPE" and was confined to my room for four weeks. As soon as I could get up I began using

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

It soon wrought a wonderful change. The "Grip" had left me in a terrible condition—severe pains in back, pains across the back of head. I was so weak I could hardly get up stairs. Two bottles of DANA'S SARSAPARILLA wrought a perfect cure. I would not be without it.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

It Tastes Good

One reason why Scott's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda has had such a large sale is because it is "Almost as palatable as milk;" but the best reason is that its curative properties are unequalled. It cures the cough, supplies the waste of tissues, produces flesh and builds up the entire system.

Scott's Emulsion cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, and all Anaemic and Wasting Diseases. Prevents wasting in children. Almost as palatable as milk. Get only the genuine. Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

Ayer's Pills

Are better known and more generally used than any other cathartic. Sugar-coated, purely vegetable, and free from mercury or any other injurious drug, this is the ideal family medicine. Though prompt and energetic in their action, the use of these pills is attended with only the best results. Their effect is to strengthen and regulate the organic functions, being especially beneficial in the various derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ayer's Pills

are recommended by all the leading physicians and druggists, as the most prompt and effective remedy for billiousness, nausea, costiveness, indigestion, sluggishness of the liver, jaundice, drowsiness, pain in the side, and sick headache; also, to relieve colds, fever, neuralgia, and rheumatism. They are taken with great benefit in chills and diseases peculiar to the South. For travelers, whether by land or sea, are the best and should never be omitted in the outfit. To preserve their medicinal integrity in all climates, they are put up in bottles as well as boxes.

Ayer's Pills

"I have used Ayer's Pills in my Family for several years, and always found them to be a mild and excellent purgative, having a good effect on the liver. It is the best pill used."—FRANK SPILLMAN, Sulphur, Ky. *

The Harvest Moon.

Over fields that were ripe with the sweetness
That hides in the full-tasseled corn,
Over vineyards slow reaching completeness,
Dim purpling at dusk and at morn,
Shine down in thine affluent splendor,
O moon of the year in her prime;
Beam soft, mother-hearted, and tender;
Earth hath not a holier time.

For the seed that slept long in the furrow
Hath wakened to life and to death;
From the grave that was cerement and burrow
Hath risen to passionate breath.
It hath laughed in the sunlight and starlight,
Hath thrilled to the breeze and the dew,
And fallen, to stir in some far night,
And all the old gladness renew.

O moon of the harvest's rich glory,
Thy banners outflame in the sky,
And under the men write the story
That cries to the heavens for reply—
The story of work and endeavor,
Of burden and weakness and strength,
The story that goes on forever,
Through centuries dragging its length.

And thou, ever stately and golden,
Thou moon of the latest year's prime,
What sight though thine eye hath beholden,
No grief to thy pathway may climb,
As over the fields that are ripen,
At evening and level and shorn,
Thou pourest thy splendors that deepen
The rose and the silver of morn.

STORY OF SARAH JENKINS.

She wasn't a pretty girl. Those who liked her best couldn't, with any show of honesty, say that she was. Neither was she young—not as the world defines youth—for she was thirty-two.

She was taller than the average woman, and her figure had none of the symmetry that makes tall women attractive.

Her face was plain. She hadn't even pretty eyes to redeem it; and, as if this were not misfortune enough, her mother had named her Sarah, and that, too, after she had been guilty of marrying a man named Jenkins. Not pretty, not young, and named Sarah Jenkins!

Add to this the fact that she had to earn her own living, and you have a sum total that does not promise well for the heroine of a story. But there is a law of compensation that helps to even up things in this world. This law was observed in the case of Sarah. She had prospects. That was what people said when they looked at her homely face and angular figure, and thought of her toil. For everybody understood that when old John Jenkins died Sarah would not need to work any more; and the possession of a million dollars does more to soften the unbeautiful lines in a girl's face and figure than any tricks of the toilet.

So the world—Sarah's world—was not so sympathetic as it might have been, and as for Sarah herself—well, she wasn't given to sentiment overmuch. Her life had not been of the kind that tends to foster sentiment. Her mother and father had died before she could remember, and her grandfather, with whom she lived, was her only relative.

John Jenkins had likings for people just as he had for houses. He liked both just as long as he could control them profitably. When a house ceased to yield him sufficient revenue to pay for the money invested in it, that house was sold. When people about him ceased to be useful to John Jenkins he simply forgot them and forgot that they existed. His only son had been a disappointment to him because he was not successful in business, and when his father wanted him to marry a rich wife and try to get even with his luck, young John dared to have different views, and married one of his father's clerks.

She made him a good wife enough, but somehow nothing prospered with them. The old man seemed to forget that he had ever had a son, and finally young John gave up the struggle and died. His wife, who was a meek and obedient creature, seeing no other way out of it, died too.

When old John heard of it he said: "I'm not surprised; not a bit. They were too shiftless to live." And then he said not another word, nor did he show any sign of emotion.

Some one wrote to him about the baby, asking what should be done.

"Send her to me," was the old man's answer. "I'll take care of her until she's old enough to take care of herself."

So the baby was sent to her grandfather, and she was taken care of just as were the young animals on his farms. Some one was paid to do it who knew how, and the some one was given this instruction:—

"Let her have plenty of good, plain food—no sweets to ruin her teeth and stomach. Dress her in clothing that is clean and comfortable. No folly, mind. If she is sick, call a doctor. When she is old enough send her to school, and let me hear no more about her."

This course of living suited Sarah well enough. She had no romantic idea that she was being oppressed by a cruel grandfather. She was well housed and fed and decently clad. She was allowed to go to school, and would have been allowed to play, no doubt, but Sarah did not care to play. She was a solemn sort of child. The woman who took care of her said she was stupid. But this was a mistake. Sarah was not stupid.

When she was seventeen years old she went one day to her grandfather's office. They were almost strangers. Sarah had not spoken to him a dozen times in all her life.

"Well," demanded old John Jenkins, "what do you want?"

"You advertised for a business manager," answered Sarah, "and I have come to ask for the place."

"You? What do you know about business?"

"Nothing, practically. Theoretically I know all about it, for I have just completed a business education. I cannot say that I should not make a failure; but I should like to try."

"H'm," grunted old John. "Think you'd like to experiment on me, do you? That's exactly what your father thought. His experiment was not a success."

"Then you don't care to engage me," said the girl.

She had been standing near the door, and now she made a movement to go.

"I didn't say so," snarled the old man. "Sit down a minute. How old are you?"

"Seventeen."

"H'm, yes. Well, when your father was seventeen he—"

"Never mind my father," broke in the girl. "He is out of this entirely. It is not necessary, nor is it in good taste, to discuss his shortcomings. I am the one who is applying for this place. I don't know whether I'm competent to do the work or not. Neither do you until you try me. If you don't wish to try me, I'll look for a place somewhere else."

Old John Jenkins pushed up his glasses and looked at the girl. He had never taken the trouble to observe her before. She wasn't prepossessing. The light-brown hair was brushed straight back from the strong-featured face. Her hat was utterly devoid of trimming and quite unbecoming. Her dress was like the dresses she had worn all her life, made for service, without regard to anything else. Old John's keen eyes took in the tout ensemble of the slim figure before him, and he said to himself: "She's homely enough. There won't be any nonsense about lovers and that sort of thing," and with his usual dispatch he decided to try her.

"You may come next Monday morning at eight o'clock," he said. "That desk will be yours, and the first thing you are to do is to go over the books. If you're going to manage my business, you must get acquainted with it."

"What will you pay me?" asked Sarah.

"Oh, you want to make a bargain, do you? That isn't bad," thought the old man. "I wouldn't wonder if she'd do. I believe she's got some of my meanness in her, and it makes her sharp."

Aloud he said: "How much do you want?"

And Sarah promptly replied: "I want fifty dollars a month until I learn the business, then I want seventy-five up to the end of the first year. After that, if we are both satisfied, we will make a contract."

"Well, you don't hesitate to say what you want, do you?" Here old John Jenkins did what no one had ever known him to do before—he smiled. "Who's to be the judge when you have 'learned the business,' as you call it?" he asked.

"You are," replied the girl. "I have always heard you were honest, and I did not look for injustice."

If Sarah Jenkins had pondered all day she could have said no wiser thing than this, for John Jenkins's pride was in what he was pleased to call his honesty. He had been called hard, and avaricious, and unyielding, but no one had ever said that he was not honest.

"All right, my girl," he said, and his tone had softened somewhat. "You come and try your best, and I'll do the right thing by you."

That was how Sarah Jenkins came to sit at a desk in John Jenkins's office for fifteen years. And then the old man turned his face to the wall and died, leaving his granddaughter everything he possessed, as it had been expected he would do.

Sarah's experience had not been that of the usual girl in a story. Her grandfather, although he appreciated the fact that his business manager was faithful and efficient, did not relent toward her, and become loving and kindly. He was hard, exacting, and wholly unloving to the end. The cockles of his heart were cockles always, and when he was gone Sarah felt a sense of relief. She had never speculated as to what she would do with her grandfather's money when it came to her. She would not allow herself to do so. When the thought presented itself she would say, resolutely: "It is not mine yet. I will wait," and she had waited long and patiently.

On the day that the property was made over to her, Sarah went to the humble boarding-house that had been her home for a long time, and, shutting herself in her room, sat down to think. She looked about the shabby little place. She looked at herself in the glass. And then she looked again at the folded paper which said she was worth a million. She went back over the dull routine of her life. Sarah had reached the age when most women are happy wives and mothers. But, for her, the years had held nothing but hard work. Even the romances of happy lives written in books had not interested her. She had not understood them. All her thought had been concentrated upon her work. That was at an end now, and she realized for the first time that something was missing out of her life. Immediately she missed the something she began vaguely to long for it. Her woman's nature seemed to awake, and with its awakening came to Sarah Jenkins the first really unhappy moments of her life.

She began to compare herself with other women. They had never interested her very much before. But now she seemed, all at once, to keenly realize that they were different from her. She went again to the glass and looked at herself. For the first time it occurred to her that she was very plain; that the dressing of her hair was unbecoming, and that her gown fitted badly and was not like other women's gowns. Sarah did not possess a ribbon or a bit of lace or a jewel. Her room had none of the pretty trinkets with which women like to surround themselves. She stood looking in the glass for five minutes, thinking. Then she put on her hat, went out on the street, and walked straight to one the stores, where she purchased an entire suit of clothing, from hat to gloves.

"I want something handsome," she said to the saleswoman; "something that fits me and is becoming."

This done, she went back to her room, dressed herself in the new things, and then she deliberately placed one after another of her possessions upon the grate fire. Within an hour she had not one solitary thing that she had ever owned before.

She left the house without a word of farewell, and when she reached the sidewalk she stood for a moment wondering where she would go. She had not a friend in the great city. All the people she knew were merely business acquaintances. She had only the clothes she wore and—a million dollars.

It is a matter of wonder, even to those who realize it best, what a miracle may be wrought with money. In three months from the day that Sarah stood in the street with nothing save her inheritance, she was owner and mistress of one of the best appointed houses in New York. There was no lack now of fine dresses and laces and jewels; no lack of people who called, leaving cards and invitations, and no lack of men who were ready to pay court and compliments to her.

These three months had been a revelation to Sarah. It was her first experience with the social world. But her long business training had given her keen insight into things and had taught her to form quick, and nearly always correct, opinions of people.

For the first month she was interested. The second she was bored, and the third she was thoroughly unhappy and dissatisfied. The functions of society she found wearisome. The polite lies that people continually told each other disgusted her. The lightness with which society regarded what she considered crimes shocked her. She found herself longing for something that was genuine and good, and wondering whether anybody was really honest.

This state of things became intolerable to the plain, practical business woman. She thought it all over one night, as she sat alone in her luxurious chamber. It was different, vastly different, from the room where she did her thinking three months before. Was this what she missed then and longed for—to sit alone in the midst of all this splendor and wonder what she should do with herself; to realize that not one of all the new friends who swarmed about her and readily accepted her hospitality really cared a button for her? Could she spend all the years of her life this way? No. She could not and she would not.

Sarah Jenkins arrived at conclusions quickly. Early the next morning she sent for her lawyer.

"I want you to sell this house for me," she said.

"Why," replied the lawyer, "you have only just bought it."

"No matter, I want to sell it."

"Are you going away?"

"No. I am going to buy another house that will suit me better."

"This isn't handsome enough for her," thought the lawyer. "'Put a beggar on horseback—'" Aloud, he said, "Very well, Miss Jenkins, I'll attend to it."

Sarah's next move was to look for her new house. She found it, an unpretentious dwelling in a quiet, side street. She had it put in perfect order, and furnished prettily and neatly, but without a touch of gorgeousness anywhere. Meanwhile the handsome up-town house with all its furnishings had been sold, and one day Sarah walked into the office where she had spent so many years. It was her office now, and her business. She said to the young man who had taken her place:—

"You will take charge of the shipping at the same salary you have now. I will occupy this place hereafter;" and she took off her hat, seated herself at the high stool, and began picking up the threads of the old life just where she had dropped them.

"This is the first happy day I have known for three months," she said to George Howe, the old bookkeeper, as she went out that night. He was a grave, staid man of fifty, who had been with the house for nearly thirty years. No one knew much about him. He said, one Christmas, when asked about his gifts, that there was no one to give him anything.

"Why, asked the inquirer, "haven't you any folks?"

"I have no one in the world but myself," said George Howe, and he turned again to his books.

That was all he had ever said about himself to any one. Indeed, he never said much about anything. During all the years that he had sat in the same office with Sarah Jenkins he had only spoken to her upon matters of business, and she regarded him in very much the same way that she did the big ledger in front of him.

So, when Sarah volunteered the remark concerning her happiness, George was surprised somewhat, but he answered, pleasantly, "It is good to see you back here. I have missed you very much."

All the way home Sarah thought of those words—"I have missed you very much." No one had ever said that to her before. She didn't believe any one had ever missed her. She sat down in her cozy little sitting-room that night, after tea, and indulged in one of her characteristic "thinks." She had tasted the fruit of luxury, and found it of bitter flavor. She had comforted herself by going back to work. So far she was satisfied. But she had also tasted the sweets of human companionship, and now it was not pleasant to think of spending the rest of her life alone. There were plenty of people who would share her home for the sake of sharing her money. She did not want that sort. She thought again of the old bookkeeper. He had said that he had missed her very much and she believed that he meant it. George Howe was not enough skilled in the ways of society folk to say what he did not mean.

Suddenly an idea came to Sarah. She got up and walked to and fro in her room.

"I'll do it, she said, at last. "It wouldn't be the thing for a rich society woman, but for a plain business woman it's all right. Anyway, there's no one to find fault with me if it isn't all right."

The next morning George Howe was sitting at his desk as usual when Sarah came into the office. She went up to him.

"Good morning," said she, and George answered, "Good morning." Then he waited for the orders which he supposed she had come to give.

"You told me last night that you had missed me. Did you mean it?" asked Sarah.

"Why, yes, Miss Sarah; of course I meant it. I have missed you."

"Why have you missed me?"

This was rather straightforward questioning. George was embarrassed and answered awkwardly:—

"Why, I don't know. You were here so long I'd kind of got used to you, and then—well, I always liked you, Miss Sarah."

"You live alone, don't you, George?"

"Yes."

"And you have no relatives?'

"Not one."

"Do you ever get lonesome?"

And then George Howe surprised Sarah Jenkins. He turned toward her with quivering lips and eyes filled with tears.

"Lonesome, Miss Sarah," he said, brokenly, "lonesome? Why, sometimes I'd give a year of my life just to talk to somebody."

"Come over to my house to-night," said Sarah, "and talk to me. I have something to say to you."

"I will come," answered George. And he went.—Margaret Manton Merrill in Frank Leslie's Weekly.

HE LIKED THE OLD-FASHIONED ONES.

A little incident that happened not long since in Harmanus Bleeker Hall caused a deal of smiling among those in the immediate vicinity. A deaf old gentleman, well known and much respected in all circles in the city, and a young lady were the actors. The two were engaged in a sort of conversation. The young lady would say things two or three times to the old gentleman, who would at last hear and answer. One time the young lady, while they were talking about their likes and dislikes, said to the old gentleman in an ordinary tone: "Do you like bananas?" The old gentleman did not catch it, so he smiled and said: "What?" The young lady repeated the question in a slightly louder tone, but still the old gentleman didn't understand. The young lady then bent over close to the ear of the old gentleman and said in a tone that could have been heard four rows away: "Do you like bananas?" The old gentleman seemed to understand, and yet was surprised. He in turn bent over toward the young lady and said to her in quite a loud tone: "No, I like the old-fashioned night-shirts best." A quiet titter went around among those in the immediate vicinity. The young lady blushed furiously at the idea that she had been understood as as asking the old gentleman how he liked the new-fangled pajamas.—Albany Argus.

FIREPROOF WOOD.—A new building material known as xylolithe is being introduced by some Dresden manufacturers. It is composed of a mixture of sawdust and certain chemicals, and is formed into plates under great pressure. Without losing the property of wood, it possesses the hardness of stone, and is practically fireproof, a three-inch cube having failed to take fire or be internally affected when heated in an oven, even to redness, for five hours.—Arkansaw Traveler.

AN PILOSOPHER BORN.—An Indiana maiden four years old was driving along a prairie road with her father and a six-years-old brother. The brother, who is of an anxious turn of mind, was in great distress at the sight of an ox that was calmly devouring a large pile of seed potatoes in the corner of a field. "O, papa, stop," he said. "We ought to tell the people in the house." "Do be still, Buddy," put in his more philosophic sister. "It isn't we ox nor we potatoes."—Chicago Tribune.

A Lie.

She told a lie, a little lie—
It was so small and white.
She said, "It cannot help but die
Before another night."
And then she laughed to see it go,
And thought it was as white as snow.

But oh, the lie! it larger grew,
Nor paused by night or day;
And many watched it as it flew,
And, if it made delay,
Like something that was near to death,
They blew it onward with their breath.

And on its track the mildew fell,
And there were grief and shame.
And many a spotless lily bell
Was shriveled as with flame,
And wings that were so small and white
Were large and strong, and black as night.

One day a woman stood aghast,
And trembled in her place,
For something flying far and fast
Had something smote her in the face—
Something that cried in thunder tone,
"I come! I come! Take back your own!"
—Century.

NOBLEST OF ALL.

Down the track from the depot and about 500 feet away was a cut with banks 20 feet high. On the right hand bank three or four children were playing. There were four or five of us walking the depot platform as we waited for the up train, when a tramp, who had been travelling over the ties, turned in and sat down. Unkempt, dirty, ragged, hungry—a typical specimen of his class. By-and-by he said, speaking to no one in particular:

"Of course, you know what I am, and of course you know what I want. I don't deny being a professional, but I'm human, for all that. Haven't struck any grub since yesterday morning, and it was purty slim then."

He wanted money to buy food. That was plain enough, but no one responded. Whatever is given to a tramp encourages laziness and vice. He was apparently strong and healthy; let him labor for his bread.

"I've got no pitiful story to tell," he continued, not looking at any of us, but yet having all of us in his eye. "I'm simply a tramp—an old hand in the profession. Bin trampin' fur sixteen years. I prefer it to hard work. I'm human, though, as I said before. I can bunk away in a strawstack at night and wear old clothes, but when it comes to hunger I'm like the rest of humanity—can't stand the gnawin' only about so long. If you four gents would shake in a nickel apiece I could get a regular Christmas dinner."

"Look here!" said one of the men as he stopped short in his walk and turned on the wanderer, "don't you know that such men as you ought to be sent to prison and made to earn your food?"

"If they had prisons enough to hold us that might solve the problem," quietly replied the tramp, as he looked down at the toes of his old shoes.

"You are a lazy, shiftless, vicious class," continued the passenger. "Every man ought to have a legal right to h

THE BICYCLE TOURNAMENT.

Good Weather, a Big Crowd, and Exciting Contests.

The managers of the bicycle tournament, held on the grounds of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society Labor Day, must have had some special arrangement with the Fates to have secured all things as favorable as they were to the success of the meet. The day was fine; the weather was almost perfect, the only drawback being a stiff breeze from the northwest part of the time which was trying to the riders while going up the back stretch; the sun shone with all the brilliancy of an early autumn day. All the forenoon the visiting wheelmen and others kept arriving in town, and long before the time advertised for the commencement of the races the crowd began to gather at the grounds. The managers estimated that there were between 2200 and 2300 people on the grounds, which is the largest number ever assembled there. The grand stand was crowded. Everybody was enthusiastic over the occasion, and at times it was a difficult matter to keep the track cleared for the riders. The officers of the day were: F. A. Blodgett of Warren, referee; R. E. Shaw of Monson, S. W. Coe of Ware and A. H. Halford of Ludlow, judges; W. E. Breckenridge of Palmer and F. S. Simes of Warren, timers; J. Sharkey of Chatham, N. Y., starter; W. F. Waite of Palmer, clerk of course; J. W. Breckenridge of Palmer, scorer; R. E. Shaw of Monson, A. H. Halford of Ludlow, F. A. Blodgett of Warren, S. W. Coe of Ware and W. F. Waite of Palmer, executive board. The first event was a one-mile race for Monson riders, in which there were entered Joseph Nobert, Ralph Darling and Fred Lull. At the start the order was Nobert, Lull, Darling; Darling passed the others on the back stretch and kept the lead through the race, winning in 3.05 with Nobert a close second. First prize, gold medal; second prize, silver medal. Next came a one-mile for Palmer riders, F. J. Adams, Henry Barber, M. Scott French, Fred M. Gegenheimer and William Graham being entered. Just before reaching the first turn French slipped a pedal, which threw him in front of Barber, who also was upset. French dropped out but Barber remounted and spurted after the other three. At the half-mile the order was Adams, Gegenheimer, Barber, Graham; Graham soon after obtained the lead, which he held, winning in 3.02, with Barber second and Gegenheimer a close third. Prizes, first, gold medal; second, silver medal. The third event was a one-mile for Ware riders. There were four entries, W. N. Newcomb, William G. Cummings, John F. Gleason and Herbert F. Barnes. The start was somewhat delayed by Barnes's machine having a defective tire, which could not be made to hold air. Another wheel was procured for him and the races went on. Gleason led off at the start, closely followed by Cummings, Newcomb and Barnes; at the quarter it was Newcomb, Gleason, Cummings, Barnes; at the half Gleason had the lead; Cummings spurted up to the head after three-quarters was passed, winning in 3.04, with Gleason second and Newcomb third. Prizes, first, gold medal; second, silver medal. The next event was a one-mile for Warren, with six entries, Chas. P. Webber, A. S. Bennett, Fred P. Wood, Edward Price, Jr., Clarence E. Upham, E. C. Bliss. The lead off was taken by Bennett, closely followed by Upham; at the half it was Wood, Bennett, Price, Webber, Upham, Bliss; the race was won by Webber in 3.04½, Price second and Bliss third. Prizes, first, gold medal; second silver medal. This event was a close one throughout and quite interesting. Ludlow furnished the contestants for the next event of one mile. Seven were entered for this, John Brennan, H. C. Walker, E. D. Tufts, J. B. Henderson, F. W. Sturgiss, Herbert A. King and Howard A. King. The lead was taken at the start by Sturgiss and Henderson; at the half Sturgiss was leading, followed by Herbert King, Walker, Henderson, Brennan, Tufts and Howard King; Walker won in 2.56, Tufts second and Herbert King third. Prizes, first, gold medal; second, silver medal. The delegation present from Ludlow made quite a demonstration when the time of the race was announced, as it was the fastest that had been made during the afternoon. Next was a good exhibition of fancy and trick riding by Allen Atkins of Palmer, who received considerable applause from the audience. This was followed by an exhibition by lady riders. The entries were Mrs. A. E. Craw of Ludlow, Miss Mollie Lewis, Miss Alice E. Darling and Miss Alice King of Monson. The prize, a toilet case, was awarded to the most graceful rider, who was decided to be Miss King of Monson. Five starters appeared for the half mile race for boys under 17 years of age, A. L. Halford of Ludlow, C. P. Webber and F. T. St. Peter of Warren, F. W. Gegenheimer of Bondsville and Ralph Darling of Monson. It was hustle from the start in this event. Gegenheimer set the pace at the start, followed by Halford, St Peter, Darling and Webber. The winner was Webber in 1.22 2-5, St. Peter second and Darling third. Prize, silver medal. Next came the contest between the winners of the first five events for the championship silk banner, but Darling of Monson did not start. This was the slowest race of the day, and came very near being a loafing match. The start was made in this order: Graham, Walker, Cummings, Webber; at the half it was Cummings, Graham, Walker, Webber, and still no hustling; on the last turn Walker made a spurt for the lead which won the banner for Ludlow, and was the occasion of more cheering from the Ludlow faction. Webber came in second and Graham third; time 3.16. Considerable interest was manifested in the next event, the ten-mile race. Seventeen entries were made, and thirteen appeared prepared to start. They were J. B. Henderson, A. E. Craw, H. C. Walker, F. W. Sturgiss, John Brennan, Howard A. King, E. D. Tufts and Herbert A. King of Ludlow, F. P. Wood and E. Price, Jr., of Warren, W. G. Cummings of Ware, Henry Barber of Palmer and Fred Lull of Monson. Barber led for the first three laps with Brennan second. Sturgiss dropped out after the first. Price led in the fourth, with Wood second and Barber third. Craw took the lead in the seventh, Wood second, Brennan third. From this lap a great deal of amusement was occasioned by Lull, who rode tagging along about a quarter of a mile behind the rest. In the eighth Barber took the lead again with Howard A. King second and Wood third. Brennan led in the ninth and tenth with Wood second. In the ninth Lull dropped out. Price was leading in the eleventh with Barber second. Brennan led from the twelfth to the sixteenth. Craw retired in the twelfth and Walker broke a pedal in the thirteenth and dropped out. Henderson held second place from the thirteenth to the sixteenth. Barber led again in the seventeenth with Herbert A. King second. Barber held first place again in the eighteenth and nineteenth with Henderson second. The final half mile was made in 1.19 with Price leading, Howard A. King second and Herbert A. King third. Time, 31.49⅘. Prizes, first gold medal, second silver medal. The last event was a half-mile consolation race with two entries. It was won by C. E. Upham of Warren in 1.27 1-5. Prize, a bicycle watch. Warren riders carried away the greatest number of prizes, four firsts and one second; Ludlow next with two firsts and two seconds; Monson, two firsts and one second; Palmer and Ware, one first and one second each.

FUNERAL OF F. EVERETT SEDGWICK,

Who Was Killed in the Accident at Chester Last Week.

The funeral of Frank Everett Sedgwick, the employe of the American Express Company who met with instantaneous death in the wreck on the Boston and Albany road at Chester last week while in discharge of his duty, was held in St. Paul's Universalist church Sunday afternoon at 2.30, being preceded by prayer at the house of his father, G. F. Sedgwick, on Pleasant street. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Eaton of New York, a former pastor of the church in which the services were held and who lived with Mr. and Mrs. Sedgwick during the first part of his stay in Palmer, and Rev. H. F. Moulton, the present pastor. The church was not large enough to accommodate those who wished to attend. The Royal Arcanum council, of which the deceased was a member, was present in a body, and there were also present 66 of the employes of the express company from points all along the line from Boston to Albany. There were many floral tributes from loving friends, and included a fac-simile of the safe which Mr. Sedgwick had in his charge at the time of the accident, made of hydrangeas and asters, with his number, 293, at the end. This was sent by the expressmen between Boston and Springfield. From the men between Springfield and Albany there was a large and handsome wreath of pinks. From Pittsfield came an anchor of roses, and an elegant basket of roses was the contribution of Conductors Holmes and Curtis, intimate friends of the deceased. The Palmer express office and the men on the New London Northern and Ware River roads sent a pillow, and the Royal Arcanum a Maltese cross. Friends in town sent a pillow and wreath, besides which there were many cut flowers from friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Sedgwick was born in Palmer June 20th, 1862, and was 31 years, three months and eleven days old, having spent his whole life, with the exception of a year in Springfield and the last year and a half in Cambridge, at the home of his parents here. After attending the public schools for a time he was obliged to leave on account of his health, and entered the employ of George Robinson in his hardware business, leaving to attend school once more, though urged strongly by his employer to remain. After leaving [school again he was employed by F. R. Lawton in his clothing store, and as shipping clerk at the wire mill, remaining in each place as long as the business was in existence. About 12 years ago he entered the employ of J. F. Holbrook, who was the agent of both the American and Adams express companies then, being employed in the office and as driver on the delivery team. The American company soon gave him a better place in the office in Springfield, where he remained for a year, returning to Palmer to take the run between Palmer and Winchendon, on the train of which his father was and is conductor. About a year and a half ago he was given a run on the main line of the Boston and Albany road between Boston and Albany, and moved his family to Cambridge. He was a universal favorite with the men along the line, frank and open-hearted, with a kind word and cheery look for all. By the express company he was regarded as one of the most valued men on the road, and perhaps the highest encomium which could be paid him was voiced by Route Agent Robie Wednesday to a JOURNAL reporter in these words: "You can't say too much of him." Not only on the road was he popular, but in his native place he was a favorite with all with whom he came in contact, and every acquaintance, here and elsewhere, will have much sympathy with the father and mother in the loss of their only child, and with Mrs. Sedgwick, who is left with a little son not quite three years old. Mrs. Sedgwick and son will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Sedgwick on Pleasant street.

THE COMING CATTLE SHOW.

What is Being Done for the Entertainment of Those Who Attend.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society have been unusually busy the past few weeks arranging for the 41st annual fair, which takes place the 19th and 20th, and expect to have an exhibition unsurpassed in any previous year. Already several owners of large and choice herds of cattle have promised to have their animals on the grounds the first day, and it is expected that the exhibit of stock will be much larger than ever before. The interior of the upper hall, which has always presented such a barn-like appearance, has been neatly sheathed and will be thoroughly cleaned. Additional shelving has been arranged about the room, and new tables built to be placed across the room, on which will be the merchants' exhibit, nearly every business man in the place having arranged to make a showing of his wares. The track is being put in good shape, and some exciting sport may be expected by the lovers of horse racing. The list of attractions is varied enough to suit a wide divergence of tastes and still keep all interested. For Tuesday there will be the display of cattle and other stock in the forenoon, the animals to remain on the grounds until at least three in the afternoon. In the afternoon comes the members' driving class, in which the one who drives the mile nearest to four minutes wins; the purse being $20; a 2.35 trotting or pacing race for $120, and a 2.45 race for $100. Prince Leo will give a daring performance on a high wire during the afternoon.

Wednesday will be crowded full of attractions. In the morning there will be horses and colts, and care will be taken that the disappointing feature of last year, the departure of the animals so early that visitors who did not arrive until after dinner had no chance to see them, does not occur again, and those who enjoy seeing good horseflesh will be given an opportunity up to at least 3 p. m. In the afternoon the races will be called at 1 o'clock sharp, as there are four trotting and three bicycle races. The greatest interest centers in the colt-stake races, which are three in number, for yearlings, half mile heats, best two in three; for two-years-olds, mile heats, best two in three; three-years-olds, mile heats, best three in five. The fourth race is a free-for-all for a purse of $150. Three bicycle races, for riders within the limits of the society only,—Palmer, Monson, Ludlow, Brimfield, Wilbraham, Hampden, Wales, Holland, Springfield, Belchertown, Ware and Warren,—will no doubt prove interesting, as some good riders are already entered. There will be three prizes in each race. The races are one-mile, with prizes of a sweater, pair of bicycle shoes, two pairs bicycle stockings; five-mile, prizes, $10 order on gent's furnishing goods store, silk umbrella, traveling bag; half-mile for boys under 17, bicycle bell, luggage carrier, repairing outfit. The celebrated Sault Brothers of Monson will at 2 o'clock give an exhibition of heavy weight lifting, juggling with dumbbells weighing 135 pounds. At three o'clock Prince Leo will make a balloon ascension and parachute drop, which all will want to see. The Warren Cornet Band will furnish music.

Members will be admitted free the first day, but should obtain tickets in advance of the secretary. The admission for persons not members will be 25 cents. On the second day the admission for all is 35 cents.

The essayist of the evening was Louis Pope.

Prof. Bristol's troupe of educated horses will give two exhibitions in the opera house to-morrow, afternoon and evening. It is wonderful what a horse can be taught to do, and these seem to do almost everything but speak. There are 18 in the company, and they furnish an entertainment which is truly wonderful, and pleasing to all. Both performances are the same, and parents will do well to take the children in the afternoon and avoid the larger crowds of the evening.

The Palmer base ball nine met the Northamptons on the agricultural grounds last Saturday and suffered defeat by a score of 10 to 6. A good game was put up by both sides. The Palmer boys hardly expected to be able to defeat the Northamptons, who the day before had downed the St. Louis league club 4 to 3, but they did well as it was. Monday our boys went to Southbridge and were defeated in two games by the local club. The score of the morning game was 11 to 3, the afternoon 17 to 5.

Mrs. W. H. Small is now ready to receive pupils in either piano or harmony at her home on Squier street. Mrs. Small has been a pupil of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Maas of Boston for five years, and is highly recommended by them. Dr. Maas was formerly a professor of music at Leipsic, Germany. Mrs. Small has had fine success, and is at present teacher of piano in Boston Fridays, and at Hudson on Saturdays, where she is church organist on Sundays. She will be in Palmer Monday to Friday of each week.

There was a narrow escape from a smashup of teams between Caryl's block and Clark & Hastings's block yesterday afternoon. Clark & Hastings's meat delivery wagon and a two-seated carriage were in between the buildings, and the driver of the meat wagon tried to drive out. In some way the wheels of his wagon became locked between the wheels of the carriage, and the latter was nearly upset. Fortunately the horse attached to the carriage did not run and no damage was done. The vehicles were separated in short order.

The school committee will hold regular meetings on the last Wednesday evening of each month at 7.30. Pay rolls will be made out then, and all bills must be presented before that date. Pay rolls will be made out only at this regular meeting. Supt. Small's office hours are from 6.30 to 7.30 Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from 6.30 to 8.30 Saturday evenings. All school business, calls for certificates, etc., should be done at his office in the high school building during these hours. He is busy in the different schools during the day, and does not want school affairs at his house.

At a session of the probate court held at Springfield Wednesday wills were approved of—Mary L. Shaw, late of Wales, Alvin H. Hubbard administrator; Luther B. Peck, late of Monson, Lucinda Peck executrix; Abigail L. Bridge, late of Wilbraham, M. Wells Bridge executor; Davis Pease, late of Hampden, A. Jackson Blanchard executor. Accounts were filed in the estates of—Polly M. Truden of Monson; Cyrus W. Holmes, Jr., late of Monson; Amasa Harvey, late of Monson; James O. Kendall, late of Ludlow; Sarah R. Smith, late of Monson; Frederick A. Thayer of Brimfield. An inventory was filed in the estate of Thomas Jewett, late of Monson, personal $221. Report of distribution to the widow and next of kin was filed in the estate of Sophia Knowlton, late of Wilbraham.

George Brown was notified last week that a stranger had been seen driving his team away from his farm, which is situated east of Barrett's Junction. Mr. Brown, in company with Deputy Sheriff Northrop, went up to the farm. Here they found that the team, a demijohn of blackberry wine and a large quantity of blueberries preserved in liquor had been taken. After searching the premises they decided to wait and see if the thief would return. About 12 o'clock they were rewarded by the appearance of Mr. Brown's team, in which was the robber so hopelessly inebriated that it would have been impossible for him to escape had he tried. He was found to be Patrick Shea of Bondsville, and was brought before the district court Saturday morning, where he pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny from a building. His case was bound over to the superior court in $600 bonds. As he was unable to get the bonds he was taken to jail.

District Court.

Saturday the following civil entries were made: Maria Hatch vs. Frank Peck and trustee; Charles D. Holbrook vs. C. E. Dewey; George M. Stewart of Wales vs. Leander Fuzzy, et. al., of Monson; Charles L. Gardner vs. John F. Luman of Thorndike; C. S. Sisson of Providence, R. I., vs. John F. Luman of Thorndike, all actions of contract. In the last two cases default was made and executions issued. Patrick Shea of Bondsville was charged with larceny from a building, and entered a plea of guilty. He was bound over to the superior court. As he could not obtain bonds he was sent to jail.—Tuesday Frank Morrison of Northampton paid a fine of $5 for being drunk. —This morning George Bailey, residence no place in particular, was given a year on the state farm at Bridgewater for drunkenness.

No service will be held in the Union Evangelical church next Sunday, on account of Mr. Butler's absence.

Mrs. Ward, of the state primary school at Palmer, spent a few days this week with her sister, Mrs. F. A. Ruggles.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lupin and John Bothwell united with the Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday.

Mr. Holt and Mr. Wright, both of whom came here recently to work in the machine shop at the mill, have gone back to Jewett City, to work there while the mill is shut down.

Julius Davis, who is slightly demented and an inmate of the poor farm at Ware, made an escape from that place one day this week, and was captured at this place by Officer Lavene, who telegraphed to the overseer of the poor at Ware that the man was in custody.

The following clergymen are expected to assist at the camp-meetings which are to be held at Red Bridge during next week: Rev. Mr. Thorndike of Springfield, presiding elder; Rev. Mr. Allen of Belchertown; Rev. J. F. Durgin; Rev. C. M. Hall of Chicopee; Rev. Mr. Fisk and Rev. G. W. Simondson of Ludlow. During the four days two meetings will be held each day, one at 10 o'clock a. m. and one at 2 p. m.

Last Sunday the Baptist church was handsomely decorated, and tokens of welcome were tastefully arranged in honor of the new pastor, Mr. Weeks, who had just commenced his duties in the society. The designs by L. Hodgerney and N. K. Story were especially creditable to the executors, as well as appropriate to the occasion. Mr. Weeks intends to move his family here immediately, and will occupy one of Mr. Powell's tenements.

THORNDIKE.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Bishop of Millbury are visiting here.

Miss Beulah Thayer returned last week from her vacation.

The rain storm of Thursday night was the heaviest that has visited the village this season, and was welcomed by all, as the streets were beginning to be quite dusty.

The merchants are beginning to feel the hard times, and some of them are questioning how long they can stand it without doing themselves permanent injury financially.

Morrill Prescott has recently added an L. to his house on the farm. He has also made several other improvements about his place during the past few months which adds greatly to its value and looks.

The Thorndike Co. is breaking ground for a two-tenement house on the old Packard estate, which is now owned by the company, and will move the house now occupied by Agent Hobbs and convert it into the same.

The game of base ball which was to have been played Wednesday afternoon between the overseers in the mill here and their brethren at Three Rivers did not materialize, for the simple reason that the Three Rivers men did not show up.

That there are some very fast sprinters in this place was proved yesterday afternoon, when a party who were fishing came in contact with a hornets' nest. They went at about a mile a minute gait, but did not run fast enough to escape receiving about a dozen or more stings.

Despite the many weeks the mills have been idle the help in general have showed good patience and are willing to show a little more of it if needed, but it is hoped that the mills will soon start, as there are some who are actually in want, and have been obliged to ask the town to assist them.

Rev. C. H. Hanks, formerly pastor of the Congregational church here, but now of the Eastern Avenue Congregational church of Springfield, has received a call to the first Congregational church at Zanesville, O., and is considering the offer. He has been in Springfield only about two years. Mr. Hanks was on his way home from the World's Fair last week, and stopped over at Niagara, otherwise he would have been on the train which was wrecked at Chester.

Mrs. Richard Russell, Sr., who has been spending the summer at Pontiac, R. I., returned Monday. Her grandson, James Russell, accompanied her home.

The races at Palmer Labor Day drew a large crowd from here. All who attended criticised the arrangements for keeping the crowd off the track. Barber of this place captured the second place in the mile race for Palmer riders. Both of the men who rode from here, and every one else who watched the race say that it was a "fake," and was worse than the jockeying at a horse race.

The game between the Wares and the home team Saturday resulted 11 to 4 in favor of the home team. The game was close and exciting up to the eighth inning. At the beginning of this inning the score stood 3 to 2 in favor of the home team. They got on to O'Connor and batted out five runs in the eighth and three in the ninth, while the Wares could only find Riley for one run in each inning. The features of the game were double plays by Key and Shea, and Slate and Shea, a wonderful catch of a line hit by Slate, and T. Sullivan's home run, this being the longest hit made on the home grounds this year. Riley of Chicopee Falls pitched for the home team.

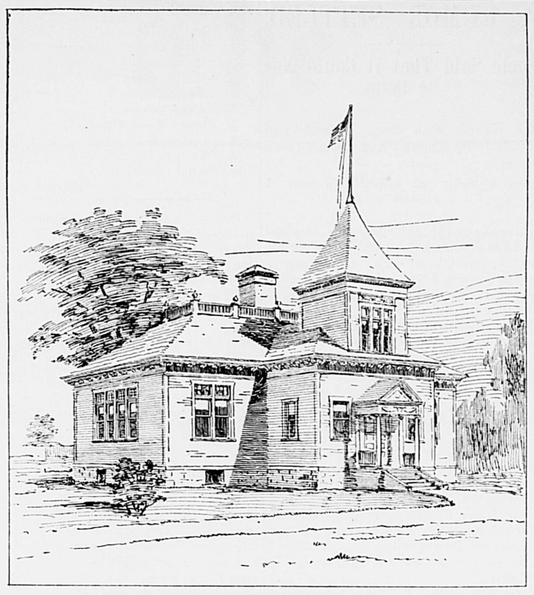
Mrs. Frank Bliss and daughter Ada of Somerville, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leonard for several weeks, have returned home.



MONSON'S NEW SCHOOLHOUSE.

The Academy began its fall term Tuesday with about 100 scholars, and the prospect of several more to come. This is a better record than that of last year.

Miss Mary Fuller, who has been spending the summer at Kalamazoo, Michigan, is now at the World's Fair, and is expected home the latter part of next week.

The selectmen and school committee will meet the 29th to choose a member of the school committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Willard Leach.

The marriage of C. C. Keep and Miss Pearl Beckwith will take place next Wednesday at 6 p. m. at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. F. H. Johnson, on East Hill.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Company has the contract for the stone work for the new schoolhouse on State street, the price being $595, and has the work well under way.

Some malicious person or persons wrenched the faucet from the Cushman fountain Saturday evening, but fortunately it was discovered about 9.30 and the water shut off.

The North British Insurance Company has settled with Mrs. J. Lyons for the damage to her household goods by the recent fire in Reynolds's tenement block, paying her $500.

While the new schoolhouse on State street is being built the scholars which cannot find room in the other buildings are being taught in a room in Day's block, there being 44 of them.

Messrs Felton, Marble, Keeney and Bradway took a bicycle trip to Springfield Monday. The two first mentioned returning covered the distance to Palmer in 65 minutes.

Marble Bacon shows an unusually good yield of potatoes this year, when nearly all the tubers have been hurt or spoiled by and dry weather. His crop is only about 50 bushels, but for size and quality will be hard to beat.

Considerable hail fell during the shower yesterday afternoon, the ground being white in some places and the hailstones as large as small walnuts. After the shower, in a place where the water had not washed them away, one man scooped the hailstones up by the double handsful.

The W. N. Flynt Granite Co., has the contract to furnish the stone for a Roman Catholic church to be built at Brooklyn, N. Y. This is good news for Monson, now that work at the mills is slack. The Granite Co. will keep its men at work much later than usual this season.

Many people attended the races at Palmer Labor Day, and those from Monson who participated in the racing did well. Ralph Darling won the first and Fred Lull the second prizes in the Monson race, and Miss Alice King won the prize for being the most graceful lady rider.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church held a social Wednesday evening. A pleasing entertainment was given, consisting of singing by a quartette composed of Misses Williams and Darling and Messrs. Marble and Osborne, and readings by Miss Amy Easton and Robert Shaw.

The storm of last evening did a great deal of damage. Large trees in Arthur D. Ellis's yard were blown down, a chimney on R. M. Reynolds's house went crashing through the roof, and a large pear tree was uprooted in his front yard, and the town was in darkness for a while so far as electric lights were concerned.

Many Monson people attended the New England Fair at Worcester this week. Much interest was taken in G. C. Flynt's black colt "Sultan," which won the first race he ever started in Wednesday, taking the third, fourth and fifth heats, making the fourth heat in 2.31½. It is understood he can go in 2.20 on a mile track.

Miss Kittie Shoughrue and Arthur Johnson were married at the parochial residence by Rev. John F. Lee Monday evening at 7 o'clock. The bride was prettily gowned in a delicate shade of lady's cloth with lace and swan's down trimming. The couple, upon their return from their bridal tour, will board at Charles H. Tryon's.

A new trick of some of the boys is that of standing in the shady places these dark evenings and exploding large torpedoes about the feet of passersby on the other side of the street and under horses passing in the road. As far as the horses are concerned the practice is a dangerous one, and doubtless pedestrians are not wholly pleased with the idea.

Miss Tower was given a surprise party Thursday evening of this week. After a bountiful repast was served to the many who assembled at the house, the party adjourned to the Granite Cutters' hall, where every thing was in apple pie order and a most enjoyable dance participated in until a late hour. Miss Tower's brother Hugh was master of ceremonies.

The new State street schoolhouse, a cut of which is given above, is to be of wood, two stories high, with a pitched roof surmounted by a balustrade. There will be two school rooms, each 28 by 32 feet, and it is hoped to have the structure ready for occupancy at the beginning of the winter term. Gardner, Pyne & Gardner of Springfield are the architects, and the cost will be about $3500. The contract for the building has not yet been awarded The JOURNAL presents the above cut by the kindness of the Springfield Republican.

Miss Mary Lattimer and Frank P. Williams, the latter formerly of this place, now of South Coventry, Ct., were married at 5 p. m. Wednesday at the home of the bride at South Coventry. The bride was dressed in white bengaline, lace trimmed, and carried a bouquet of white rose buds. They left for Boston that evening, passing through Monson, where they were met by a party of friends and showered with rice. They will visit Monson before their return home. Among the many beautiful presents were a piano, oak chamber set, Brussels carpet and silver. Their house is furnished, and they will go to housekeeping on their return. The Misses Williams of this town attended, and others were invited.

An attachment was placed on a part of the furniture in the Monson House the middle of last week by Boston parties, and another by Ralph Clifford of this place last Saturday. Friday night the goods attached were moved out, but were brought back by Deputy Sheriff Northrop of Palmer Saturday, and W. O. Burnett placed in charge as keeper. Then Landlord McCarthy closed the house and the keys were turned over to Officer Northrop, the house remaining closed until yesterday morning, when arrangements were made to keep it open by Mr. Stevens of Barre, the owner, with J. T. Stevens, Jr., as keeper over the attached furniture. Mr. Stevens hopes to make arrangements soon so as to keep the house open as usual.

It was Tuesday evening and the business places were closed, so a certain young man thought he would call on a couple of ladies of his acquaintance. But it was wofully dark that evening, and not being on the best of terms with the locality he got the wrong house. He was directed where to find the place but again missed connections, and the parties of whom he inquired had never heard of the persons asked for. Nothing daunted he made a third attempt, and this time, though he again failed to get the right place, succeeded in being directed to the house where resided the objects of his search. Drawing a long sigh of relief he rang the bell and prepared to make his best bow on the appearance of either of the fair ones, but "the best-laid plans," etc., neither was at home.

GLENDALE.

Dr. C. F. Edson of New Haven was the guest of Mrs. E. M. Edson this week.

Harry Edson and Herbert Calkins expect to attend the academy at Wilbraham this fall.

The young people have organized a ball club. They played the North Wilbrahams to-day.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Miss Jennie Powers is visiting in Worcester.

Quite a number attended the fair at Worcester this week.

Miss Emma Tracy of Three Rivers is the guest of her uncle, Mr. Brouthers.

Mrs. Sallie Brown of Worcester is spending the week with her brother, Levi Emerson.

A. O. Cobb has completed the hauling of wood from the Brown lot, and removed his teams to Enfield.

Those who attended the bicycle races at Palmer Monday were much pleased at the showing made by Herbert King, formerly of this place.

BELCHERTOWN.

The Grange will hold two meetings a month now instead of one.

The loss by fire on the Dolan property has been adjusted by the payment of $450.

The little daughter of Edwin Peeso broke her collar bone Monday by a fall from a wagon.

The time of holding the reunion of the 46th regiment has been changed from the 25th to the 23d.

While playing ball last Friday H. A. Hopkins slipped and fell, breaking one bone of his leg just above the ankle.

A number of the friends of A. Morse called on him last Friday evening and surprised him by the gift of an oak writing desk.

WALES.

Rev. H. P. Smith held a lawn party on his lawn near Lake Florence Wednesday evening. Chinese lanterns were strung on the trees and verandas, and the windows were illuminated with candles, which made a beautiful sight. Nearly 200 persons gathered. The evening was spent in singing and chatting. Miss Pratt of Springfield was among the guests, and entertained the company with a few of her beautiful songs, which were very much enjoyed. A bountiful collation was served, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

The house of Mrs. Chester Harris was burned, with most of its contents, Sunday morning; supposed to have taken from the chimney, as she had set up a stove Saturday in a s room and burned some paper in it. The chimney had not been used before for several months. The occupants of the house awoke about 5 o'clock, being partly suffocated by smoke, and the rooms on one end of the house were nearly consumed then. Mr. Harris was sleeping over a room that was nearly burned out when he awoke the floor under him being nearly ready to go down. The house was insured for $1700 in the Fitchburg Mutual, and the contents for $500 in another company.

BRIMFIELD.

Fred Gates of North Brookfield is in town.

Miss Alice Ormes is engaged as teacher on Tower Hill.

Miss Jennie Gates is engaged as teacher in West Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shumway and son have returned from the World's Fair.

The road superintendent has filled in Main street from the town hall to the foot of Factory Hill.

Mrs. F. W. Kimball will preside at the organ of the Congregational church during the absence of the regular organist.

Labor Day was very quietly observed, many going to Palmer for the races, others forming picnics and fishing parties.

At the annual meeting of the High Street Aqueduct Company Monday evening these officers were elected: President, Homer A. Tidd; directors, Henry Green, Lovel L. Gage, Homer A. Tidd; treasurer, William H. Skerry; clerk, Frank E. Nichols.

The iron foundry of the Knowles pump works, which had been idle for two weeks, started up again Monday with 44 men. The machine shop, pattern department and brass foundry, which ran on short time for a month and then shut down for a week, started up again Monday on full time with about 125 hands.

WEST WARREN.

Bert Bliss is again at work in Bliss's market.

Mrs. C. Collett died Tuesday after a long illness.

Many French families have moved back to Canada.

Druggist E. T. Hall is clerking in Great Barrington.

Rev. Putnam Webber represented the Epworth League at Ware Monday.

CARD OF THANKS.—We desire to thank our numerous friends for their thoughtfulness of and kindness to us in our sore affliction.

MRS. ELLA SEDGWICK, MR. AND MRS. SEDGWICK.

Palmer, Mass., Sept. 6th, 1893.

A CARD.—The undersigned wish to thank their friends of the S. P. S., also Palmer friends, for the many expressions of sympathy received concerning their recent losses, as well as for their kind and generous gifts. May the Lord ever bless and prosper you is the prayer of MR. AND MRS. E. G. BUSS.

Buckingham's Dye for the whiskers is a popular preparation in one bottle, and colors evenly a brown or black. Any person can easily apply it at home.

To rise in the morning with a bad taste in the mouth and no appetite, indicates that the stomach needs strengthening. For this purpose, there is nothing better than an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills taken at bed time.

In all that goes to strengthen and build up the system weakened by disease and pain, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the superior medicine. It neutralizes the poisons left in the system after diphtheria and scarlet fever, and restores the debilitated patient to perfect health and vigor.

PROGRESS OF SIX YEARS.

ANOTHER BUILDING AND ONE MORE QUADRUPLE PRESS SECURED BY THE BOSTON GLOBE—A GAIN OF 60,000 CIRCULATION IN SIX YEARS.

Another building, covering 3000 feet of ground, has been added to the facilities of the BOSTON GLOBE. Still another new quadruple press has been bought and placed in this new building. Part of the issue of the next SUNDAY GLOBE will be printed on this new press.

When THE GLOBE moved into its new building only six years ago the daily had an average circulation of 121,945, and THE SUNDAY GLOBE 117,747. During the first eight months of this year the daily GLOBE averaged 183,994, and THE SUNDAY GLOBE 167,572. Six years ago THE GLOBE presses could print 78,000 copies an hour; now they can turn out 180,000 copies an hour. Six years ago THE GLOBE used ten tons of paper per day, now it uses 21 tons per day. Such indications of progress do not need any comment.

Leon's Sarsaparilla.

The Kind that Never Fails

Leon's Sarsaparilla Co., Belfast, Me.:

Gentlemen:—Last winter, like many others, I was attacked with the grip, from which I have never fully rallied. I lost my appetite and strength, felt weak in the legs, and was generally "used up." I tried various remedies, but received no benefit therefrom.

A short time since I was induced to try a bottle of Leon's Sarsaparilla, and its effect has been wonderful. I have no weakness in my legs, and my appetite is good, and my general health is improving as rapidly as I could hope for. My improvement has been so marked that my wife, who is troubled with a weak back, is now trying your medicine, feeling confident that it will help her. I take pleasure in recommending Leon's Sarsaparilla to all who are suffering from the grip.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, wind in stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The little white lines are the nerves which convey the nerve force from the nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system is wonderful, as toe thousands of unsolicited testimonials in possession of the company manufacturing the remedy amply prove.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bot. tle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

Scandal.

A woman to the holy father went,
Confession of her sins was her intent;
And so her misdemeanors, great and small,
She faithfully to him rehearsed them all.
And chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a talebearer had been,
And bore a bit of scandal up and down
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.

The holy father for her other sins
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for the rest he pardon gave,
He told her this offense was very grave,
And that to do fit penance she must go
Out to the wayside where the thistles grow,
And gathering the largest, ripest one,
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done
She must come back another day
To tell him, his commands she did obey.

The woman, thinking this a penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night,
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well,
Next day but one she went the priest to tell;
The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said: "There's something still for you to do;
Those little thistle seeds, which you have sown,
I bid you re-gather every one."
The woman said: "But, father, 'twould be in vain
To try to gather up those seeds again;
The winds have scattered them far and wide,
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."
The father answered: "Now I hope that this
The lesson I have taught you shall not miss;
You cannot gather back the scattered seeds
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds;
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown
By any penance be undone."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. ## Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

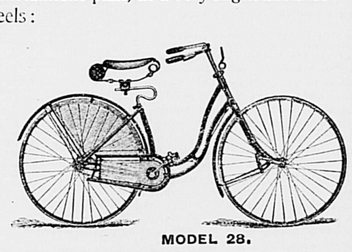
MODEL 27.



MODEL 28.

BEAUTIES, AREN'T THEY?

u can have them with cushion tires at $110 each, or with pneumatic tires at $115 and $125 each, cash, according to the quality of the tires.

The tire on the $125 machine is our best Columbia pneumatic, the best and most expensive tire to manufacture ever used on a bicycle, fully guaranteed against puncture for the year; moreover, we guarantee the whole machine from rim to hub, from handle bar to pedal.

HOW TO GET ONE.

Go to our nearest agent. If you don't know who or where he is, write to us and we will tell you, satisfy him of your honorable intentions and ability to pay, pay $25 in cash and arrange to pay the balance within one year. This is an easy way to possess a bicycle worth two or three of the fourth grade machines which are hawked about in auction rooms. If you wish to take advantage of this offer you should attend to the matter at once, as we have but a few of them.

You are welcome to our catalogue, it is a beautiful little book, beautifully illustrated. Call on our agents for free copy, or send us two two-cent stamps for postage and we will mail it.

BESIEGED BY WATERSPOUTS.

The great four-masted American sailing ship "Shenandoah," while coming home from Liverpool last March, had a lively experience with waterspouts. When within about 500 miles of Sandy Hook the wind suddenly changed, a great bank of clouds just ahead parted, and there, coming down, driven before the gale, appeared six great waterspouts at one time.

One rushed by, just clearing the bowsprit and head-sails by a few yards. Another came at her amidships, threatening to carry the main-mast away, and the captain just avoided it by turning the ship toward and around it. There were two more near ones, and as they were too close to run away from, the big ship was "luffed" up and steered right between them. The ship was saved, but what her fate would have been had she been struck by one can only be imagined from the captain's description of the waterspouts that passed astern. He says they seemed to be fully twenty feet in diameter, and of solid water reaching to the clouds.

During the same month the steamer "Piqua" had a still more uncomfortable experience with these wandering giants of the ocean, near the Bermuda Islands. There she met a cyclone upon whose outer edge there hung a great number of spouts—all dancing and pirouetting here and there, twisting and turning and balancing to partners as if engaged in an elephantine quadrille.

The captain became bewildered, for whichever way he turned his steamer, he was headed off by the surrounding waterspouts. At last, just as he imagined he had steamed safely away, two of them made a rush, headed him off, and struck the starboard side of the steamer's iron bow a tremendous blow. Then there was a commotion indeed. The broken columns of water dropped in tons on the forward deck, smashing the pilot-house and bridge-ladder, tearing down thirteen ventilators, and dashing to the deck two sailors badly wounded. The ship staggered and rolled as the weight of water poured over her sides in a Niagara of foam and spray, and for some time she could make no headway.

While the two spouts were having their frolic with the sorely beset steamer, the others were whirling about as if dancing in glee at the commotion they had caused. From the black clouds above there shot down blinding streaks of lightning, which, although they missed the ship, so filled the air about her with electricity that it settled upon the metal tips of all the spars, glowing and sparkling there steadily with the beautiful light known as "St. Elmo's fire."—July St. Nicholas.

"What a love of a dog!" exclaimed a caller at a Jefferson avenue mansion as a bundle of hair and ribbons trotted into the room.

"Yes, but he's a dreadful care," sighed the mistress of the house, sadly.

"What do you mean?" asked the visitor in surprise.

"Why, you know I bought Bijou in Paris last summer, and he doesn't understand a word of English, so I had a French maid for him all winter, but last June she insisted on marrying some horrid creature, and now we have a French Canadian girl, and she worries me dreadfully."

"Does she abuse him?" asked the visitor indignantly.

"Oh, dear no, she's as kind as can be, but these Canadians speak such poor French—suppose she should ruin Bijou's accent! It makes me sick to think of it!"—Detroit Free Press.

A RED HOT FLY.—It was a very hot day. The dust arose in clouds with every breath of air, yet it was better than the intense heat when the wind did not blow.

Georgie sat by the window, holding a great palm-leaf fan, and trying to keep his temper as well as his body cool.

A great fly came buzzing in at the door that Katie had left open, and Georgie knew that mamma did not allow flies in the house.

So he watched him cautiously until he was still for a moment, then grasped him quickly.

"Oh! oh!" he gasped, letting him go again. "That fly is red hot, mamma! Oh, how he burned!"

The fly was a bee!—Youth's Companion.

A RUMOR SETTLED.

Some Said That it Could Not Be Done.

All Waited With Deep Interest and Breathless Anxiety.

Proved a Mighty and Invincible Conquerer at Last.

A rumor had gained circulation that the well-known Edward T. Feron, Esq., of 507 East 81 street, New York City, was utterly broken down in health, had become unable to attend to his duties and was really in a condition beyond cure.

Over twenty doctors had examined and treated his case, and all were forced to give up and acknowledge that his case was beyond their skill.

Then the remark was made that here was a test case for the great and popular medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is of course a widely known fact that this wonderful remedy rarely if ever fails to cure, but could even its marvellous curative powers restore health in this most serious case?

The Nervura was used and everybody watched its effects with deep interest and almost breathless anxiety.

We will give Mr. Feron's own version of the affair.

"For five years," he said, "I have been running down, gradually losing my health and strength; at last I got very bad and was troubled with pains in my back and around my heart.

MR. EDWARD T. FERON.

"I could not sleep at night. I grew so weak that I was obliged to stop work.

"I had tried more than twenty doctors but they could do me no good, so I gave it up as a bad job.

"Then the great medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was suggested to me, and I took a bottle of it.

"It made me feel so good that I tried one more, and now, after having taken four bottles I am well and strong again. I sleep soundly every night and can work every day.

"I feel so strong that I can do any hard work without feeling any weariness or pain in my back or side.

"I am at a loss to find words to express my thankfulness and gratitude for this wonderful discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I have told my many friends about its wonderful curative powers, and I would not be without it if it cost ten dollars a bottle. I advise people to use it if they want to be cured."

You can get it at any drug store for $1. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and it surely cures. It should be used by all who are ailing, who are weak, tired, nervous, sleepless and run down. It is the best medicine possible to take. It was discovered by Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing chronic and nervous diseases, who can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

STARTING A BALKY HORSE.

An old white horse attached to an empty express wagon balked at the corner of Twenty-sixth street and Broadway the other day and for three-quarters of an hour successfully resisted every attempt to make him move on. The driver belabored him with a whip, tugged at the reins and yelled, but to no purpose. Then a crowd gathered and began to give advice freely. One man seized the horse by the ears, another grasped the bridle and began to pull, while two or three others braced themselves against the animal's hindquarters and tried to push him forward. The creature didn't move a foot. One wise fellow blindfolded the horse with the driver's coat, after which he declared the animal would move right along, but the plan was a dismal failure. Another insisted that if a plug of tobacco were forced into the creature's mouth he would be all right, saying which he thrust a big piece of navy twist between the horse's jaws. The stubborn beast shook the dose from his mouth and remained immovable. Meanwhile the crowd continued to grow, and every newcomer had a plan of his own for solving the problem, which by this time had effectually stopped the movement of vehicles in Broadway for two or three blocks in either direction. The horse was apparently there to stay. The driver was in despair. The four or five policemen who had been drawn to the scene by the gathering crowd looked sheepish and puzzled. A lady who had watched the scene from the window of a neighboring cafe finally turned to the gentleman accompanying her and said: "Go and start that horse. These men never can do it. They don't understand. How shall you do it? Simply take a halter, walk up to the horse quietly and hitch it to his bit ring. Take the other end in your hand, speak to the horse gently but firmly, and lead him away." The gentleman went out and borrowed a hitching strap from a hackman, and the crowd jeered him as he approached the balking horse. He attached the strap to the bit ring as directed, patted the animal kindly on the neck and took the end of the halter in his hand. With a word of command he started to lead the way, and the horse followed as promptly and obediently as if that were exactly what he had been waiting for all the while. The crowd stood back in wonderment and admiration. Some of the superstitious ones declared that the animal had been hypnotized.

"There is no trick about it," explained the little woman laughingly to her friends as the gentleman rejoined the party in the cafe. "With all those half-witted men fooling around him the horse probably felt that he knew as much as they did. What he needed was neither beating, but the presence of a master. To a horse as to other animals the hitching strap, rope or chain is a token of his own subjection. The sight of it will subdue him when all other means have failed. Horses are a good deal like some men—you may lead them easily, but you cannot drive them."—New York Herald.

MUST HAVE SOME COMFORT.—A few years ago the wife of a worthy citizen of Lisbon died. The man was a good-hearted man, but little accustomed to the conventionalities of life and perhaps not possessed of the most brilliant intellect in the world. The funeral of the good woman occurred at the church and the husband was about the only mourner. During the sermon, which was a little long, the man thought he would like a smoke. Accordingly, he repaired to the front steps of the church, lighted his pipe, and was soon taking what comfort he could out of it. Soon a neighbor came along. "What's the matter, John?" he asked. "Lost my wife!" ingubriously. "No!" in surprise. "Yes I have, by gosh. If you don't believe it go in there and see." The neighbor took his word for it.—Bangor Commercial.

TROUBLE BREWING.—"Say, Jimmy," said one small Freeman street boy to his neighbor, in a sepulchrally pleading tone, "please don't sling all them old chicken heads over in our front yard."

"Why not?" was the cold reply.

"Why," said the first, with a suspicious tremble in his tone, "the preacher in our church is in the parlor and if he sees them chicken heads he'll stay to dinner sure—and there's only one pie, and it's got sugar on it, too!"

One touch of nature made the whole world kin, and the chicken heads were not thrown.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

ECONOMICAL JELLY CUPS.—Did any one ever try putting up jelly in egg shells? It is so nice to turn the jelly out on a glass dish moulded this way, especially for a small family when they do not want to open a large glass. I open the eggs at the small end just large enough to get the substance out; wash the shell dry. For a holder for these shells I take a pasteboard box or top and cut holes in them to make the shells fit; set them in and fill. Shells can be saved a long time in advance of jelly-making.—Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

AN EXTENSION OF HELIOGRAPHY.—A striking proof of what can be done with a well managed heliograph line is afforded by the operations that have been carried on over the line from Fort Stanton in Mexico, to Whipple Barracks in Arizona. The line is 1000 miles long, and connects 25 stations, some of which are 45 miles from each other. It is now conclusively proved that the signals from a four-inch mirror can be distinctly read at a distance of ninety-five miles.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE KIND THAT CURES

WILLIAM BURKE, Springfield, Mass.

"It's The Kind That Cures" SAYS WILLIAM BURKE.

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.,

GENTLEMEN:—For the past eight years I have been troubled with Dyspepsia, fearful headaches and a tired feeling constantly, —unable to work most of the time. I was induced to try DANA'S SARSAPARILLA, and after using three bottles I felt better than I had for five years. At times I could not eat for two or three days at a time—now I feel like a new man. My appetite is ravenous—can eat anything. Headache all gone, and I can say I feel entirely cured. I can fully warrant to do all it claims—and to any suffering, I recommend it. Try it and be convinced. "It's the Kind That Cures."

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Yours very truly, WM. BURKE.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine HONDURAS sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is

THE Superior Medicine

Because it is always the same in appearance, flavor, and effect, and, being highly concentrated, only small doses are needed. It is, therefore, the most economical blood purifier in existence. It makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It searches out all impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly by the natural channels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives elasticity to the step, and imparts to the aged and infirm renewed health, strength and vitality.

Lines

[Suggested by the sudden death of Everett Sedgwick. Affectionately dedicated to the afflicted family.]

Afflicted ones, in this your hour of sore bereavement and distress,
Accept the sympathy sincere these lines imperfectly express;
But words are powerless I know to bring your wounded hearts relief,
Words can't portray this bitter hour, nor words unfold the mourners' grief.

'Twas in an unexpected hour his summons came to cross the tide,
The unmistaken blow was dealt that did the tenderest chords divide;
And one so needed and so loved in manhood's usefulness and prime,
Was called without one parting word to loving friends, from scenes of time—

The fond companion of your life; the doating father, cherished son,
The staff on which you all had leaned, the central light, the joy of home;
Without a warning or a tear, or uttering one sweet "good-by,e"
Passed from the circle of his love, from scenes of earth, to scenes on high.

'Twould been a comfort if you could have watched the dear one's dying breath,
And with affection's tenderest care wiped from his brow the damps of death;
Could you have pressed the parting kiss upon those dear and silent lips
And catch the last glance from the eyes now curtained by death's "dark eclipse."

But 'twas denied—yet forms as dear as wife or parent hovered o'er,
And from the "wreck" that fatal day the spirit of your loved one bore;
As life's door closed, the heavenly gates on "golden hinges" opened wide,
And there he waits to welcome you, wife, son and parents, o'er the tide.

But well I know these sorrowing ones yearn wildly for their treasure lost,
Words cannot fathom half their grief, nor tell the agonies it cost;
Words cannot tell the lonely hours and how you'll miss him morn and night,
As summer flowers renew their bloom and seasons speed their annual flight.

I'll crave the Father's richest gifts upon the sorrowing ones descend;
That He will be the Widow's God, the Orphan's father, Parents' friend;
That His rich comfort He'll bestow and all the blessings of His store,
And reunite at last with him, "Not lost, but only gone before."

BROWN'S PARTNER.

"Chihuahua" Brown came to Pyrites when the camp was first started. That was six months before the time of which I write.

Pyrites was a typical mining town or "camp" far up in the Rocky Mountains. It had grown up in six months from one log cabin to a town of 1000 inhabitants. It was a rough, unpretentious town, both as regards its buildings and a large number of its citizens, but under the duck suit of the miner there are more honest hearts, more noble and generous natures, than will be found in almost any other calling in life.

With the rush of miners came a rush of gamblers. Four saloons sprang into existence in a night. Then began the erection of the most commodious and pretentious building in the camp—the Palace dance hall—which was hurried to completion. It looked more like a barn than a palace, but it proved as great an attraction for the feverish wealth and pleasure seeking population of Pyrites as though its walls were of linerusta and its floors of variegated marble.

It is a noticeable fact about a new mining camp that the most high sounding titles are applied to the most common looking structures. The cheapest place always has the grandest name. For instance, tee Delmonico restaurant was the worst of all the eating establishments in Pyrites, and the Windsor hotel offered the poorest accommodations of any hostelry in the place. The St. James livery stable had nothing better in the shape of equines than some broken down stage horses, and the Crystal Grotto saloon was only a board shanty where a five-cent whisky was sold for two bits a drink.

The cleanest, most home-like eating-house in the place was Mrs. McGuire's restaurant. Bridget McGuire was a lively, bustling Irishwoman, with a red face and hair a shade lighter. She was popular with "the boys," as she called the miners who patronized her place. "We can always get plenty on our forks at Mrs. McGuire's," was the usual sentence of praise bestowed upon her establishment.

"Chihuahua" Brown boarded with Mrs. McGuire. He was a quiet, retiring sort of a man. No one knew much about him, except that he once had some mining property near Chihuahua, Mexico. There was another Brown in Pyrites, so he was given the sobriquet of "Chihuahua" to distinguish him from the other Brown. He paid his board promptly and was highly esteemed by Mrs. McGuire, who sometimes spoke of him as "the widow woman's friend" on account of his once having loaned Mrs. McGuire $200 without security when the good-natured Irishwoman first started in business.

Now she was beyond the need of financial assistance, and was doing a flourishing business—such a large business in fact that she had been obliged to send to Denver for additional help to wait upon the table. The "help" duly arrived upon the stage and created a sensation in Pyrites. The first general description was given out by the stage-driver, "Fairplay Bill," to a deeply interested throng of listeners at the Silver Bear saloon.

"She cum upon the stage alongside of me," said Bill. "There was three girls for the dance hall besides. When we got to the first station at Turkey Creek Canyon, she asked if she could ride on the seat with me, she did so admire the scenery. I took her up beside me on the box, and you never heard a girl go on so about the color of the sky, and the trees and rocks, and the wild flowers blooming on the mountain side. She pointed out things to me about the scenery I never see before. I never see a girl so gone on scenery. She really did enjoy it. I got so durned interested hearin' her talk I cum pretty near slidin' the whole outfit down the mountain as I cum around Dead Man's curve. She's different from any biscuit shooter I ever see."

"Purty? She's purtier than that nigh leader o' mine, but she don't put on as much style as Kitty does, 'specially when she's just been hitched up an' anxious to go. Purty? Ever see 'em pictures 'bout a woman raisin' up out the sea? Ever see that picture about Rumyo and Julia? She's a durned sight purtier than either one of 'em. I've carried many a hash slinger in my time, but I never see one like her. Most of 'em have their hair cut short and curly and act fresh. She's different. Long hair, blacker'n a dark night in the canyon; big eyes; roses in her cheeks. She's a lady; that's what she is. I could tell that first time I see her. Guess she was glad to get up on the box with me, away from them dance hall girls. They tried to get fresh with her while she was on the inside—asked her if she thought she could do better in Pyrites than she could in Denver. She said she thought she could, 'cause the wages was better.

"'Wages!' says one girl, with a little cackley laugh like a graveyard. 'That's good; you don't mean to tell me you're going to work for wages?' says she. 'What are you going to do?'

"'I'm goin' to work in Mrs. McGuire's restaurong—just like that—restaurong—waitin' on the table.'

"'You'll soon git over that,' says the dance-house girl, laughin'.

"'I hope so,' says the little lady, 'but I ain't ashamed of any work that's honest,' says she. 'No true woman is above earnin' her own livin' by manuwell labor if necessary,' says the little lady. And then them three dancehouse girls had a chill, and the little lady got up on the box with me at the next station, and during the drive up the canyon she wanted to know if them three ladies were goin' to work in Mrs. McGuire's restaurong, too, an' I durn near fell off the box. I had to throw the silk into the leaders an' kind o' git my attention 'tracted to the hosses before I could git my face straight enuff to tell her 'I guess not.' I'm durned if she ever got on to the fact that them girls inside was dancehall girls. She's a lady, she is."

This was how Doris Ware came to Pyrites to be the "help" at Mrs. McGuire's restaurant. It was not strange that the business of the restaurant increased. Mrs. McGuire's new waiter girl was very, very pretty, and a pretty face is an attraction anywhere, but especially so in a new mining camp, where women constitute a very small minority of the population.

It is not strange either that many of Mrs. McGuire's boarders fell in love with Mrs. McGuire's waitress. There was quite a noticeable sprucing up in the way of general appearance among the boarders. Two or three of "the boys" affected bright colored ties, and when they came to their meals they were particular about washing their faces very clean. They seemed to put more than the usual amount of water on their hair and combed it back slicker than they had been in the habit of doing.

All this seemed to have no effect upon Mrs. McGuire's help. She was as demure, retiring and modest as when she first arrived. There was one boarder who loved the pretty waiter girl with the consuming passion of a secret affection. He scarcely dared raise his eyes to her, he was so diffident. The flutter of her dress was sufficient to cause every nerve in his body to tremble. If she spoke to him he was sure to put a lump of butter in his coffee or sprinkle sugar all over his plate during the ensuing moment of his confusion. This boarder was "Chihuahua" Brown. He was so reserved in his manner, so quiet and gentlemanly that Doris was naturally attracted to him. They became friends, and gradually "Chihuahua" Brown learned of the past life of Doris Ware. Her father had been a man of wealth; he was a speculator. A bad investment had left him almost penniless. He lacked the moral courage to face adversity, and in a moment of desperation and despondency he blew out his brains.

The shock almost killed his wife, a woman of a delicate, nervous temperament. His daughter Doris rose superior to the occasion. She supported her mother from the rather small wages she earned in a store. One day she read an advertisement in a Western paper, "Ten girls wanted for light, easy occupations in the mountains; wages, $25 per week." With such large wages she could comfortably support her mother. The amount was more than twice as much as she had been receiving. She had used her meager savings to come West, only to find that the "light, easy occupation" for which the ten young girls were wanted was to serve beer in a dance hall in Leadville. Being almost without money she took the first place she could get. It was her present one—waitress in Mrs. McGuire's restaurant.

"Chihuahua" determined that the girl should not longer work in the restaurant. But what could he do? There was no other occupation in which she could engage and remain in Pyrites, and he could not bear the thought of sending her away. If she remained in Pyrites without working, it would subject her to foul suspicion and make her a general subject for scandal.

Well, there was one thing which ought to be done, if it could be done.

One September morning "Chihuahua" Brown bade adieu to Pyrites for a short time and went up to his mines on Snowshoe mountain. Before going he laid in a large supply of writing paper, some big, thick pointed pens, a bottle of ink and some blank mining deeds.

The miners working adjoining claims noticed that "Chihuhua" Brown was paler than usual. His manner was less reserved. He was nervous and excited at times. He sat up late at night writing and always concluded by tearing up what he had written. One night when he was thus engaged one of the men working on the night shaft came to the door and yelled:

"Chihuahua! Chihuahua! Come into the mine and look at the stuff we've got in there—we've struck it big."

"Chihuahua" hurried into the mine.

* * * * * *

It was a beautiful September afternoon in Pyrites. The mountains were covered with wild flowers, and here and there the sides of the monster hills had been touched by the frost, transforming verdant hues into purple, crimson and gold. Doris went for a stroll early in the afternoon. She gathered the flowers as she went along, and almost every step revealed some new beauty of the floral kingdom. Her mind was not so much upon the flowers as it was upon him—big, bearded, honest, manly "Chihuahua" Brown. She had received a letter from her mother that morning in which a remittance of $100 was acknowledged. The letter to her mother had been sent by "Chihuahua" Brown, and he had stated therein that the $100 was a part of the proceeds from a mine in which Doris had an interest with him. The money was badly needed by the mother, and her gratitude was almost extravagantly expressed.

Doris strolled on, thinking of the generosity of "Chihuahua," and the secret, delicate method he had taken of showing it.

It was time to return. The shadows began to gather on the mountains, and darkness would soon be upon her.

She started back to the trail; but, alas, there was no trail where she thought it should be. Again she located in her mind's eye the place where she had left the trail in her search for flowers, but there was no trail when she arrived there. It was almost dark. She realized that she was lost. Lost in the mountains, lost in a little basin, with the town of Pyrites just over a small ridge. But this latter fact she did not know.

Higher up in the basin she saw a light. It came from a miner's cabin. She started there. It was very much farther than she thought it was. It seemed at least an hour before she arrived at the little cabin from the windows of which the light streamed out upon the dark mountain. The door was slightly open. Doris knocked. No answer. She entered the cabin.

There was a fire in the stove, for the night was chill. A neat little bunk with clean blankets and coverlid stood in one corner. There was a mining map upon the wall. A bucket of water and a wash-basin were near the door. Candles and miners' candlesticks were stuck in the log crevices. In the center of the room was a table covered with writing paper. On the table was a light that had guided her to the place—a candle stuck in the mouth of an empty bottle.

What was this? A mining deed. Maxwell H. Brown to Doris Ware, a one-half interest in the Goodness Gracious lode.

A letter—she must not read it. Her name? Why, what could this mean?

DEAR MISS DORIS—All my life I have been going it alone, and I'm getting tired of it. I want a pard—a pardner, I mean—and that's you. I took you into pardnership on the Goodness Gracious lode last month. Will you be my pard for life and have a regular warranty deed made out by Parson Wilson? I never was in love till I met you. I don't know how this affair will pan out, but I don't think I'll be able to winter through without you. I know my love ain't worth as much to you as yours is to me, and if you say you will be my wife I'll try and make the bargain even by throwing in the whole Goodness Gracious mine and the Small Potatoes, which is an adjoining claim. Answer me quick. If I don't get an answer, I'm afraid I'll hurt some of the boys, because I don't know what I'm doing half the time. Please marry me—will you? And oblige, yours respectfully,

MAXWELL H. BROWN.

Just as Doris finished reading she heard a step, a heavy step, at the door. She grabbed the pen and wrote in large letters at the bottom of the sheet:

My answer is yes. DORIS.

Some one was bending over her. Some one had seen her write; some one saw that plain, big "Yes," and she was gathered tight in a pair of strong arms and felt a fervent kiss upon her lips.

Another step at the door. It was "Galena" Mike, a miner.

"Chihuahua," he said, "there's an eight-foot vein of that stuff, and it will run at least $1000 to the ton."

"Chihuahua" did not answer Mike, but Doris heard him say:

"I wouldn't give one minute like this for 8,000,000 tons of it."—Richard H. Linthicum, in New York World.

THE PROMISED LAND.

It was in a cove on the Cumberland Mountains that I sat on the doorstep of a mountaineer's cabin in the twilight of a summer's evening and listened to the following:

"Yo' see, stranger," said the mountaineer's wife, as she drew a long whiff from her corncob pipe and gave one of the dogs a kick with her bare foot, "a Mormon elder he cum up yere to lead we 'uns to the promised land. It war way out West somewhar, but he'un had been sent by de Lawd to lead us through the wilderness. Reckon yo've met up with Mormons."

"Yes."

"Got good long tongues. Good on the gab. Git everybody stirred up in no time. People all around yere got stirred up to go to the promised land. He promised every man four or five wives, and the wimmin folks was to sit and sing the praises of the Lawd from mawnin' till night. First I knowed my ole man was hankerin' to go. Then he'un got Bill Raynor and Sam Beebe and Jim Taylor a-itchen fur to dwell in the tents of the Lawd, as he'un called 'em.

"'Lucy,' says my ole man as he sot right yere one night, 'the Lawd is dun a-callin' of me to go, and we'll sell them mewls.'

"'Sam, is the Lawd a-callin' of me, too?'

"'Reckon not. Yo' is too ole to be called.'

"'Has de Lawd dun called Mrs. Beebe or Mrs. Taylor?'

"'Reckon not. They is too ole and humbly to be called to the promised land.'

"'And how about Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Bartlett?'

"'Too ole and humbly. Lawd don't want 'em out thar.'

"'Stranger,' said the woman, as she uttered a chuckle of satisfaction. "I reckon yo' dun see the rabbit in the holler log?"

"According to the elder, the Lord only wanted your husbands, eh?"

"Yo's hit it. They all was packin' up to go when sunthin' happened. The elder was stoppin' up yere at Tom White's. Tom's wife was one of the old and humbly ones the Lawd didn't want. Thar was fo'teen of us. They all met yere about 10 o'clock. See that bresh over thar?"

"Yes."

"Mighty fine place to cut switches. I had 50 cut and ready. We'uns marched up to Tom's and took the elder out of bed and tied him up in the back yard with the clothes line. Powerful scart, he'un was, while Tom was away. Did yo' ever see a messenger from the promised land git a-switchin'?"

"No."

"They'uns heard him holler fur a mile and a half, but thought it was mewls brayin'. We used up thirty switches. He dun lafled and cried and hollered and cussed. He called on the Lawd. He promised us fo' husbands apiece in the promised land. We marched him down to the forks, turned him to the left and everybody giv' him a cut. He'un never did cum back fur his clothes. Reckon he'un's still on the canter."

"And what did the men—your husbands—say?"

"He-he-he! My ole Sam sits right down yere next day and smokes. Bimeby he'un says:

"'Lucy, I dun found out about that call. I thought it was the Lawd a-callin' of me alone to the promised land, but I was mistook. It was Sam Beebe a-callin' of us both to cum over and eat green co'n and coon meat fur dinner. Git on yer bonnet, Lucy.'

"'I'ze too old and humbly, Sam.'

"'No, yer hain't, Lucy—no, yer hain't. I was jest a-lookin' and a-figerin'. You' hain't a day over fo'ty, and yo's the best lookin' woman on all this yere Cumberland tumblification of hills and hollers. Cum on, Lucy!'"

"And so?" I queried after a long pause.

"That's jest all," she replied as she reached for some more tobacco, "jest all, except when my Sam gets a leetle high headed I jest say 'Promised land' to him and he wilts right down like a cabbage leaf in the sun."—Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

LOST IN A CHICAGO WILDERNESS.

The son of a certain well-known business man who resides on Baring street, is telling a little story about his father and mother that is furnishing no little amusement to the friends of the family. It appears that the aforesaid business man, who ordinarily is not unusually absent-minded, engaged rooms before going to Chicago, and made a note of the address at home.

With his wife he found the place all right, and after spending one evening there went to Jackson Park to view the exposition the next day. All went well until the time arrived for going home, when it was discovered that both husband and wife had forgotten the name and number of the place where they had "put up." After some little puzzling they decided to find quarters where they could spend a few hours, and then sent the following telegram:

"J. H. F., Philadelphia—Wire address of house in Chicago where we are stopping. Forgot it.
C. F. F."

Though greatly surprised, J. H. F. quickly sent a reply, and before midnight C. F. F. and his wife found their temporary home.—Philadelphia Call.

The Old Country Road.

Where did it come from and where did it go?
That was the question that puzzled us so
As we waded the dust of the highway that flowed
By the farm, like a river—the old country road.

We stood with our hair sticking up thro' the crown
Of our hats, as the people went up and went down,
And we wished in our hearts, as our eyes fairly glowed,
We could find where it came from—the old country road.

We remember the peddler who came with his pack
Adown the old highway, and never went back;
And we wondered what things he had seen as he strode
From some fabulous place up the old country road.

We remember the stage-driver's look of delight,
And the crack of his whip as he whirled into sight,
And we thought we could read in each glance he bestowed
A tale of strange life up the old country road.

The mowers came by like a ship in full sail
With a rudder behind in the shape of a pail—
With a rollicking crew, and a cow that was towed
With a rope on her horns, down the old country road.

And the gypsies—how well we remember the week
They camped by the old covered bridge, on the creek—
How the neighbors quit work, and the crops were unhoed,
Till the wagons drove off down the country road.

Oh, the top of the hill was the rim of the world,
And the dust of the summer that over it curled
Was the curtain that hid from our sight the abode
Of the fairies that lived up the old country road.

The old country road! I can see it still flow
Down the hill of my dreams, as it did long ago,
And I wish even now I could lay off my load,
And rest by the side of that old country road.

THIS SNAKE WOULDN'T TURN.

In the fall of 1884 I was sent from an Eastern firm to Colorado to superintend the erection of a saw mill to replace an old one which had been destroyed by fire. Every thing went on nicely, and the mill was in running order in about two weeks, with the exception of a counter shaft to run the planer and matcher, which was missing. To send to the factory would take not less than two weeks, and we came to the conclusion to cut a piece off the old line shaft and turn it up ourselves, as we had an old lathe standing next to the boiler and engine.

The weather of the last month was dry and very warm, but at sunset that day a heavy snow storm set in and the thermometer dropped to zero. The next morning we sent our engineer to get one of those old line shafts, but found them covered with snow and ice. At last he succeeded in getting hold of a piece about eight feet long. It measured two inches in diameter, somewhat thicker in the center and tapered at one end. We needed only five feet, so we sent for a sledge and chisel to cut it off the right length. One stroke, and off flew the thin part. I told the men this kind of iron would not do, but the engineer said all iron would break like this in zero weather; it soon would be all right if it came into the lathe next to the boiler. He took the shaft over to the vise and centered the same, and from there to the lathe, put the steady rest in position and tried to turn it to the right side but all in vain. As said above, the lathe was located near the boiler, a warm place. The ice had melted during the time, and the shaft got softer and softer, and the tool would not cut at all.

At this moment the proprietor of the place stepped in, and seeing his man running the lathe, asked him what he was going to do. "I am trying to turn a shaft for our planer, but I never saw a piece of iron like this. First it was as hard as glass, but as soon as it got warm it turned soft, and is getting softer all the time." The proprietor took a step forward just in time to see the two ends drop off the centers, but held in the middle by the steady rest, showing several different colors. The proprietor was an old man and had for many years lived in Colorado, and one glance convinced him that his engineer had taken a frozen rattlesnake for a piece of iron, cut off the tail, and put the balance in the lathe to turn some off for a counter shaft. The snake was not hanging on the rest longer than a minute when it commenced to whirl around to free itself. All the men ran and the snake after them, until somebody killed it with a

Esther C. Fiske.

A life of rare sweetness and usefulness has passed away this week, in the death of Mrs. Esther C. Fiske, wife of the editor of the JOURNAL, which occurred at 8.40 Monday morning, after a long and painful illness. To those who have known her she needs no eulogy, and they who knew her best appreciate, as others cannot, the desolating loss which has come to those who held her dear. Mrs. Fiske was essentially domestic in her tastes, though interested in every good cause, and an active worker in the church of which she was a valued member. But home was her realm, and she made it a haven of restful, perfect peace, happiness and helpfulness. She was thoroughly unselfish. As a daughter she had always been the treasure and comfort of an aged father who survives her. As a wife she was an ideally true helpmeet and blessing in the fullest sense of the words, and there was never the slightest jar in the wonderful unity and devoted love existing between husband and wife. She was tender, loving and wise as a mother; and as a friend was discreet, helpful and inspiring. She was truly a gift from God, and who shall measure the beneficent and far-reaching influence of such a life as hers?

Mrs. Fiske was a native of Ryegate, Vt., the daughter of James and Katharine Cowles, and was the last of a family of three children. In 1859 she married Dr. N. E. Chandler of Rockford, Ill., by whom she had four children, only two of whom are living,—Louis E. Chandler, the active manager of the JOURNAL establishment, and Norman W. Chandler, teller of the Palmer National Bank. Dr. Chandler died in 1872, and Mrs. Chandler married Mr. Fiske in 1878, two children, May and Ruth, resulting from this union.

In December, 1891, Mrs. Fiske had a severe attack of what was supposed to be neuralgia of the stomach, a trouble with which she had been occasionally afflicted. Other attacks had followed ever since, with gradually increasing frequency, and the first of this year a visit to New York specialists confirmed the opinion of the family physician that the trouble was of a cancerous nature. For many months there had been few hours when she was free from suffering, but she was ever patient and cheerful.

The funeral services were held at the late residence of the deceased Wednesday afternoon, Rev. S. T. Frost, pastor of the Baptist church, and Rev. A. W. Weeks of Worcester, the former pastor, officiating, while the Henschel Quartet of Springfield sang "I Cannot Always Trace the Way," "Rock of Ages," and "Gathering Home." At the cemetery Rev. Mr. Weeks read a few passages of Scripture and offered prayer, the quartet sang "Come Unto Me," and loving hands laid the worn body in its final resting place.

The Cattle Show Programme.

Arrangements are nearly completed for the cattle show next Tuesday and Wednesday, and with good weather the managers look for a bigger crowd than has ever been seen on the grounds. Special round-trip rates have been secured for all points between Willimantic and Millers Falls, inclusive, Spencer to Springfield, and from Barre Plains, Gilbertville, Ware and Thorndike. Some of the rates, which include admission to the grounds, are: Warren, 60 cents; West Warren, 55; North Wilbraham, 50; Gilbertville, 75; Ware, 60; Thorndike, 40; Stafford Springs, 85; Monson, 40; Three Rivers, 40; Belchertown, 65. The W. C. T. U. will have an eating tent on the grounds and will provide a good dinner, besides which there will be others in the same line. The afternoon of the second day will be crowded full of attractions, and the races will be called at 1 o'clock sharp. The Warren Cornet Band will furnish music during the afternoon. The programme as arranged is:

TUESDAY, SEPT. 18.

9.00 o'clock a. m.—Meeting of marshals. Gates open to visitors.
9.30 o'clock.—All classes, No. 1 to 14 inclusive, to be ready at call of marshall for judges to act upon.
10.30 o'clock.—Exhibition of draft and farm horses.
11.00 o'clock.—Walking oxen on track.
11.30 o'clock.—Exhibition of oxen and steers on track in line.
12.00 o'clock m.—Dinner.
1.00 o'clock p. m.—Members' trotting class, to trot nearest to 4 minutes, 1 mile heat for a purse of $20.
1.30 o'clock.—High wire walking, etc., by Prince Leo.
2.00 o'clock.—2.45 trotting or pacing class for a purse of $100. 2.35 trotting or pacing class for a purse of $120.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 20.

9.00 o'clock a. m.—Gates open to visitors and meeting of marshals.

A party of gypsy horse traders passed through town yesterday.

John M. Converse has had the fence around his residence repaired this week.

G. E. Buck is to move into his new house on West Main street next week.

James Healey is making extensive repairs and alterations in his blacksmith shop on Thorndike street.

Fred Coleman is driving the express company's delivery team during the absence of Agent Richardson.

W. P. French is employed in Thompson's meat market during the absence of Ezra Kempton on his vacation.

The pulpit at the Second Congregational church will be supplied next Sunday by Rev. George R. Hewitt of West Springfield.

The Republican caucus for the choosing of delegates to the state and other conventions will be held at the town house next Friday evening.

Hitchcock & Blanchard are putting in a steam heater and doing the plumbing in G. E. Buck's newly-purchased house on West Main Street.

L. E. Moore has resigned as administrator of the estate of the late David Knox, and J. Stever Knox has been appointed administrator de bonis non, with the will annexed.

The first initiation of a candidate into the order of the Eastern Star took place at the regular meeting last week Wednesday evening. Several more applications are on file.

Quite a little interest has been manifested among the residents of this village in the bicycle races at Springfield this week. Two hundred tickets were sold from this station.

J. Porter Lynde's block has received a fresh coat of paint this week. Mrs. Mary Connor's house, on the corner of Central and Pleasant streets, has also been touched up by knights of the brush.

The Pullman sleeping car "Lenox," with a party of Norwich people en route for the World's Fair by way of St. Albans, passed north over the New London Northern road this morning.

Rev. A. W. Weeks, formerly pastor of the Baptist church in Palmer, who has recently accepted a charge in Worcester, was given a reception last evening by the people of the church there.

The meeting and sociable of the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Baptist church, which was to have been held Wednesday afternoon and evening, was postponed on account of the funeral of Mrs. C. B. Fiske.

W. E. Stone, the Lawrence Block grocer, is giving a free ticket to the fair next week with every cash purchase amounting to $3 or over. Two tickets with $6 purchases, three tickets with $9 purchases, and so on.

The New London Northern road will have for sale next week excursion tickets to the Willimantic fair Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at $1.50 for the round trip from Palmer, including admission to the grounds.

The pulpit of St. Paul's Universalist church will be supplied next Sunday by Rev. B. F. Eaton, pastor of All Souls' church, of Worcester. Rev. Herbert F. Moulton will preach at the church of the Divine Paternity in New York the same day.

Thomas Blanchard took his mare "Adele" to Sturbridge this week, where she was entered for a race this afternoon. The mare has won every race in which she has started this season,—at Rutland, Vt., Hudson and Chatham, N. Y., and at Pittsfield.

The Westfield Baptist Association will hold its annual meeting with the Highland Baptist church at Springfield next week Wednesday and Thursday. The Baptist church of this village will be represented by five delegates and the pastor.

At the Baptist church next Sabbath morning the pastor will preach upon the subject, "The Power of the Gospel." In the evening at 6 o'clock there will be a meeting for men only. The subject of the service at 7 o'clock will be "Personal Responsibility."

The Tuesday evening class for Bible study at St. Paul's Universalist church was reorganized last Tuesday evening. One of the questions to be considered at the meeting next Tuesday evening will be "If God loves those only who love Him, what better is He than the sinner?" Luke vi:32, 33.

Holden & Fuller's mill shut down Friday night, as the owners do not wish to make goods without orders. It is not certain when work will be resumed, but as soon as orders come in the mill will be started. The proprietors and employes hope the shutdown will not be of long duration.

All the school teachers of the town attended the teacher's meeting at the high school building last Friday. It is a rare thing to have a complete attendance at the meetings. There will be a meeting of the teachers of grades one, two and three to-morrow morning. Superintendent Small reports that all the schools have commenced in good shape.

Bristol's educated horses gave an exhibition Saturday afternoon and evening at Holden's opera house to small audiences. The receipts at the door were too small to pay the rent of the house, so an attachment was placed upon the property of the company to settle the bills. The money was obtained Sunday and the troupe left town in the evening.

It would be a great convenience to strangers visiting this town if a sign was erected at the head of the passage leading from the depot platform to Commercial street, saying that this is the most direct way to the business part of the town. Another sign should be placed at the head of Commercial street to convey the intelligence that the depot can be reached by going down that street.

Another game of base ball is advertised for to-morrow on the agricultural grounds between the Palmers and Ware. This game will be for $100 a side. After the game there will be a half-mile foot race and a 100-yards dash. A purse of $25 awaits the winners. There are so far 16 entries for the foot races, from Warren, Ware, Thorndike, Chicopee Falls, Bondsville, Monson, and other places. The management expects considerable sport from these races.

The Western Massachusetts Universalist Ministerial Association met at St. Paul's church Monday morning. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. T. O. Marvin of Spencer. Rev. Marion Crosley of Springfield delivered an address upon the "Planning of Church Work for the Coming Season." Discussion of the subject followed by Rev. Messrs. Blackford of Monson, Holden of Amherst, Gleason of Warren and Moulton of Palmer. Dinner was served at the Converse House.

The Democratic state committee has announced the number of delegates which each town is entitled to send to the state convention, and the towns in this section fare as follows: Belchertown, 3; Brimfield, 2; Hampden, 2; Holland, 1; Ludlow, 2; Monson, 3; Palmer, 6; Wales, 2; Ware, 6; Wilbraham, 2. The Republican apportionment is: Belchertown, 3; Brimfield, 2; Hampden, 1; Holland, 1; Ludlow, 2; Monson, 4; Palmer, 5; Wales, 2; Ware, 4; Wilbraham, 3.

A successful rehearsal of the comic opera "Wanita" was held at the residence of Dr. W.H. Stowe Tuesday evening, conducted by A. N. Baldwin of Easthampton. The choruses are making good progress, as also those taking the leading parts. Everything points to the presentation next month being one of the most successful amateur efforts ever attempted in the town of Palmer. Another rehearsal was held at Dr. Stowe's house last evening. The next will be held next Tuesday evening at the residence of James B. Shaw.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of St. Paul's Universalist church held its annual meeting Monday evening, and these officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. W. Leach; vice president, Miss Annie Fish; secretary and treasurer, Edwin E. Brooks; executive committee, the pastor, president, vice president, secretary, Miss Clara Moffatt, Miss Marion Paine and Mrs. William French. The officers met at the parsonage Wednesday evening to formulate plans for work during the coming season. After the business was completed they were invited into the dining room, where refreshments were served.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening essays were read by Misses Lottie Bray and Julia Allen. The society will give two prizes to the members who obtain the greatest number of different specimens of the leaves of trees to be found within the limits of the town of Palmer in the next three weeks. The first prize will be a choice of either a copy of the "Shrubs of Northeastern America," by Newhall, or a copy of "Gray's Botany;" second, a copy of Miss Dana's book, "How to Know the Wild Flowers." Six of the members have signified their intention of striving for the prizes. The essayists next week will be Miss Blanche Ramsden and Mrs. B. P. Morse.

A session of the probate court was held at the district court room Wednesday and was adjourned to meet at Springfield at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The following business was transacted relating to parties in this vicinity: Administration granted on the estate of Jennette W. Converse, late of Palmer, Mary W. Studley administratrix. The will of Eliza Fletcher, late of Palmer, W. S. Smith executor, was approved of. An account was rendered in the estate of William Thompson, late of Palmer. License to sell real estate was granted to Charles E., George R. and Hattie M. Booth of Ludlow. Report of commissioners was received in the insolvent estate of William Thompson, late of Palmer.

John B. Connell, well known in this village, was arrested at Springfield Wednesday for trying to obtain goods on false pretenses. It appears that Connell went into a second-hand store and purchased some things, tendering in payment a check for $2 on the Third National Bank, which proved to be worthless. He had attempted to pass checks for small sums in other parts of the city, but with poor success. It is thought that he is a little out of his head. Connell has traveled with Dr. Wilbur of Canton, N. Y., quite a little in the past, and left town a week or more ago with the intention of joining the doctor. He was brought before the police court at Springfield yesterday and his case was continued until to-day.

A west bound freight train on the Boston and Albany road broke apart near the depot early Sunday morning, and the two parts came together near the bridge over the Quaboag river. Four cars were so badly smashed up that they were left here and their contents were transferred to other cars. Several other cars of the train were damaged in a lesser degree. The train hands were pretty well shaken up, but no one was seriously injured. The loss to the railroad company is several thousand dollars. The early trains were somewhat delayed by the accident. The Springfield wrecker came out and assisted in clearing up the debris. The engineer of the train was Joseph Kenerson, who formerly lived in Palmer.

The commissioners appointed to award damages to the owners of the land flowed by the raising of the dam of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company met at Palmer yesterday and viewed the premises. The commission was appointed some six months ago, and consisted of Messrs. Root, Bagg and Brainerd, the land owners signing an agreement to abide by the decision of the commissioners. On the death of Mr. Root, Leonard Clark was appointed to fill the vacancy, and now two of the interested parties are said to be undecided whether to abide by the decision or not, they not having signed an agreement to accept the award of any commission except the one originally appointed. It is not understood that they have any ill feeling toward Mr. Clark, but they think possibly a larger amount might be awarded by a jury. The awards as made yesterday were: J. H. Keith, $150; Mrs. Joseph King, $90; John O'Neil, $350; Jerry Rourke, $200. Two of the above have agreed to accept these sums.

District Court.

On Saturday Thomas Corcoran was put on probation until Sept. 30th for drunkenness. ——Monday, Mrs. George M. Wright of Monson was charged with abandoning her children. Mrs. Wright left home some time ago, leaving three small children. Her better half searched quite a while for her unsuccessfully, but suspected she had gone to live with Charles Crawford, whose abiding place is near Brimfield. Saturday night Deputy Sheriff Northrop found Mrs. Wright at Crawford's and placed her under arrest. When brought into court she entered a plea of nolo, and her case was placed on file, as she agreed to return home. Walter W. Reid, a vagrant, was sent to the reformatory at Concord without stated time.——Tuesday, a man from Three Rivers, who had been exhibiting too much hilarity around town as the result of too liberal indulgence in tanglefoot, was brought up and probated until Sept. 30th. James Kelley of Brimfield, for assault, paid a fine of $5.

State Primary School Notes.

Tommy has come.

The silos are being filled.

Miss Putnam visited the school yesterday.

S. S. Nichols, the farmer of the school, has been quite sick this week.

Mr. Walker was called home Saturday night by the sudden death of his brother.

Over forty of the boys enjoyed the matinee given by Prof. Bristol and his educated horses at the opera house Saturday afternoon. A large number of the officers attended the evening performance.

The boys' club room has been much improved by a coat of paint. Two hanging lamps and two extra tables will be additional features, and will add much to the comfort and convenience of the club.

Jacob Fletcher, an employe of F. J. Wassum, about 20 years ago, now of Westfield, was in town yesterday renewing acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Jason A. Palmer left Saturday night for a Western trip. They will stop at the fair, and will continue their travels as far as California.

Mrs. Hattie Jones, who has been visiting her father, W. B. Ham, returned Wednesday to her home in Brattleboro, Vt. She was accompanied by Mrs. Ham, who will visit in Brattleboro for a couple of weeks.

BONDSVILLE.

A small child of Timothy Lynes is ill with scarlet fever.

John Begaly of Chicopee Falls is visiting John Ricketts.

F. Eaton of Montville visited friends in town this week.

Thomas. Connor of Holyoke is visiting Timothy Quirk.

John Sullivan of Worcester is visiting Mrs. Daniel Sullivan.

Fred Moore and wife visited relatives in Springfield last week.

Miss Hattie Fairbanks of Ware is visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. Moores.

O. W. Sedgwick has returned to Andover, where he is attending school.

William O'Regan visited his sister, Mrs. B. Belcher, at Chicopee this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Carroll and son spent Wednesday with friends in Enfield.

Michael Sullivan has been serious ill the past week, but is slightly better now.

Harry Sedgwick started Wednesday for Chicago for a three weeks, trip to the fair.

The married and single men played the deciding ball game of the series Monday for $5 a side. The single men were victorious, 20 to 11.

Mrs. W. H. Noble has returned from Nova Scotia, where she has been spending the summer. Her father, Mr. Richie, and niece, Miss Edna Richie, are visiting her.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Mary Kane of Somerville is visiting friends here.

Martin F. Hurley of Meriden, Ct., is home for a few days.

Miss Nickerson is visiting her father in Nashua, N. H.

James Heald of Providence is visiting his uncle for a few weeks.

George Mathews and family are visiting in Holyoke for a couple of weeks.

Assistant Postmaster Roche is spending a few days at the White Mountains.

A. M. Bond is laying a pipe and will bring water into his tenement over the store.

Miss Nellie Leary has returned this week from a short stay with friends in Holyoke.

F. E. Walker and family have returned from their vacation with friends in Boston.

The wood work of E. N. Hale's and Eli Dimeaux's new houses will be completed this week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Lyons are happy over the arrival of a baby girl, which came to them on Friday.

The overseers of the mills here and in Three Rivers will play the second ball game of the series here to-morrow.

The Thorndike Co. is laying a pipe from the mill to Pine avenue, in which to convey drinking water to the tenements.

There is some talk of the mills starting up in about two weeks, but whether there is is any truth in the matter or not is yet unknown.

Eugene DeCoto's little girl, who fell some few days ago and broke her arm, is getting along quite comfortably, and her recovery is looked for at an early date.

Agnes, the two-years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Longtine, died on Monday and was buried on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Longtine have the sympathy of many friends in their trouble.

The brass band has been out for practice several times during the week. On Wednesday the members called at O. B. Sikes's farm and gave a few selections. The boys in return were given refreshments.

The voters of this place are discussing the manner in which the Senate is taking hold of the repeal issue, and have come to the conclusion that neither party cares much for the poor people, who are almost starving, and suggest a large cannon firecracker be placed under each senator, in order to make him move.

While a member of a flour firm of Springfield was running to take a train to Palmer one day last week he dropped a large pocketbook filled with money, checks, and other valuable papers. The same was picked up by Frank Leroy of this place, a young boy, who ran to the depot and asked the man if he had lost a pocketbook. After searching a moment the man replied "Yes," whereupon the young fellow presented him with his property. The owner did not seem to appreciate the honesty of the boy, and simply said "Thank you, boy." This same person had a similar experience in Three Rivers only a short time ago, and if he should happen to lose his pocketbook again in this vicinity the chances are that whoever finds it will certainly not waste breath running after the owner.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Clara Brown has accepted a position in a restaurant in Springfield.

Miss Alice Cooley of Springfield visited friends in town Monday.

M. Fosket has taken charge of the station at Leverett, on the N. L. N. railroad.

Mrs. A. H. Newton is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Kendrick.

Arthur Brown caught an eel one evening this week that weighed 4 pounds.

Miss Mary J. Martin is spending a few days' vacation at Mount Nonatuck.

Miss Cora Morse of Belchertown is the guest of Mrs. Percy this week.

Charles Crosby of Brattleboro, Vt., was the guest of F. W. Lavene this week.

Superintendent Small visited the schools here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cole are rejoicing over the advent of a baby boy.

Mr. Powell's new tenement block on Main street is nearing completion.

F. A. Ruggles is building a barn for John Hartnett, adjoining his premises on Main street.

Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Roe of Brooklyn, N. Y., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Talbert.

Mrs. J. J. Carroll and family are away on a month's vacation, to be spent in Maine, among relatives.

Mrs. A. L. Haynes and Mrs. Hall have returned from West Virginia, where they spent the summer.

J. B. Brown and Mr. Dupont, one of his clerks, are doing some harvesting for the former at Amherst.

The family and household effects of the new Baptist minister, Rev. Mr. Weeks, have arrived this week.

Mrs. F. A. Ruggles has some beautiful carnations for sale, which will make very handsome winter plants.

Rev. G. H. Butler, who is spending two weeks at Pigeon Hill, Canada, is expected to return early next week.

A large number from this place attended the grove meetings which were held at Red Bridge during the week.

Miss Della Gage has returned from Laurel Park, where she has been attending campmeetings for several weeks.

Amos Olds, who has been confined to his house by illness for a few weeks, has recovered sufficiently to be out doors again.

A game of base ball is to be played between the overseers of this place and those of Thorndike to-morrow at the latter place.

Mrs. Almon White of Springfield spent the week with her sister, Mrs. J. Burlingame. Mrs. Joy of Newton is now visiting Mrs. Burlingame.

Daniel Hartnett has sold his wood lot to Ned Bond of Bondsville, who is giving employment to a number of the idle hands chopping cord word.

The trotting park that is being made near the French parsonage is progressing rapidly, and horsemen believe it will be superior to Palmer track in many respects.

Gene Sikes, Sr., was much grieved by the loss of his roan mare this week. The animal has been in his possession many years, and did him excellent service during that time.

Mrs. Mason of Springfield and Mrs. C. Davis and family of Willington, Conn., were the guests of Mrs. A. Olds during the week. The former lady returned to her home yesterday.

Miss May Johnston has returned from Boston, Worcester and other important places, where she has attended the autumn opening of the millinery establishments, and now has a fine display of the latest fancy goods in her show window.

Next Sunday is rallying day for the Union Evangelical church Sunday school, and a large attendance is expected. A chorus of 25 voices, with Miss Eva Forte presiding at the organ, besides two violinists and two cornetists, will be sure to render some excellent music. All members of the school have received a cordial invitation to attend on that occassion.

J. F. Twiss did considerable skirmishing Tuesday and Wednesday for a horse which was rented Monday to a young fellow to go to Belchertown. The animal did not return at night, and the next day also failed to produce it. Finally word came that the carriage was in Enfield but that the horse attached was black, while the one which went with the vehicle was bay. Mr. Twiss and Deputy Sheriff Brainerd of Palmer went to Enfield and found that the animal was the one for which they had been searching, the darkness of the spot in which it was hitched having caused their informant to think it was black. It had been left there Monday night, the driver having taken the train for Bellows Falls.

Three Rivers can boast of at least one fast cyclist in the person of Watson Coleman, as may be seen from the following valuable prizes captured by him at the Boston and Waltham bicycle tournaments: At Boston he won a banjo and two medals; at Waltham a racing bicycle valued at $200 and a diamond worth $100. Mr. Coleman never rode on a race course until last spring, and has had little training. He entered for the Springfield races in the 2.25 class and showed up creditably on Hampden Park, coming within a foot of taking third prize, and getting across the tape fourth several times. With these facts in view it would not be surprising if a Three Rivers man in the near future should be a competitor for the world's championship.

3-24 SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

There are many men of wealth whose affairs are so extended or entangled that their estates would be seriously diminished or bankrupt in the event of their sudden death during such a period of financial depression as the present. To such a man a policy for $100,000 or $50,000, issued by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, 120 Broadway, New York—the strongest financial institution of its kind in the world—might prove to be of incalculable value.

By such a man the premium could be readily paid from his income; but in case of accident, $50,000 or $100,000 in cash to his family, or executors, might be worth five times that amount in protecting a large estate from bankruptcy.

Send to the undersigned for full particulars, and for illustrations of Twenty-year Tontine Endowment Policies maturing in the Society in 1893, which show a return in the shape of a cash surrender value TO THE POLICY HOLDER HIMSELF, DURING HIS OWN LIFETIME, of all the principal invested with six per cent interest added.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Beckwith—Keep.

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday at 6 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, when Mrs. Johnson's sister, Miss Pearl Beckwith, was married to Charles C. Keep. The day was perfect and the arrangements were charming. The house was profusely decorated with festoons of evergreen; the mantels were banked with green and studded with white asters. The couple stood in a corner of the parlor against a background of evergreen and under a floral horseshoe. They were attended by little Miss Florence Johnson,—attired in cream serge with silk guimpe and trimmed with lace,—and Master Ralph Rathburn, in black velvet Eton suit,—niece and nephew of bride, who wore a handsome gown of cream China silk, trimmed with thread lace, and carried pink roses. The cermony was performed with a ring by Rev. F. S. Hatch of the Congregational church, of which the pair are members. After congratulations and refreshments, in order to escape the shower of rice which was in waiting for them, the bride descended from a back window by means of a ladder, and with the groom in pursuit bareheaded left for parts unknown. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping at Mr. Keep's "Granite Hill Farm." There were many beautiful presents, among them a half-dozen solid silver spoons and spoon-holder from the girls at the table at which the bride had worked at Heimann & Lichten's, a half-dozen silver fruit knives from her Sunday school class, a chair, pictures, lamps, and various articles of bric-a-brac. Among the guests from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Louis McLaughlin of Stafford Springs, Miss Angie and Calvin Johnson of Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rathburn of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson of Southbridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Bishop of Holyoke.

The Quarry schoolhouse is not yet ready for occupancy.

Academy Notes.

The number of students is about equally divided between the boys (50) and girls (48), a thing which has not occurred before for several years.——Mr. Tufts, so well known to all academy students and graduates, visited the academy Friday and gave the students some excellent advice.——Miss Letha Potter gave a lawn party to several of the students Wednesday afternoon. A very pleasant time is reported.——The old system of seating past graduates and special students by themselves has become a thing of the past; the new principal places them with classes they are nearest in touch with.——A great change has been made in the English work of the school; formerly two teachers gave an hour each day to rhetorical work and essays; now three teachers give the same time.——The library is being made use of much more than formerly; heretofore one of the teachers has been librarian, but now one of the graduates of '92 holds that position and will be in the library from 9 till 11, and from 1.30 till 3. The library is constantly receiving additions.——The addition of a librarian makes the faculty number six, two of whom are graduates, Miss Wing and Miss Smith.——Principal Burke can be found, when wanted, in his room in the front of Hammond Hall, formerly occupied by Prof. Dustan.——The out of town students are in excess of last year's number, and represent Philadelphia, Boston, and many of the smaller towns of Connecticut and Massachusetts, and Bermuda, West Indies.——The first meeting of the Philomathean society was held last Friday and the following officers were chosen: President, Miss Esther Keep, '94; vice president, Miss Grace Cushman, '94; secretary, Miss Gertrude Gage, '96; treasurer, Miss Myrtie Perrin, '95; prudential committee, Miss Florence Deveralt, '94, Miss May Fitzgerald, '94, Miss Mable Tucker, '95. The next meeting will occur this evening.——The young men of the academy have organized a base ball team, choosing Leo. R. Barrows manager and Jerry Shea captain.——The officers chosen at the first meeting of the Linophilean society are: President, Dennis J. McCarthy, P. G., '93; vice president, George H. Stone, '94; secretary, Ephraim B. Flint, '94; treasurer, James Closson, P. G., '93; prudential committee, George W. Brown, '95, W. C. Nelson, '95, F. F. Mooers, '95 The next meeting will be next Friday evening at 7.——The sociable given under the auspices of '94 was well attended, and an enjoyable time was reported.

Eaton—Forth.

About fifty relatives and immediate friends were present at the marriage on Wednesday afternoon of Erdman B. Forth of Springfield and Miss Mary Field Eaton of Ware, which took place at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Eaton, on Pleasant street. Rev. Austin B. Bassett performed the marriage ceremony, assisted by Rev. William F. White, of Trumbull, Ct., a brother-in-law of the bride. Miss Fannie Eaton, the bride's younger sister, acted as bridesmaid, and Charles Forth of Springfield, the groom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Frank G. Fox and Alvan Hyde of Ware. The bride was attired in a beautiful white silk dress, en train, and carried flowers. The rooms were tastefully decorated with cut flowers. The happy couple left on an afternoon train for a short wedding tour, after which their home is to be in Springfield. Miss Eaton was a graduate of the Ware high school and Smith College, and has a host of friends who wish the young couple all possible happiness.

Are You Going

to travel? If so you must be very careful of your health, or your doctor's bill will cost you more than your expenses. A bottle of Sulphur Bitters will protect you from all sickness incident to a change of climate.—Evening Telegram.

Took First Prize.

The state board of pharmacy recently analysed twelve of the most popular medicines in order to see whether they were what they were recommended to be. After two weeks of careful work they awarded the first prize, a gold medal, to Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, it being in their opinion the best and only strictly pure blood purifying medicine in the market.—Weekly Chemist.

Nearly all women have good hair, though many are gray, and few are bald. Hall's Hair Renewer restores the natural color, and thickens the growth of the hair.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

No person should travel without a box of Ayer's Pills. As a safe and speedy remedy for constipation and all irregularities of the stomach and bowels they have no equal, and, being skillfully sugar-coated, are pleasant to take, and long retain their virtues.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

Sufferers from dyspepsia have only themselves to blame if they fail to test the wonderful curative qualities of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, this medicine strengthens every organ of the body, and even the most abused stomach is soon restored to healthy action.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

LEON'S SARSAPARILLA

WILL CURE IT.

Before this Court Adjourns we want the Jury to hear the Testimony of Mr. Moses Morse.

The Kind that Never Fails

For 20 years I have had Rheumatism. During the time I have found it almost impossible to do my farm work, and have been confined to my room for weeks at a time, and I have hardly seen a day without pain. I had tried doctors and medicines almost without number, and I concluded I would give up trying to get better, but one of my neighbors who had been cured, advised me to take Leon's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and before long I began to get straightened out. My pain comfort. I am gain to work with I was once, but not so young as I rode the mowing last summer I machine in the afternoon, and the horse-rake in the boys said I was a pretty good man in haying yet. I know Leon's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine.

Respectfully, MOSES MORSE.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Her Attractions.

She has no dazzling charms, no classic grace,
Nothing, you think, to win men's hearts about her;
Yet, looking at her sweet and gentle face,
I wonder what our lives would be without her.

She has no wish in the great world to shine;
For work outside a woman's sphere, no yearning;
But on the altar of home's sacred shrine
She keeps the fire of pure affection burning.

We tell our griefs into her patient ear;
She whispers "Hope" when days are dark and dreary;
The little children like to have her near,
And run into her open arms when weary.

Her step falls lightly by the sufferer's bed;
Where poverty and care abound she lingers;
And many a weary heart and aching head
Finds gifts of healing in her tender fingers.

She holds a helping hand to those who fall,
Which gently guides them back to paths of duty.
Her kindly eyes, with kindly looks for all,
See in uncomliest souls some hidden beauty.

Her charity would never need embrace;
Too shy and timid, fear not to address her;
With loving tact she rightly fills her place,
While all who know her pray that heaven may bless her.

"Well," she said, with an I-told-you-so air, "if you had been brave and gone up and shot the wretch you would have had your money this morning."

"Possibly, my dear, possibly," he said, gingerly, "but I would have been a widower.'

She laughed softly then and gave half of it back to him.—Detroit Free Press.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Total Number of Prizes for this County, 226.

CAUTION.—No Tags will be received before January 1st, 1894, nor after February 1st, 1894. Each package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tags in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. You can find no tin tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,
THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

GAMECOCK AND RATTLE.

One day last week a tom turkey belonging to Mr. Arnold S. Ormsby, a Krinkle Root Ridge farmer, gobbled so long and noisily in the dooryard just before dinner time that Mrs. Ormsby hastily wiped her hands on her apron and ran out to see what the gobbler meant by making such a racket. She soon discovered that the turkey's noise was caused bo a rattlesnake that lay coiled on the grass, and that the gobbler was dancing around the snake in a state of anger that made his wattles look fiery red. The snake was as cool as a cucumber, Mrs. Ormsby said, but, as the maddened fowl strutted and gobbled around it, the reptile wagged the tip of his tail as though it was getting mad also, blinked at the noisy bird and repeatedly ran out its tongue as if it was trying to say to the turkey: "Don't you dare to come an inch nearer, old fellow!"

Mrs. Ormsby grabbed the gobbler by the tail and flung him over the fence. The rattlesnake bowed its thanks to her, drew in its tongue, stopped wagging its tail and tried to look as innocent and harmless as an angleworm, but its modest manners didn't deceive Mrs. Ormsby a particle, and she immediately trotted into the house and got a kettle of water, intending to give the intruding reptile a hot shower bath.

Just as she reached the doorsteps the tom turkey and one of Mrs. Ormsby's game cocks flew over the dooryard fence and fluttered toward the rattlesnake. The turkey gobbled angrily, and the silent rooster stretched out his neck and glared at the coiled reptile pugnaciously, acting as if he was about to give battle to a creature of his own race. Mrs. Ormsby put down the kettle, got a broom and undertook to shoo the rooster away, but she was not quick enough, for the snake instantly struck at the rooster, and the alert game cock evaded the deadly fangs by jumping up and rapping the rattler on each side of its head with both spurs.

The snake recoiled and struck again with a vengeance, and the agile rooster flew over its head, wheeled like a flash, and jabbed his spurs deep into the back of the rattler's neck just as the snake had coiled up for the third time, following it up with another savage thrust before the astonished reptile had a chance to act. The wounded rattler was unable to coil itself again. It began to writhe so violently that the plucky game cock failed to reach its neck, although he jumped at it three or four times, and it finally jammed its fangs into its own sides repeatedly, and tore about so fiercely that the rooster backed off and eyed it for a moment. The tom turkey continued to gobble threateningly, and the game rooster, seeing that he had completely disabled the rattler, flew upon an oleander bush and crowed lustily. Then Mrs. Ormsby marched out with her kettle, but she didn't waste the hot water, for the snake had stretched out and was lifeless.—Scranton Tribune.

A FINANCIAL SCARE.

"Come hither, men," said Capt. Kidd to the two seamen who carried a cracker-box with much evident difficulty. "Come hither."

As soon as they had done so he took off his broad-brimmed hat, in which he wore a large feather instead of a string, and scanned the horizon. It seemed to be a satisfactory horizon, for he turned with a sigh of relief, and said:

"I think we will put the money in yon river bank."

"But, capting," said one of the men, "the bank is not safe."

"No," said the other," it's liable to collapse under the slightest pressure."

"Peace, fools," said Capt. Kidd, angrily; "at last I have penetrated the secret of your identities. You are the men who go round predicting panics."

Thereupon he took up his mattock and slew them so that no one might be left to tell the tale.

Then he dug a hole himself, deposited his doubloons, wrote himself a receipt and at last accounts the money was there yet.—Washington Star.

Mr. Hardy Times (on his way to the fair)—"Porter, why do they call this train 'the limited?" Porter—"Cause, sah, you ain't 'lowed to gib de portah more'n fo' dollars at any time, sah."—Puck.

A LADY BARBER.

The Gentler Sex the Finest Tonsorial Artists.

The Best Representative of The Art in This Country.

Some Things She Has to Say Which Make Interesting Reading.

If there is anything which a woman is calculated to do better than a man, it is in the care of and attention to the hair. Her natural skill and taste make her preeminently man's superior. This explains the great popularity of Mrs. C. V. Wentworth, who stands easily the foremost tonsorial artist in this country.

Seen at her tonsorial parlors, at 5 Main street, Waterville, Maine, she said:

"I am well and strong again now. For the past two years my health has been so poor I could not do my work, could not walk across the house, in fact. I got so feeble that the best doctors in this city told me that if I went to sleep on my left side I would never wake again.

"I heard of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and thought I would try it, and when I had taken one bottle I was very much better. I have taken four bottles of this remarkable medicine and it has done me more good than any medicine I ever took.

"I am now able to do my work and have gained twenty-five pounds in weight. I cannot say enough in its praise."

MRS. C. V. WENTWORTH.

The singular thing is that all the doctors in the city gave Mrs. Wentworth up as incurable, saying that she could not possibly live. Now that they have seen the wonders performed by this great and wonderful medicine, there is no doubt that they are prescribing and giving Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for every disease. It certainly cures more diseases than any other remedy ever discovered and physicians and druggists are recommending it all over the country as the best of all medicines—the ideal remedy, in fact, to invigorate the blood, strengthen the nerves and start up a healthy action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Use this remedy now and it will make you strong and well—in fact put you in perfect health again. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and druggists keep it for $1.00. It is the prescription and discovery of the famous physician, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, and he can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

THE BEST ROADWAYS IN THE WORLD.

Saxony, if we may credit the unqualified and enthusiastic assertion of Consul Merritt of Chemnitz, has "without doubt the finest system of roads in the world." The kingdom, as is well known, is densely populated. Two centuries ago the Saxon roads were built with wood, like our American corduroy roads. In 1781 a very progressive road law was enacted, which, among other provisions, recognized the right of an owner to compensation whose land was taken to widen a road, provided he had to give up more than "so much as could be seeded with two pecks of Dresden measure." The roads of to-day have a rock substructure of broken stones carefully placed by hand on the smooth and graded roadbed. The rule is to select stones of nearly equal size and place them tightly against each other, each with its largest plain surface downward, to prevent its working loose. Small fragments fill the intervening spaces, and are carefully wedged in and rammed down. Then comes the superstructure, of small, broken stone, as nearly cubical as possible, and from the size of a hen's egg to that of a walnut, depending on the material. The road is then soaked with water, rolled, and finally covered with gravel, which is also rolled. The average of general repairs in state roads is but once in 11 or 12 years, on account of the continuous local repairs. Great care is taken in scraping off mud and removing dust from these country roads.

But it is the trees on the roads of Saxony that most strike and please the American. They make long avenues, stretching for miles, and are well selected and carefully kept. In the year 1890 the sum of 150,622 marks was obtained from the fruit grown on the state roads of Saxony alone, and the income from trees on country roads was greater. The objects in planting trees are said to be primarily to make the road more discernible at night and after snow drifts, and secondarily to afford pleasure and comfort to wayfarers. Hardy fruit trees are chosen, so that when in bloom the roads are particularly charming; but forest trees are substituted where fruit cannot easily be grown, or where, as in very populous places, or near villages, the fruit might be stolen and perhaps damage also done to the trees thereby. When apple trees are planted, "varieties having long stems and lofty tops" are chosen by preference. Among timber trees, ash and maple are favorites, with wild cherry at a distance from villages. When other reasons do not demand closer planting, apple, pear and sweet cherry trees are put 30 to 40 yards apart, and sour cherry trees and plums from seven to nine yards.—New York Sun.

GETTING THE MITTEN.—An old-time New England expression, "getting the mitten," meaning having your offer of marriage rejected by your "best girl," has an origin in the customs of the earlier days. One hundred years ago, gloves were unknown in the country towns. Mittens were knitted and worn in all families. If a young man, going home from singing school with the girl of his choice, was holding her mittened hand to keep it from getting cold, and took that opportunity to urge his suit, if the offer proved acceptable, the hand would remain; if taken by surprise, an effort to withdraw the hand would leave the mitten. So the suitor would "get the mitten, but would not get the hand."

STUB ENDS OF THOUGHT.—Duty is the telescope through which we should look to pick out the way before us.

Obedience is not servility.

The sun can't shine through a broken heart.

Obstinacy is not force of character so much as it is its opposite.

Prudence is the diamond setting in the crown of valor.

A little taffy now and then is relished by the wiser men.

Forgiveness is a rose without a thorn.

Money may buy silks and satins, but not angels' clothes.

Most of our troubles are cowards if we face them bravely.

As a rule when a man "gets even" he wishes he had got something else.

STORIES FOR CHILDREN.

"I wish I were able to write the go-to-sleep stories that are told to the little folks all over the land every night," said a tender-hearted mother the other day. "It makes me positively sad to think of the small brains that are filled with distorted images, hobgoblins, ogres, giants, and the like, just as reason is loosing its hold upon them for several hours. I don't think mothers realize what an influence upon a child's life, and even upon its life after it has ceased to be a child, is exerted by this apparently trifling matter of how it goes to sleep.

"Every night when I watch my little daughter working off the big thoughts that sweep over her brain as the tired body begins to relax, while her mentality seems to be briefly and proportionately stimulated, I tremble to think of the harm that could be done to her or any child—for Mabel is not an abnormal child in any way—by an ignorant nurse or thoughtless parent.

"The fact that every normal child cries out for a bedtime story shows that its mental nature needs it just as its physical nature craves sweets. You want to give your child pure candy, so give him the unadulterated story. Leave out the fearful personalities, the grim and gigantic figures—these, even if they are properly vanquished by the gallant hero, are too distinct for the cribside tale.

"Sit down by your little one's bed, and speak low and evenly. Weave a fanciful but quiet story that tells of pretty fairies and birds and flowers and droning bees and loving little boys and girls—these woo sleep to the weary but still active brain, not with the suffocating pressure of the gathering storm lit with lurid flashes, but with the soft clouds of the sunset horizon that change from rosy pink to tender enveloping gray, and gradually deepen into restful gloom."—New York Times.

JONKS WAS A FOOL.—The National Tribune records the failure of a wit:—

Sawney—"Jonks is a fool!"

Flint—"H'm! Why so?"

Sawney—"At the club last night he said to me: 'I saw a girl to-day whom I met in Genoa last year.' And I said 'Genoa?' And he said, 'That's what I said.' And I said, 'See?' And he said, 'Naw!' and walked off. The fellow is a fool!"

Flint—"H'm! I don't exactly see—"

Sawney—"Why, he said he met her in Genoa, and I said 'Genoa?' And he said—"

Flint—"I know what he said! He said 'Genoa,' and you said 'Genoa,' and he said that was what he had said, and you said—"

Sawney—"He said he met her in Genoa. See? And I said 'Genoa?' 'Yeknow'er? See it now?"

Flint—"U-r-r-r! Yes, I think, myself Jonks acted the fool. He ought to have slain you on the spot."

"INDIGESTION AND Extreme Constipation."

"My Friends Thought I Must Die."

"I AM NOW A CURED MAN."

The following wonderful statement was sent us by C. R. Carpenter, Druggist, 140 Main St., Spencer, Mass.:

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.:

GENTS,—So low was I got by I commenced to fail. INDIGESTION and EXTREME CONSTIPATION caused me to lose flesh very fast. I employed Physicians and tried Sarsaparillas, but continued to grow worse. I had a continuous headache, my skin turned yellow, and my friends thought I must die. My strength left me and courage also. This was my condition last February when I commenced to take

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Before the first bottle was gone, there was a great improvement. My friends wanted to know what caused such a change in me. I replied "DANA'S SARSAPARILLA." I am now taking my third bottle and consider myself at the age of 20, after Doctors had failed, a CURED MAN.

Yours respectfully, J. R. HERSEY.

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Old-Fashioned Flowers.

Where are the sweet old-fashioned posies,
Quaint in form and bright in hue,
Such as grandma gave her lovers,
When she walked the garden through?

Lavender with spikes of azure
Pointing to the dome on high,
Telling thus whence came its color,
Thanking with its breath the sky.

Four-o'clock, with heart upfolding,
When the loving sun had gone,
Streak and strain of cunning crimson
Like the light of early dawn.

Regal lilies, many petalled,
Like the curling drifts of snow,
With their crown of golden anthers
Poised on malachite below.

Morning-glories, tents of purple,
Stretched on tents of creamy white,
Folding up their satin curtains
Inward through the dewy night.

Marigold, with coat of velvet
Streaked with gold and yellow lace,
With its love for summer sunlight
Written on its honest face.

Dainty pink, with feathered petals,
Tinted, curled, and deeply frayed,
With its calyx heart half broken,
On its leaves uplifted laid.

Can't you see them in the garden
Now, where grandma takes her nap,
And cherry-blooms shake softly over
Silver hair and snowy cap?

Will the modern florist's triumph
Look so fair or smell so sweet
As those dear old-fashioned posies,
Blooming round our grandma's feet?"

THE ANGEL'S SEAT.

"Don't forget to have the turkey and other things sent early, dear, so that I may get the most of my preparations through with today, and have only the final touches left over for to-morrow."

Mrs. Willard's cheery face looked over the top of the shining silver coffee pot that stood at her right hand reflecting her features in the most grotesque of variations; but whether lenghtened out to emaciation, or broadened to a ludicrous width, the reflections usually wore the same genial smile of kind-heartedness. That one bit of extravagance was a perpetual delight to her, satisfying her nature as only solid silver could have done. This bright little woman had a weakness for "real things," the indulgence of which her husband's somewhat limited finances restricted.

"I am sure that one enjoys luxuries all the more for having to plan and economize in order to obtain them," she was wont to remark with one of her contagious smiles, and an affirmative nod of her head that carried conviction with it. "Things easily obtained lose much of their importance in one's estimation, you know, and I am confident that those who are in moderately comfortable circumstances get more real enjoyment out of life than those to whom cost signifies nothing."

Mr. Willard came around to his wife's chair, and with one hand on the back of it bent down and kissed her. Though they had been married thirty years their love for each other had not aged a single day, and now their hearts were drawn closer by one great, common sorrow.

"Isn't it a deal of work and worry, dear, just for two of us?" he asked solicitously. "Seeing that you have no help at present, can we not be quite as thankful with our ordinary good dinner as with these extra Thanksgiving dishes?"

"You forget the angel, dear. We must have the regular Thanksgiving dinner, for the angel's sake, and our own, too. I don't think I could be quite happy with any of my usual preparations left undone."

As she spoke of the "angel" their eyes instinctively turned to the third, unoccupied seat at the table. For twenty years their dining-table had neven once been spread without this extra seat prepared for the unexpected guest. The prettiest china, a clean napkin and a fresh bouquet were always at the "angel's" seat, in readiness for the possible guest, and I doubt if the Willards would have relished a meal in their own home with this preparation left undone. It was to them as if a veritable angel occupied the chair, a silent and and perpetual blessing to their home.

"No," answered the husband and the shadow of a memory crept into his eyes—they used to be stern eyes in the old days, whenever he was dispieased, but a great grief had burned all suggestion of sternness out of them—"I have not forgotten the angel, or that it has been our custom to have the seat occupied on feast days if at no other time; but we have scarcely become settled in this strange city, and you have formed no acquaintances as yet, not even a washerwoman. You would hardly care to invite your Chinese laundryman to sit there on Thanksgiving day? I do not see how you are going to manage it in so short a time."

"Nevertheless I will manage it in some way, and the angel's seat will be occupied to-morrow," she returned brightly, adding, "And I shall prepare for my unknown guest as if it was to be my dearest friend. You will send the things early, will you not?"

"Certainly, my dear, since you desire it, and God grant that your kind, unselfish doing for this stranger guest may return to you fraught with rich blessing."

"You always say that or something like it," she laughed brightly. "As if I did not get my recompense in the pleasure these guests afford me, and you know you are as greatly interested in this pretty little conceit of—of—the dear child's—" her voice dropped almost to a whisper, and grew suddenly tremulous with tenderness that choked her utterance so that the sentence remained unfinished, but he knew all that was in her heart to say quite as well as if she had said it.

Bending quickly he drew her head to his bosom and dropped fond kisses of sympathy on her forehead, her eyes and her upraised lips, with all the tenderness of a lover, this man of middle age with the white threads in his hair outnumbering the darker ones, two to one.

Her arms crept up and clasped about his neck. She gave one quick, convulsive sob, and the sigh accompanying it found this plaint:

"O, Richard, if we could only find her, our lost one!"

"Yes, dear, some time we shall," he replied, and hurried away lest he should be tempted to reveal a secret hope that they were very near their daughter in this far west land, and would surely find her soon; but knowing how fallacious are all expectations aside from absolute certainty, he refrained from kindling anticipations that might never be fulfilled.

Yes, there was a shadow in the Willard home. Is there ever a home of thirty years establishment without its shadow, I wonder? The world knew nothing of this secret sorrow, for Mrs. Willard was so bright and cheerful that none suspected the grief close guarded within the chamber of her heart, even her husband was not often permitted to behold its reflection in her face. Ten years her sorrow had been an ever present companion, and yet her eyes looked only laughter and happiness into other eyes. Knowing that human nature turns from gloom and distress, she accepted the inevitable truism:

"Laugh and the world laughs with you, and gave the world an opportunity to share her grief, but extended with lavish generosity the sunshine of joyous unselfishness to all who were so fortunate as to come within her happy influence.
Weep and you weep alone,"

Mrs. Willard did not question her husband's reason for this sudden and unexpected removal to San Francisco. She seldom sought his confidence, well knowing that he would offer it when it was best she should share it with him. When he intormed her that "important matters" called him to California she accepted his assertion without inquiry, and here they were in a sunny little cottage on one of the many hills sloping down to the city's business center. What a delight these hills, and the novelty of them, were to her, lifting every habitation above its neighbor and obstructing the view of none. The complete cable-car system with which San Francisco is so abundantly supplied, obviates the disagreeable features of these numberless hills.

Mrs. Willard finished her breakfast in pensive meditation after her husband's departure. She was usually more deliberate than he, whose business often hurried him; but this morning when she had so many extra duties to perform in order to make ready the dinner for the morrow of which an unknown, and as yet uninvited guest, was to partake, she seemed to have quite forgotten the lapse of time, and lingered at the table even longer than was her custom.

The kitten stretched itself lazily on the rug in front of the grate, without attracting her attention. There was always a kitten in Mrs. Willard's home, a gray kitten with a white ring around its neck, and white feet, when such a one could be obtained, because it was a kitten marked thus that her little Elsie had loved so long ago, and whatever had once been dear to Elsie's heart was sacred in her mother's eyes ever after.

"The little dining-room is very much like the one in the home of Elsie's childhood," she mused, as her eyes wandered about its sunny interior. "It really seems as if she might step in at any moment and give me a regular schoolgirl hug, and then drop down on the rug beside Pattymite." Elsie's kittens had all been named Pattymite, and the name had descended to each of the family cats, irrespective of sex, during the ten years of her absence.

At that moment there came a sharp little ring at the door-bell, and Mrs. Willard hastened to answer it.

There is as much character in the ring of a door-bell as in the clasp of a hand, and the ring of Mr. Willard's door-bell on that particular morning had "business" in the summons.

"He hasn't had time to order the groceries yet, and if he had, they would be delivered at the side entrance," she thought, speculatively.

It was a little fellow, not over nine years of age, who stood on the door-step with a basket on his arm nearly as large as himself. Through the tattered rim of his hat looked a pair of the keenest, widest-awake eyes that Mrs. Willard had ever seen in so small a specimen of humanity; alert, watchful eyes, they were, with clear, honest depths to them that gave you glimpses down into the boy's affectionate heart.

Somehow from the moment her eyes looked into his her motherly heart opened and took him right in, big basket, ragged jacket, tattered hat and all. One might well call it a silent conquest, for as yet he had not spoken, and had actually stepped into her heart and taken possession of it without so much as an introduction; but then, he was just the bright, breezy kind of a boy that people cannot help loving.

The moment that Mrs. Willard appeared at the door his hand flew up to his hat in order to execute a polite bow, which he had practiced before his mother many times; but his thumb shot through the torn place, and he only succeeded in tipping a part of the tattered rim without any visible effect on the remainder of his hat, at which they both laughed, and she drew him into the pleasant dining-room before he had made his errand known.

"The wind blows so cold out of doors this morning," she explained, "and now, my dear, what is it? Are these flowers for sale?"

"Yes, marm, if you are the lady who is going to have an angel dine with her to-morrow," he replied, darting quick, inquisitive glances about the room.

"Who told you about the angel?" she asked, taking notice that the child spoke quite correctly, and seemed a perfect little gentleman.

"A gentleman asked me if my flowers were for sale, and when I told him 'yes,' he said that if I would go to 97 Post street the lady who expected an angel to dine with her to-morrow would buy what flowers she needed of me, and—please, marm, I'm awful curious 'bout the angel. Is it to be a really, truly one?"

He had placed his basket on the rug beside Pattymore on entering the room, and now stood before her as tall as his nine years would permit, his hat in his hand, and his eager young face aglow with curious expectancy.

From the first her empty mother-arms had been aching to get the child into them. She now drew him to her side and said, with a sudden huskiness in her voice:

"Give me a kiss, my dear, and you shall be the angel while I tell you how it came to pass, and all about it."

At which he flung his arms about her neck and kissed her with such impetuosity that she nearly lost her breath.

"There!" he exclaimed, flushed and happy over the experiment.

Mrs. Willard's eyes w. re full of loving light as she placed him in the "angel's seat" at the table, and filled his plate with dainties such as children like best, making two or three flying trips to the pantry for that purpose, and then, while he disposed of the food with a hungry boy's keen relish, she told him of the little girl whom God had sent into her home, nearly thirty years before.

"Have you heard of the Bible story?" she asked in the middle of her recital.

"Yes, indeed, my mamma has told it to me many times," he replied, earnestly, and I am quite well acquainted with Jesus and His disciples, John and Peter, and the others, you know."

"And you have, no doubt, heard of entertaining angels unawares?" she questioned.

"Oh, yes, mamma told me that, too. Are they the kind of angels you en-ter-tain?"

It was a desperate struggle, but he conquered the big word, just as he meant to conquer all the obstacles of life.

"Yes, my dear," she replied, "and this is how we came to start the pretty custom. My little daughter's Sunday school teacher told her the story about entertaining angels, and when she came home she wanted to keep a seat at our table ready for the angel who might come when least expected, for she thought it would not seem respectful if we were not always ready. You are the angel this morning, my dear."

At which the small face grew quite thoughtful.

"I don't believe that I could think a wicked thing to-day after being your angel for a little while this morning," he said earnestly. It makes a fellow feel sort of good all through him to be an angel, doesn't it? Though, perhaps, it's the cake and jam," he added, with honest simplicity. "We don't ever have cake and jam at home, though mamma used to have them every day when she was a little girl. I don't mind so much, because I've roughed it all my life, but it's tough on mamma, 'cause she used to have better things."

"Have you any brothers or sisters?"

"No, marm; there is just mamma and I since papa died. That was last summer, and I do wish that little boys grew faster so that I could be a man to help her more. She wrote a letter to my grandpapa after my papa died, and she did so hope that he would answer it; but she's about discouraged now, it's been so long."

"And you two live alone?"

"Just mamma and I."

"I have a thought, my dear, which I am sure will make us all happy," said Mrs. Willard, with a sudden lighting up of her beautiful eyes. "One of our customs is to always invite some one to fill the angel's seat on feast days, and to-morrow is Thanksgiving; but we have just come to San Francisco and have made no acquaintances as yet. I was wondering how I was to get my guest for to-morrow when you came; but I have thought it all out now. You shall bring your mamma, and she shall sit in the angel's seat; if you think that she will come."

"O, may I bring her here to this pretty room?" he exclaimed in ecstacy of joy. "She will be so glad to come, I know she will."

"And you must come, too," Mrs. Willard added. "We will have two angels for guests to-morrow."

"Thank you," he said gratefully, "it will be the grandest Thanksgiving ever was. What time shall we come?"

"We dine at 2, and you and your mamma must spend the remainder of the day with us," she answered.

"Well, I s'pose I must be going. It's about time for me to get my morning papers." He walked towards the door, then came back, and twirling his hat in his hand said almost, reverently:

"You can't think how much I thank you for letting me sit in the 'angel's seat,' and the cake and — the jam, and— the kiss, too." Flushing rosily he said "Good bye," and before she could have answered him he was gone.

I wonder if selfish people—those who never do a kindly action without first estimating the personal benefits to be derived—realize the pure, unalloyed enjoyment that is the legitimate result of noble generosity.

"The shadow" did not creep into Mrs. Willard's eyes once during that busy day. She sang as her hands employed themselves with the manifold preparations of the morrow's feast. Little simple songs that had been Elsie's favorites kept rising from her heart to her lips, and all the while a picture of a boy's bright, earnest face was before her mental vision.

"I don't often notice the street urchins whom I meet; but this one seemed to demand recognition by his alertness and manliness," remarked Mr. Willard, in explanation as they were seated in their little parlor the next day, waiting for their expected guests. "The moment I looked into his bright, interesting face it occurred to me that he would fill the vacant seat at the table to-day and I must confess that the errand was but a ruse that you might have an opportunity to invite him. There is something wonderfully attractive in the boy's face, don't you think so?"

"Indeed I do. My heart went out to him the moment I saw him." Then as the bell sounded its welcome summons throughout the cottage; "Let me answer it, dear, I want her to feel that I am like an old friend before she meets you."

She ran out to the hall in nervous haste, for though she had entertained many comparative strangers at her table in bygone years this was the first whose name she did not know (having forgotten to ask the boy this important question) and whom she had not met until the dinner hour.

On opening the door Mrs. Willard made the discovery that the slender veiled lady appeared to be uncontrollably agitated and was trembling in every fiber of her body.

Her little son, however, was as bright and engaging as on the day before, and doffing his hat (the rim of which had been neatly mended) he stood bareheaded before his hostess, and introduced his mother thus:

"This is my mamma, and, please, we didn't remember to tell each other's names yesterday, so I can't tell her yours; but I told her all about you, and she says she knows you and has loved you all of her life. When I told her about the 'angel's seat' she cried and was so glad. I don't cry when I'm happy, but mamma—"

He never finished his most original introduction, for just as Mrs. Willard was about to bestow upon her guest a warm kiss of welcome, that trembling little lady threw back her veil, and her intense voice filled the entrance with an out-burst of joy like the loosing of pent-up waters.

"Mother, oh my mother! Do you not know me, Elsie?"

Elsie? Why, of course, it was Elsie, the lost daughter. What reason could have brought Mr. Willard to California, when his business interests were all in Ohio, but for this very purpose? He had not received his daughter's letter, for the reason that he was not in Springfield when it came to the office, being at that time on his way to San Francisco.

The question naturally arises how such kind-hearted parents could have become estranged from their only daughter for ten years. It had all come about in the way that so many such estrangements occur. When young Arnold came courting pretty Elsie Willard her father made inquiries and research into the young man's character and habits, and had discovered that he was a confirmed drunkard. Elsie's father, whose eyes had been stern in the old days, immediately forbade the intimacy and commanded Fred Arnold to cease his attention to Elsie, declaring that she could never become his wife.

Of course her lover persuaded her that her love alone could redeem him from a life of degredation, and, well, the girl was young and easily influenced. Her father sternly commanded, while her lover entreated with passionate fervor, and the girl yielded.

Fred Arnold never forgave Elsie's father for his refusal to consent to that which could only bring unhappiness to his darling and as soon as they were married he removed her to a distant state, where he abandoned himself to his former inebriety, utterly refusing that she should have any communication with her parents. She attempted it once or twice, and he discovered her desire in time to thwart her; but Mr. and Mrs. Willard understood the cause of her long silence, and lived on, hoping that the hard heart would become softened at last.

Mr. Willard had read of his son-in-law's death in a San Francisco paper, and his removal to that city was for the express purpose of finding his daughter. He had not succeeded as he hoped, and only the day before had engaged assistance in his search, which might have proved a tedious and expensive undertaking but for the continuance of that "kindly thought for others," which Elsie's thought had established, and which her parents had kept in remembrance ever since.

The surprise and delight of that first moment of reunion cannot be described, for the actors were all too much confused with unexpected happiness to recall events clearly. Elsie was the only one at all prepared for the revelation, and no amount of preparation could calm her excited nerves. As for Richie Arnold, he thought for one moment that everybody had "gone crazy" as he afterward expressed it; but when matters were explained to him he was the most emphatic of all in his noisy approval. The Thanksgiving dinner was quite cold before they remembered why they were assembled there, and for some reason everyone, except Richie, seemed to have lost all desire for food. There is such a thing as dining on happiness until there is room for nothing else.

Mr. Willard avers that he recognized his grandson by intuition, and Richie declares that if he had a whole world full of grandmothers from which to choose he could not find a better one than his "very own."—Rose Hartwick Thorpe in Detroit Free Press.

THE DEVIL PLANT.

There has recently appeared in the vicinity of Carthage, Miss., a most peculiar growth known as the "devil plant," which is so deadly as to render all insect life and vegetation in its neighborhood lifeless. It is most innocent in appearance, being a tender green, clinging close to the earth and sprinkled with small red blossoms, cup-shaped, and holding in their hearts a single drop of moisture. It is in this singular dew, which the sun has no power to dispel, that the plant's most blighting influence is said to lie. Bees by the hundreds have been found dead in these blossoms; indeed, the hives of the neighborhood are nearly depopulated by these noxious flowers. A gentleman who is noted as a botanist in these parts tasted this dew, and declared that it was of a sickening sweetness, without odor, and viscid like liquid gum. It was allowed to dwell on his tongue, which soon began to burn him so as to raise a blister, and the member swelled up and became discolored and exceedingly painful.

The bees have not been the only sufferers by this growth, but every insect approaching it seems to become paralyzed and, after a beat or two of the wings above this creeping upas, drops down among its leaves. Cattle which have eaten of it die in a few hours in the greatest agony, with a sort of exaggerated tetanus, the skin drawn tense and the eyes protruding from the head. All ordinary remedies fail to restore one in these attacks. Vegetation also seems to shun the "devil plant" and whole tracts of meadow are now lying scorched and dead from the invidious approach of this unknown growth. Under the microscope the leaves exhibit innumerable little mouths or suckers, of such tenacity as to sting the hand on which the leaf is laid, leaving a dull, red mark like the wound of a scorpion. The people of the vicinity say this plant is a forerunner of disaster, it having made a previous appearance just before the outbreak of the war, and on each occasion of the coming of yellow fever,

An effort is being made to burn it out, but, protected by its singular dew, this has failed. The dead bodies of cattle which have died of eating it on being examined show that the digestive organs are swollen to four times their natural size, and look as if they had been burned; the heart is congested and the blood of a dark, unusual tinge, with an odor like benzoin. The plant is of rapid growth, covering acres in a few days, requiring little hold, and going over every obstacle in its way, the roots being of thread-like fineness, and extending only an inch or two below the surface of the ground, but exhibiting extraordinary tenacity once they have seized hold of a spot, enwrapping pebbles, old roots, etc., like clinging fingers.—Philadelphia Times.

A STORY OF THE WAR.

"I suppose I never told you I was in the war?" began the man with the ginger beard.

The grocer 'lowed, by gimini, that that was one of the few things the man with the ginger beard hadn't told him yet.

A MOST SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

THE FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL EXHIBITION

Of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society the Best in its History.—The Largest Showing of Cattle Ever on the Grounds.—Many Fine Horses the Second Day.—Both Upper and Lower Halls Well Filled.—Increased Exhibits in All Departments.

The managers of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society have reason to congratulate themselves on the success of their last cattle show. After the poor exhibit and slim attendance of last year some were fearful that the society was losing ground, but it has been proved that with good attractions and liberal advertising the Palmer cattle show will still draw a crowd, and many from long distances, as was evidenced by the admission coupons taken from the round-trip tickets sold on the railroads. The only hitch in the whole proceedings was the failure of the balloon to go up, but this was unavoidable, as it was found impossible to inflate it during the high wind of Wednesday afternoon, although those in charge worked hard and long to do so. The ordinary time taken to inflate it is 40 minutes, but only after three and a half hours of hard work, after the wind had died out, was it possible to get it full, and then it was 7.30 and the crowd had of course gone home.

TUESDAY—FIRST DAY.

The weather clerk was against the society this day, which dawned with lowering skies and occasional drops of rain, which had the effect of keeping several large herds of cattle which had been promised, from coming. Enough came however to nearly fill all the pens at the grounds, and the display would have done credit to a much larger place than this. Q. L. Reed of South Weymouth, the delegate of the State Board of Agriculture, stated that the cattle were the finest he had ever seen at a cattle show. There were probably at least 200 head on the grounds. There were more sheep and swine than last year, though the showing in these classes was not as large as desirable. In the poultry department there were even more birds than a year ago, some unusually fine specimens being shown.

The crowd was fully as large as on the first day last year, but many were kept away by the weather. About 1 o'clock it rained in torrents for a little while, but finally cleared off and the afternoon was an ideal one for the events which were on the programme.

The member's trotting class was the first thing called after dinner. There were eight starters, and the prizes were for those who finished nearest to four minutes, irrespective of position. The first horses finished in about 3.45, but A. D. Fosket of Monson managed to get under the wire in 3.59½, the nearest to the time limit, with D. F. Holden of Palmer second, G. C. Flynt of Monson third and C. K. Gamwell of Palmer fourth.

There were two other races, the 2.45 and 2.35 classes. The former had seven starters, "Prince Jerome," entered by L. O. Clapp of Springfield; "China Maid," George Mandell of Hardwick; "Adele," T. Blanchard, Palmer; "Trixie," A. Girouard, Bondsville; "Thorndike," F. H. Beaman, Gilbertville; "Eli," T. T. Sisson, Amherst; "Kittie P.," M. Sorel, Ware; the horses had positions in the first heat in the order named, and the heat proved a procession, with "Prince Jerome" first and "Eli" second. The second heat was a repetition of the first, but in the third heat the judges set "Prince Jerome" back for running and gave the heat to "Thorndike." "Eli" easily took the next, and could have won every heat for that matter, but his driver evidently did not care to give him a record. "Prince Jerome" won the fifth heat and race. The score:—

There were four starters in the 2.35 class, "Bessie Fawn," entered by the Wigwam Hill Stock Farm of Wilbraham; "Goldbar," G. W. Rice, Springfield; "Dandy," Tom Donolan, Springfield; "Henry M.," Clark & Bombard, Ware; positions in the order named. This race was evidently fixed up between the drivers of "Henry M." and "Goldbar," for the latter could have easily gone several seconds faster than he did, being pulled almost to a walk several times during the race. In the third heat "Henry M." made a bad break at the three-quarter pole when "Goldbar" was close behind, and the latter was almost stopped by his driver in an attempt not to pass the other horse, which he was finally compelled to do, but was held back so that "Henry M." had the lead again at the beginning of the stretch. The judges declared it no heat and ordered it trotted over, putting a new driver up behind "Goldbar," The horse's head was checked much higher in the next heat than in the previous ones, and with other manipulations was kept back again, though he came in only a couple of feet behind the leader. The score:—

The judges were W. M. Haynes of Springfield, L. E. Chandler and C. E. Fuller of Palmer.

Between the heats of the races Prince Leo gave a good exhibition on a rope stretched high over the track near the judges' stand.

WEDNESDAY—SECOND DAY.

The forenoon was given up to the display and judging of horses, of which there were many fine specimens, particularly among the colts.

As the programme for the afternoon was an unusually long one, the races were called for 1 o'clock. It was only 10 minutes past when the horses in the 2-years-old colt-stake race were sent for, and only 20 minutes past when they were sent off on the first heat. Seven had qualified, but only three started: "Phalamon," G. C. Flynt, Monson; "Hermitess," Skilton Bros., Bedford; "Lulu L.," W. A. Bagg, Springfield. The race was mile heats, best two in three, and was won by "Phalamon," though "Hermitess" took the second heat owing to a bad break by "Phalamon." The score:—

The yearlings were called next, but only two of the four entered responded, "Marjorie Daw," Wigwam Hill Stock Farm, Wilbraham; "Prima Donna," Skilton Bros., Bedford. The heats were half mile, best two in three, and "Marjorie Daw" easily proved her superiority to the other and settled the race in two heats. The score:—

Time—1.40, 1.38.

Only two of the four entries were started in the three-years-old race, "Susie Brockett," G. W. Rice, Springfield; and "Alcove," D. F. Holden, Palmer, and the race was decided in three straight heats. The score:—

There were four starters in the free-for-all race, "Calvin C.," H. A. Hamilton, Springfield; "Taras," G. W. Rice, Springfield; "Moxie," G. W. Rice, Springfield; "Dandy," Tom Donolan, Springfield. There was some pretty trotting in this race, but three heats were all that were necessary to decide it. In the second heat the crowd had two races in one, the third and fourth horses having quite a brush for third place away in the rear of the leaders. The score:—

The judges were S. S. Taft, Dr. William Holbrook and L. E. Chandler.

Between the heats the Sault Brothers of Monson gave an exhibition of heavy weight lifting. They are both slight, weighing only 119 and 123 pounds, but handled heavy dumbbells as though they were playthings, and kept the crowd interested for half an hour.

In the one mile bicycle race, which was called between the heats of the horse races, there were six starters, William Graham and Henry Stimson of Palmer, Jerry J. Shea of Bondsville, Fred Allen and S. M. Harris of Indian Orchard, and H. C. Walker of Ludlow. Stimson led off at the start and set the pace for about three-eighths of a mile, but slipped a pedal coming down the stretch in the first lap and lost his place. The strong wind was hard for the riders while going up the back stretch. Allen finished first, with Harris second and Walker third. Time, 3.06.

The other two bicycle races were called after the horse races were over. There was but one entry in the half-mile for boys under 17, so Walter Ballard of Hampden, a lad of 12, rode a half mile to see what time he could make, and finished in 1.45.

There were six starters in the five mile race, William Graham, Henry Stimson and Barbour of Palmer, Fred Allen and S. M. Harris of Indian Orchard, and H. C. Walker of Ludlow. The boys started to make a loafing match of it, but quickened their pace slightly when the directors threatened to withdraw the prizes if they did not race. As it was there was not much speed in their movements until the last quarter, when they hustled for places, Allen winning first, Harris second and Barbour third, with Graham only half a wheel behind. The time was 18.20.

Master Allen Atkins then amused the crowd with an exhibition of fancy bicycle riding, doing some very clever tricks for a boy who never mounted a machine until this spring, and who has picked up all his accomplishments unaided.

IN THE HALL.

The display in the hall was larger and better than for several years. In the lower hall the vegetable display was noticeable for the display of mammoth cabbages and squashes, and fine potatoes. There was an excellent showing of fruit of all kinds, declared by the committee to be the best ever shown in the place. Flowers in great variety gave a pleasing bit of color to the other surroundings. The bread, cake and honey display was quite extensive and certainly looked "good enough to eat." The upper hall did not have the barren appearance of last year, the walls and tables being well filled with paintings, fancy work and articles of domestic manufacture. Two exhibits which perhaps attracted as much attention as any were the collection of Indian relics from the Pine Ridge Agency, South Dakota, and the two chairs, one of them a rocker, made from steers' horns by J. H. Switzer of Holland. A new thing this year was the display by some of the local merchants and manufacturers, which might well be enlarged another year. In this line that of Holden & Fuller easily led, their fine woolen dress goods proving immensely attractive to the feminine eye.

The crowd on the second day was the largest which the society has ever entertained, and numbered fully 2200, there being 2054 paid admissions, besides those being admitted on exhibitors' tickets and otherwise.

The increased crowds of course brought increased gate receipts, the total amount for both days, including grand stand and ground rentals, being $1040.85. Adding to this the entry fees in the colt-stakes race, $147, and those in the other races, $192, and the total receipts of the two days foot up $1379.85, which will leave a surplus after all bills are paid.

Three train robbers boarded an Illinois Central train near Centralia, Ill., about 11 o'clock Wednesday night, and after it had pulled out of the station climbed over into the cab and ordered the engineer to stop the train. He and the firemen showed fight and were shot, the engineer fatally. The train was then stopped by the outlaws and an attempt made to get at the money in the express car, the messenger and the conductor making so good a fight however that the men were kept back until one of the passengers put in an appearance with a double-barreled shot gun and bagged one of the fellows, the other two escaping.

A negro at Roanoke, Va., robbed and beat a white woman Wednesday, and that night an attempt was made to lynch him, but the mob was baffled by the mayor of the city, who called out the militia, and when the would-be lynchers advanced on the jail ordered them to fire, which they did, killing nine persons. The negro was later taken from the jail in an attempt to secret him, but his whereabouts was discovered and he was finally lynched by the crowd.

"Wanita," and the Cast of Characters.

The comic opera of "Wanita, or the Indian Maiden's Mission," which is now in rehearsal and will be presented for the benefit of the Young Men's Library Association Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 17 and 18, is a purely American opera, developed by young men, this work being their first attempt. The authors are all residents of Easthampton, and the initial production was given there last spring. The composer is Ralph L. Baldwin, who is only about 21 years of age, but whose musical talents were evinced at an early age. The librettist is George L. Munn, also a young man, at present editor of the Easthampton News. The authors were greatly assisted by Albert N. Baldwin, brother of the composer, who did a great deal toward preparing the work for publication. The scene of the opera is laid in a frontier settlement in the land of the Hurons in 1620. Four Indians and five English pioneers form the principals of the cast, and the action develops about the policy of the Indians toward the new comers. The leading part is sung by Wanita, an Indian maiden, contralto; Osseo, a young war chief, baritone, is in love with her, but his opposition to the peace policy of her father Wauregan, the old sachem, bass, creates an unfavorable antagonism between them, as Wanita clings to her father; Magua, baritone, a squaw Indian, is a comedian on new lines, and completes the Indian leading parts. The Puritans are Dorothy Bradford, a young girl, soprano; Donald, tenor, leader of the fighting men, and in love with Dorothy; Jemimah Skillings, mezzo-soprano, a timid spinster of uncertain age and unending woes; Simeon Lubberly, tenor, a country clown; and Obediah Gamute, tenor, a singing master and composer of Psalms. The scene of the prologue is laid before the wigwam of Wauregan, where the Huron braves are assembled, discussing the welcome that shall be given to the pale-faces. The scene ends with a war dance. The scene of the first act is laid in the Puritan settlement. Act second is laid before the wigwam of Wauregan, and ends in the reconciliation of the Indians and the pale-faces. The cast:

|---|---|
| Wauregan | George A. Adams |
| Osseo, a young warrior | Charles H. Clark |
| Magua, a fool Indian | Albert E. Brown |
| Dorothy Bradford, leader | Mrs. W. M. Gregory |
| Obediah Gamute, a psalm singer | E. B. Taylor |
| Simeon Lubberly, an Englishman | W. A. Weld |
| Wanita, an Indian maiden, daughter of Wauregan | Mrs. Rufus Flynt |
| Dorothy Bradford, a Puritan maiden | Miss Georgia Packard |
| Jemimah Skillings, a spinster of uncertain age | Mrs. William Oare |
| 1st and 2d Puritans. | 1st and 2d Soldiers. |
| Chorus of Indians (male). | |

Chorus of Puritans (male and female).

The work on the opera is progressing. A rehearsal was held Tuesday evening at the residence of James B. Shaw, which was largely attended. Another was held at the opera house last evening, conducted by the composer, Ralph L. Baldwin. The next rehearsal will be held in the opera house next Tuesday evening.

THREE SEPTEMBER WEDDINGS.

Martin—Healey.

Miss Alice Martin and Michael Healey were married at 10 o'clock Monday morning in St. Thomas's church, Rev. Fr. Donoghue officiating. Low mass was celebrated at the close of the wedding ceremony. The bride was attired in a handsome dress of white Bedford cord, trimmed with white lace and ribbon, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor was Miss Mary E. Norris, who was dressed in a white henrietta, trimmed with white lace and gimp. The best man was William Healey, brother of the groom. The wedding march was played by Miss Nellie Finnerty, and William Finnerty and Daniel Grady acted as ushers. As both of the young people were quite popular the church edifice was filled with friends, among whom were many from out of town, who gathered to witness the ceremony. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride after the ceremony, followed by a reception. Mr. and Mrs. Healey left on the evening train for Boston, and after a short wedding tour will make their home in Palmer.

McCherry—Rollins.

St. Thomas's church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Lucinda McCherry of Palmer and Michael Rollins of Ware at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. The ceremony was performed with a ring by Rev. Fr. Donoghue in the presence of a large number of the friends of the young people. The bride was attired in a pearl henrietta trimmed with brocaded silk. The maid of honor was Miss Mary A. Brown of Ware, and the best man was Thomas O'Grady of the same town. The friends partook of a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride after the ceremony. Then followed a reception. The 3.14 train east bore the newly-married couple away upon their wedding tour. They will reside at Franklin Falls, N. H.

Donahue—Bennett.

Miss Flora Donahue and George A. Bennett, both of North Wilbraham, were married at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning by Rev. William H. Hart. The bride was dressed in blue silk. The bridesmaid was Miss Sadie Moran and the best man Herbert Morgan. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett left on the 10.22 train west the same morning for their wedding tour.

The deceased was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, who have the sympathy of all their acquaintances.

At the residence of Mrs. Charles O. Brown on Thursday, Sept. 14th, at 1.30 p. m., occurred one of the prettiest home weddings that has taken place in town for some years, the bride being Lillian Mary, only daughter of Mrs. Brown, a young lady with many accomplishments and a host of friends. Mr. Stewart, the groom, is a rising young man of North Brookfield. The Episcopal ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Dyer in the presence of relatives and friends, after which a bountiful wedding lunch was served. After receiving the congratulations of all the happy couple left amidst a shower of rice and old shoes.

WARE.

J. C. Dexter is practicing pen work on portraits and other work for photo-engraving for newspapers and illustrated works.

George D. Storrs is mentioned as Democratic candidate for representative, and we believe is the best man they could get for the place.

A business meeting of the Unitarian Society is to be held in the vestry next Monday evening, to take action on the resignation of the pastor.

The Republicans are to hold a caucus in the district court room this evening at 7.30, to choose delegates to the state senatorial convention.

Harrison Lewis, son of the late J. N. Lewis of Ware, died at his home in Salem last Sunday. The body was brought to Ware for interment.

The working force which was laid off the Central Massachusetts Railroad some time since has been set at work again, employing about 20 men.

The Bristol educated horses, which were advertised to be at the town hall Tuesday evening, did not appear, owing to sickness among the horses.

Next Monday the cloth department of the Otis Company's mills will start up on half time and with a reduction in pay. The hosiery department is to remain closed indefinitely.

The Republican senatorial convention is to be held in the town hall Tuesday, Oct. 3, at one o'clock, and the 5th representative district convention Saturday, Sept. 30, at one o'clock.

The selectmen have voted to procure grappling irons to be kept in the police rooms. This action is taken on account of the difficulty had in finding the body of the boy that was drowned recently.

The loss of wages owing to the shutting down of the mills of the various local corporations for the past eight weeks is no more than the amount paid out for liquor per year in this town, which is food for reflection.

The annual inspection and parade of the fire department is to be Saturday, September 30. After the parade a supper will be served at the Methodist vestry. In the evening the hose companies will hold a social dance at Firemen's Hall.

A large number of Poles have lately been employed by the Otis Company, and Monday evening 28 of them applied to the overseers of the poor for relief, which was granted. None of them have a residence here, so their relief will eventually be paid by the state.

The fire department was called out on Wednesday afternoon for the first time this year, to a fire in the lumber yard on the Gilbertville road. The steamer was called out and forced water through 2500 feet of hose from the nearest hydrant, near Morse avenue. The loss is estimated at $200, covered by insurance.

There is to be an entertainment next Tuesday evening at half past seven at the chapel under the auspices of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the East Congregational church. The entertainment will consist of readings by Miss H. S. Warner of Hardwick, singing by the children, and solos by others. Admission ten cents.

The full amount necessary to build the new Methodist church is subscribed. The work may not be commenced this fall, but as it is now about the 50th anniversary of Methodism in Ware it is expected the event will soon be celebrated with appropriate services. Some of the pastors of the church here will be present and take part in the exercises, which promise to be of great interest.

There will be a public temperance meeting under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the Congregational chapel next Thursday evening at half past seven. Rev. A. B. Bassett will preside, and Rev. A. M. Osgood of the Methodist church will be the principal speaker of the evening, and will no doubt give a very interesting address, as he is an enthusiastic worker in the cause. There will be singing by a quartette under the direction of H. B. Anderson.

The posters are out, and by the way, are the handsomest lot we have seen in this part of the country, for the Eastern Hampshire Fair Association cattle show and fair, to be held October 6th and 7th. The grand attractions are to be new fair grounds, honest award of premiums, fine exhibition of horses and cattle both days, bicycle and foot races, and hose contests. There are to be three trotting classes. Band concerts during the day and reduced rates on the railroads. The purses for trotting are $75 for 3-minute class, $100 for 2.50 class, and $100 for the 2.38 class. The first prize in the bicycle race is a $25 diamond pin, second, a gent's easy chair. In the hose race the first prize is $25 in gold, second $10. Foot race, open to all, prizes $5 and $3. The premiums on exhibits we are not able to give, but they are said to be liberal. The association has already $600 paid in to help pay expenses and insure the success of the enterprise.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., September, 1893.

Opening week for millinery, wraps, jackets, furs, etc.

There is much to be learned. Matthew Arnold defines poetry as the art of expressing the essence of things without recourse to their forms. The store on an opening day expresses the essence of merchandise. One gets a more comprehensive and intimate knowledge of one of the greatest pursuits of man, and of the pursuit of women, on an opening day, than by taking a course in political economy, with any amount of curtain lectures.

Hail, then, opening day!

The millinery exhibit is said to present not only the largest number of hats and bonnets ready to put on, but also the widest range of styles ever seen in this region.

The exhibit of jackets, wraps, capes and furs is large and rich. We have a number of garments from foreign makers, besides a large variety of American garments of modest pretensions, acceptable, we hope, to the women of this region.

Misses and children are liberally provided for; and all the new things will be shown this week.

When you are ready for a new dress, drop us a postal card or letter for samples. We cheerfully send them to you without charge, only asking that you state as nearly as you can the kind of goods you wish and about the price you wish to pay.

Remember that with half our dress fabrics we should still have the most varied collection of such in the city. We venture to say that our stock is larger than the combined stocks of the six largest houses in this whole region, taken together.

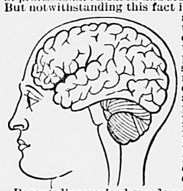
MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus' dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Days Gone By.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The apple in the orchard, and the pathway through the rye;
The chirrup of the robin, and the whistle of the quail
As he piped across the meadows sweet as any nightingale,
When the bloom was on the clover, and the blue was in the sky,
And my happy heart brimmed over, in the days gone by.

In the days gone by, when my naked feet were tripped
By the honeysuckle's tangles, where the water lilies dipped,
And the ripple of the river lipped the moss along the brink,
Where the placid eyed and lazy footed cattle came to drink,
And the tilting snipe stood fearless of the truant's wayward cry,
And the splashing of the swimmer, in the days gone by.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The music of the laughing lip, the luster of the eye,
The childish faith in fairies, and Aladdin's magic ring,
The simple, soul reposing, glad belief in everything,
When life was like a story, holding neither sob nor sigh,
In the olden, golden glory of the days gone by.

When desired, loads will be supplied on the premises. Only gentlemen on the force will be received this season.—Judge.

A LEAP-YEAR PROPOSAL.

It is generally supposed that the idea of young girls proposing marriage in leap-year is a pleasant little fiction of the humorist, but there is evidence that sometimes the fair sex does avail itself of the quadrennial privilege. An anecdote told in England, repeated in Harper's Bazar, of a member of the House of Commons is a case in point. According to the raconteur who is responsible for the story, the Commoner had been paying attention to a young lady for a long while, and had taken her to attend the House until she was perfectly posted in its rules. On the last day of the session, as they came out, he bought her a bouquet, saying:

"May I offer you a handful of flowers?"

She promptly replied, "I move to amend by omitting all after the word hand."

He blushingly accepted the amendment, and they adopted it unanimously.

Certainly the proposal was most subtly put, and only goes to show how much better and more practical than that of most men is a woman's proposal.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulas and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENFY & CO., Toledo, O.

Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

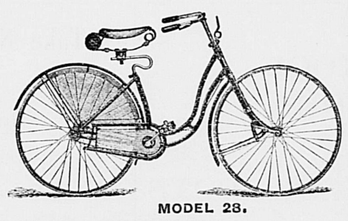
MODEL 27.



MODEL 28.

BEAUTIES, AREN'T THEY?

u can have them with cushion tires at $110 each, or with pneumatic tires at $115 and $125 each, cash, according to the quality of the tires.

The tire on the $125 machine is our best Columbia pneumatic, the best and most expensive tire to manufacture ever used on a bicycle, fully guaranteed against puncture for the year; moreover, we guarantee the whole machine from rim to hub, from handle bar to pedal.

HOW TO GET ONE.

Go to our nearest agent. If you don't know who or where he is, write to us and we will tell you, satisfy him of your honorable intentions and ability to pay, pay $25 in cash and arrange to pay the balance within one year. This is an easy way to possess a bicycle worth two or three of the fourth grade machines which are hawked about in auction rooms. If you wish to take advantage of this offer you should attend to the matter at once, as we have but a few of them.

You are welcome to our catalogue, it is a beautiful little book, beautifully illustrated. Call on our agents for free copy, or send us two two-cent stamps for postage and we will mail it.

TINY AERONAUTS.

A small spider which was decked in a garb of brown, and had bright, diamond-like eyes, crawled up to the highest point of my coat sleeve, then raising its spinnarets aloft, ejected a delicate thread. Every second it grew longer, and as it grew it rose directly upward as if it was vastly higher than the air. Up it went, higher and higher, until I judged it to be three feet long, and then a very curious thing occurred. The spider was almost lifted from his legs. Another second and he appeared to be lifted again; then, wonder of wonders, he turned and ran a few steps directly up the thread into the air, then turned again, and head downward, sailed away. So the thread of silk was, in reality, the balloon. The spider spins the thread out until the wind takes and wafts it away. The fluffy platform is formed later during the flight, and when complete the spider aeronaut rests upon it as securely as the human aeronaut in his basket. That the spider is a slow traveler, can make itself a balloon and journey across deep canyons and raging torrents is certainly an evidence not only of its ingenuity, but of its intelligence.—St. Louis Republic.

MOONLIGHT ON THE RIVER.

The night was still. The sun had long since sought repose in the downy cloud banks of the western sky, hiding his golden glory from our eyes. The moon had risen in cold majesty from the dim and shadowy east and was throwing a quiet, peaceful radiance over hill, meadow, and stream.

A small group on the deck of a tiny craft sailing down the Connecticut river sat drinking in the beauty of the scene.

All were silent.

It was an hour of dreamy rapture, the moonlight, the silence, took away all earthly semblance from the scene and made it a fragment of Paradise.

There was a slight movement in the quiet group and then the sweet silence was broken by a soft clear voice saying:—

"Oh, Frank, you need a shave."—Hartford Post.

CLERGYMAN AND BAKER.—A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call one another liars, but when any one said the thing that was not true they ought to whistle. One day he preached a sermon on the miracle of the loaves and fishes, and being at a loss how to explain it, he said the loaves were not like those nowadays; they where as big as some of the hills in Scotland! He had scarcely pronounced the words when he heard a loud whistle.

"Wha' is that," says he, "ca's me a liar?"

"It is I, Willy M'Donald, the baker."

"Well, Willy, what objection have ye to what I ha' told you?"

"None," said he; "only I want to know what sort o' ovens they had to bake those loaves in?"—New York Ledger.

A Thrilling Story Most Plainly And Graphically Told.

Did You Ever Read Anything of Greater Interest?

The following communication from Mrs. Minnie Miller, who resides at 5 Guthrie street, Fort Wayne, Ind., explains itself:

"For many years I was troubled with indigestion and constipation. Three years ago I became so weak and nervous that I was a complete physical wreck. I had dizzy spells, palpitation of the heart and numbness of my hands and feet.

"These attacks came often and each time worse. My life was a burden to me and a trouble and worry to all my friends. I expected to die. At times I thought I should lose my mind. My stomach was in such a condition that I could eat nothing but a very little of the lightest kind of food. Sleep was impossible. Every little noise would startle me and I would feel faint.

"No one can imagine the agony I suffered but those who are afflicted with nervousness. I cannot describe the feeling in half its horrors.

"At last I saw Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy advertised and read the testimonials of cure of some of those who had been afflicted as I was, so I thought I would try it. Wonderful to relate the first bottle helped me so much that I had faith in it. I took two more bottles and oh! I feel so much better. I can sleep soundly and the nervous feeling has almost left me. I can eat with a good appetite and have gained seven pounds. My friends say that I am looking so much better and I know that I am feeling as they say I look. I tell everybody that the Nervura has done it. I cannot say enough for it and I praise the Lord and thank this wonderful medicine for giving me relief.

"I am only too glad to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to any one afflicted as I was and I hope this testimonial will be the means of inducing many to use this marvellous remedy."

If you are a sufferer do not fail to get this medicine immediately from your druggist. It costs but $1, and it is purely vegetable and harmless. Owing to its great strengthening and invigorating powers it is the best medicine possible to take. It is the prescription and discovery of Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases, and the doctor can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

SILENCED BY A PRAYER.

We were a round dozen of the gloomiest passengers that ever got together in a Pullman car one warm June night, coming from Atlanta over the Piedmont line. There were several reasons for the surly dullness, which deepened as the evening wore on. The weather was clammy and uncomfortable, while to open the windows was to invite a coat of soot and showers of cinders. Moreover the supper at Charlotte had been undeniably bad.

With such conditions it was not to be wondered at that an air of gloomy moroseness prevaded the car. The only party who did not openly evince any evidence of discontent was a group of a sad-faced man, a woman with a subdued countenance, and a tiny tot of five, apparently the daughter of the man and niece of the lady. We all knew well enough why they were so quiet. In the baggage-car was a rough box, and the little girl clutched tightly a bouquet of the same tuberoses we had seen carried in with the coffin.

By and by there were sounds of a slight disturbance from the back part of the car, which caused every one to turn his eyes thither. In the middle of the aisle stood a little fairy form, clad in a snowy nightdress, her golden curls shaking over her shoulders by the rocking of the car, while her blue eyes were troubled and half afloat in tears. She was saying in a baby voice, which opposition had caused to rise to its highest pitch, distinguishable above the rumble of the train, "Papa and auntie, I must; mamma told me to before she went to sleep."

Seeing the attention of the other passengers drawn upon them, the father flushed and made no further remonstrance, and the lady also drew back. The little tot got down reverently upon her knees by the side of the berth, clasped her tiny hands, and began:—

"Now I lay me down to sleep.
I pray the Lord my soul to keep,"

and so on through it all until the final "Amen" adding "God bless Papa and auntie and poor 'ittle Annie whose manna has gone away."

Then, unresisting, they tucked her into the berth. There was no more story telling, no more grumbling, no more growling that night. The train rumbled on with the sleeping mother in the baggage-car and the sleeping orphan.

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

A tall, sun-burned, red-faced, excelsior-haired fellow of 21 from the country had been arrested for using profane language.

"Don't you know better than to be swearing on the street?" inquired the Court.

"I didn't know I swore, your honor," explained the prisoner.

"That's worse than if you did."

"May I tell you how it was, your honor?"

"Yes, and be quick about it."

"Well, your honor, I just got into town about noon, and had something to eat, and after dinner I thought I'd take in the sights. While I was thinkin' a young man turned the corner, wearing a pancake hat with a sky-blue band on it, a pink shirt, smoking a paper-kivered cigar, and he had on white pants rolled up, an' hit was dry weather."

"What's that got to do with the charge against you?" inquired the Court, as the prisoner stopped to take breath.

"Well, your honor," continued the prisoner, "when I seen that I was so discomfuddled that I just blurted out, 'Well, I'll be ——,' and the policeman took me up."

"Case dismissed," smiled the Court, and proceeded to reprimand the officer.—Detroit Free Press.

BUT HE WAS ONLY A SAVAGE, YOU SEE.—Over by the Anthropological building there is a highly educated Indian who speaks in a very quiet way about the "uncivilized whites." The other day while he was making his toilet the curtain to his tent was lifted, and two women, wearing badges—and from Boston—stood there and watched him go on with his dressing. He finally turned around and said to the one holding the curtain:

"Madam, how would you like to have me walk into your private dressing room and watch you make your toilet?"

She looked astonished at his pure English, blushed, and walked away.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"POST NO BILLS."

A lady on Division street was late in getting her house cleaning over and done with, in consequence of the scarcity of workmen, paper-hangers and carpet-cleaners, this busy World's Fair time, says the Chicago Post. But at last the task was completed, and the lady said something about the bill to the foreman of a lot of men who had been for days turning her home upside down and putting it right again.

"The bill?" said the man, "I brought you no bill."

"No," said the lady smiling; "it came by mail. I asked for it at once before I go away for the summer."

"Then don't you pay it if it came that way!" exclaimed the man excitedly.

"Why?"

"Cause it ain't legal—a sending bill by the mail."

The lady grew impatient. "I don't understand you at all, my man; whatever do you mean?"

"Why, ma'am, it ain't legal, and they can't collect, don't you know; hain't you ever seen 'post no bills' signs all over the city?"

And the man was absolutely sincere, for this was his simple reading of that common legend which runs on every board fence and blank wall.

Old superstitions respecting the wedding garments run thus:

Married in white,
You have chosen all right;
Married in gray,
You will go far away;
Married in black,
You will wish yourself back;
Married in red,
You will wish yourself dead;
Married in green,
Ashamed to be seen;
Married in blue,
You will always be true;
Married in pearl,
You will live in a whirl;
Married in yellow,
Ashamed of the fellow;
Married in brown,
You will live out of town.
Married in pink,
Your spirits will sink.

THE KIND THAT CURES

JOHN C. JEFFRIES, Worcester, Mass.

A Wonder in Worcester!

A Grateful Husband and Father Says of his Wife:

"Thank God, She is Well!"

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA IS CHEAPER AT $1.00 PER BOTTLE THAN ANY OTHER AS A GIFT, BECAUSE IT IS "THE KIND THAT CURES."

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.

GENTLEMEN—DANA'S SARSAPARILLA has been such a Godsend that I must let others know. For the last 10 years my wife has had very poor health, complaining of sore bearing down pains, also pains in back and limbs. Her blood was so poor that it would appear to stagnate in blotches all over her limbs. She tried the different Sarsaparillas and was treated by Physicians in Mass., N. Y. and N. J. but found but little if any relief.

Five months ago I bought her a bottle of

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

It helped her so much I bought three more, and it seems almost impossible to describe the change it has wrought. THE BLOTCHES HAVE DISAPPEARED, also the pains in side and limbs, no more bearing down pain or tired feeling. THANK GOD, she is a WELL woman to-day.

Hoping this may induce others to try it, I remain, Yours respy, JOHN C. JEFFRIES.
175 Pleasant St., Worcester, Mass.

This is to certify that I sold Mr. Jeffries DANA'S SARSAPARILLA, and believe him to be an honest, truthful person, and do not believe he would make a false statement in regard to its merits. Yours respectfully,
FRANK H. TENNEY, Druggist.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

THE FACT

That AYER'S Sarsaparilla CURES OTHERS of scrofulous diseases, eruptions, boils, eczema, liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, rheumatism and catarrh should be convincing that the same course of treatment WILL CURE YOU. All that has been said of the wonderful cures effected by the use of

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

During the past 50 years, truthfully applies to-day. It is, in every sense, The Superior Medicine. Its curative properties, strength, effect and flavor are always the same; and for whatever blood diseases AYER'S Sarsaparilla is taken, they yield to this treatment. When you ask for

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Don't be induced to purchase any of the worthless substitutes, which are mostly mixtures of the cheapest ingredients, contain no sarsaparilla, have no uniform standard of appearance, flavor, or effect, are blood purifiers in name only, and are offered to you because there is more profit in selling them. ### A Sermon in Rhyme.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him—yes, and let him know
That you love him, e're life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it—do not let the singer
Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one that thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it—do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of two or three in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling,
Falling from a brother's eyes,
Share them—and thus by the sharing
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh is rippling,
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it—'tis the wise man's saying,
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so—speak out brave and truly
E'er the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear,
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seed of kindness,
All enriching, as you go;
Leave them—trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow;
So until life's happy end,
You shall never lack a friend.

ORNEY.

Mike Slattery was drunk when he killed Tom Flynn; so they didn't hang him for it. They only sent him to prison for life, and elected the man who sold him the liquor, alderman. Then every one forgot all about the case; that is, every one but the wife Slattery left behind, his eighteen-year-old son, Orney, and the four little Slatterys, whose ages ran along somewhere between three and thirteen. No one seemed to know just how old they were; but they were somewhere between three and thirteen.

The day they took Slattery from the Tombs to the state prison at Sing Sing, Orney had a full half-hour's talk with the old man. It made a deep impression on his mind. Of course it probably wouldn't have impressed any one else to have talked to the Irishman who was going to be shut up behind gray stone walls until death unlocked the gates for him; but Slattery was Orney's father, you know, and that made a difference.

Orney took particular notice of how his father looked that day. There was a good deal that was unusual about his appearance. In the first place his clothes were clean and neat. He had had on his black holiday suit when he killed Tom Flynn, and had torn it in several places and spattered it some with Flynn's blood; so he couldn't very well wear that. Therefore Mrs. Slattery had fixed up his best suit of working clothes and necessarily let it go at that. It was foolish of her to even take this trouble; for as soon as Slattery got to Sing Sing they took his own clothes away from him and gave him a striped suit belonging to the state; but she really felt as if she were doing him a favor. As I was saying, Slattery's appearance this day made a lasting impression on Orney's mind. Not only was he clean and neat, but he was smooth-shaven, and his hands had become soft and almost white during the seven long months that he had already lain in jail. His eyes were sunken from the confinement, too, and his face was pale. But what impressed Orney more than his father's looks was what his father said. The conversation ran somewhat in this wise:

"Well, father."

"Well, Orney."

"An' how are yez feelin', father?"

"Purty bad, Orney—purty bad. How's th' owld woman? Ain't she a-comin' down to bid me good-bye?"

"No, father; she's that rushed wid th' washin' that she ain't got the time. Besides, father, she do say she couldn't well stand it to see th'm take yez away."

"Poor Biddy—poor Biddy! An' I've brought all this misery upon 'er. Arrah, an' it's a scamp I am, intoirely. Orney?"

"Yis, father."

"Look at me now—look at me hard. I don't want this sight ever to go out of yer eyes. I'm goin' to prison, lad, fer the rest of me life. Fer the rest of me life—till I die—do ye understand?"

"Yis, father."

"Do yez know what's sendin' me there, Orney?"

"The judge, father, an' the jury, an' the bad lawyer yez had fer yer definse."

"No, Orney, no. It ain't the judge, an' it ain't the lawyer. It's whisky, Orney."

"Yis, father."

"Now, Orney, now I've gone, the owld woman and the childer, they'll be a-lookin' to you, Orney, fer support. C'n yez give it to 'em, Orney?"

"I c'n try, father."

"An' yez c'n do it, Orney. An' by an' by, when the owld man is forgott'n, yez c'n have a wife an' childer of yer own."

Here there was a pause. Slattery was waiting for Orney to say something, and Orney was thinking so hard that he didn't have anything to say. He was thinking about pretty Maggie O'Neil and how, when his father had been convicted, she had told him not to come to see her any more. Orney had thought that Maggie was a very nice girl—the nicest girl, in fact—for more than a year; and even when she told him that he must keep away from her, he had not changed his opinion. "Orney Slattery," she had said, "I like you, an' I have liked you for a long time. I've gone to picnics with you, an' I've gone to dances with you, an' I've gone to excursions with you. I've liked it, too; an' I wish't I might keep on. But I can't, can I Orney?"

And Orney, understanding, had hung his head and said nothing. She went on:

"You know I can't. I've kissed you, Orney, an' you've kissed me. An' we've gone to the park together, an' you've sat with your arm around my waist; an' I liked it. But it's all got to stop, now. There's blood on the hands of your father, Orney, an' it's all got to stop. I'm sorry for you, Orney, an' I'm sorry for myself. But it's all got to stop. Good-bye."

Then Orney, with a big lump in his throat, had said good-bye.

This little incident was brought to his mind when his father said that he might some time have a wife of his own; and it was because it was in his mind to the exclusion of everything else for the moment, that he didn't speak when his father expected him to. Finally, Slattery went on:

"Yis, ye'll have to support the owld woman an' the childer now, Orney; an' I want ye to promise me to be good to 'em."

"Yis, father," said Orney, recalled to the present.

"Ye'll most likely drink some—poor men mostly does. I wish ye wouldn't; but ye most likely will. But I want ye to promise me this, Orney." Here the old man became very earnest in his speech. "I want ye to promise me, Orney that, drunk or sober, ye'll never strike the owld woman."

"No, father, I never will."

"She's been a good mother to ye—a good sight better a mother than I've been a father—an' she alluz will. She was alluz a good wife to me." Here Slattery had to wipe his eyes a bit. He wasn't drunk now, you know. "I killed a man, but I never struck her! So help me God, I never struck her! An' I'd ruther see you in my place, now, Orney—listen well to what I'm tellin' ye, lad—than to know that ye'd ever raised yer hand agin' 'er."

Just at this point the guard told Orney that he must go away. As he passed down the corridor, after having shaken hands with his father through the bars, he heard the old man call:

"Remember, Orney—remember that!"

After this last interview with his father, Orney's life took on a new aspect. He had had to work ever since he was big enough to, but now he had the consciousness that largely on his work depended the food for the little Slatterys and the comfort of his mother. He was able-bodied and strong, and he got a job as porter for a big, wholesale dry goods house, where he earned twelve dollars a week. That was a good deal of money for the Slatterys; and after the few dollars that the old woman earned by washing were added to it, they had enough to live on very comfortably, and the younger children were able to go to school. Orney was proud of that.

A year went by, and it would have been a very pleasant one had it not been for the knowledge that the old man was locked away behind the big stone walls up the Hudson. The family did not forget him and the little ones, when Orney's prosperity had enabled them to learn to write a little, spelled out rambling letters to him, which Orney himself always took to the post office and mailed. It seemed to him extremely good to have his little brother and sister learn to read and write and do sums on their slates with figures, and know that his strong arms and willing hands were what made such great achievements possible. He was a good brother to them, and he was a good son to his mother. Often when he was waiting around the back door of the big store where he worked, for the truck to bring the great packing boxes and bales for him to unload and block the sidewalk with, he thought of that last admonition his father had given him. If it had not been spoken so solemnly and in such grave circumstances, it would have seemed absurd and laughable to him.

He was even able to put by a little of his earnings. After a while he had fifty dollars in the savings bank.

One afternoon a big packing box fell from a pile and crushed the foot of a member of the firm. Orney quickly pushed the great case aside and carried the injured man into the office where he lay on a couch while a doctor dressed his bruised foot. After he had been taken home in a carriage, another member of the firm called Orney in and gave him five dollars. This unexpected good fortune made him feel jubilant, and he decided to spend the money on trinkets. First he bought for himself a nickel watch for two dollars, then he bought some cloth for a new dress for his mother for two dollars more. The remaining dollar he expended on what he called to himself "fun fer the kids." He bought a wonderful paper tube with rounded ends and containing a drop or two of quicksilver. It was called "The Jolly Tumbler," by the sidewalk fakir who sold it, and when placed on an inclined board or tipped up table it would turn somersault after somersault in a most comical way. A tiny tin woman, who, when wound up, would push a tiny tin baby carriage in a very realistic manner, was another purchase. These were for the two younger Slatterys, and cost 35 cents. With the other 65 cents he procured a remarkable collection of paper-covered picture books for the children who had learned to read. After he had all these things in his pockets and hands, he walked toward his home down by the North River aglow with satisfaction and cheerfulness.

But when he reached it his jollity all oozed away with great rapidity; for he found the two little ones who were to have been delighted with the Jolly Tumbler and the tin lady, sick in bed with a fever. It had come on suddenly, and it didn't last long. It was God who cured them three days later—not the doctor; and when their cure was complete they were carried away to the cemetery with the four Slatterys in New York weeping in a carriage behind them and the Slattery in Sing Sing weeping behind the grating of his cell.

It was a great blow to Orney and a greater blow to the old woman. Gloom settled over the little home; and when Orney went there at night his evening of talk with his mother and gossip with the neighbors in the tenement didn't rest him as it used to. In the daytime, he forgot to whistle about his work and was silent under the laughing blarney of the truck drivers. Once or twice he went into a saloon and came out wiping his lips with the back of his hand and fancying he felt better. The illness and death of the little ones had made his deposit in the savings bank melt away, too, and that helped to make him feel that there was little light in the life of Orney Slattery.

Then, one rainy, dismal morning, he went down to the store as usual and found strangers poking and prying about among the boxes and whispering to the proprietors. That night he was called into the office and told that he needn't come any more after the next Saturday. A new firm had bought the business and Orney was discharged. He went into a saloon twice on his way home that night and growled at his mother when he got there for crying over this new misfortune.

Orney was unable to get another job so good as the one he lost; but he got work on the big ditch which was being dug in Broadway for a cable railroad and earned almost as much. It was very unpleasant work for him though—this shovelling dirt—after his service in the store. He began to stop at the saloon in the mornings before he began work, as well as in the evenings after he had finished it.

It was approaching the end of the first month after he had been discharged from the store. The laborers on the cable road were "paid off" on Tuesdays. Orney received his pay and tucked it away in his pocket with the money he had been saving up to pay the month's rent. He was just turning away when he heard his name called and looked back. The work on that division was finished and the foreman was "laying off" the men who would not be wanted on the other divisions. Orney was among the luckless ones.

They gathered in a forlorn little group on the street and looked gloomily at each other. Work was scarce and they knew it. By and by one of them pulled out the little wad of bills that had been paid to him and said:

"Well, I've got that, anyhow, and they's enough of it to buy a round of drinks with. Come on, boys."

Orney went with the rest, and he bought drinks with the rest. It was long after midnight when he stumbled unsteadily up the stairs of the tenement. His mother was sitting up waiting for him; her face was white and her eyes were dry and staring. It was the first time she had ever seen him really drunk. She knew something about drunken men, though, and tried to make it appear as though she did not notice how thick his voice was or how he staggered. The two children were asleep in another room.

Orney dropped heavily in a chair, and grumblingly told his mother that he was again out of work. Then he reached into his pocket and pulled out all that was left of his money. There was very little, not enough to pay the rent. He threw it on the table by his mother. She looked tired and care-worn, and drunk as he was he noticed the despair in her face as she slowly counted the bills and then looked at him. He was filled with a maudlin remorse, and with thick voice tried to justify himself in her eyes. He even wept in a drunken way. He wanted her to pity him. But she only sat still in her chair and looked down and nervously twisted her aprom. She was very miserable. Orney; her Orney, was sitting before her muddled with liquor which he had bought with money needed at home. It was very hard. Finally she rose and asked him, in a weary, strained way, if there was anything he wanted before he went to bed. That instant Orney's stupid sorrow gave way to stupid anger. He unreasoningly accused her of bringing all their trouble upon them. He swore that she had made him work like a slave, had wasted his money, and then reproached him when he spent a little on himself in innocent amusement.

The old woman was appalled. Even her husband, who had killed a man, had never talked to her like this. She laid her head on the table and covered it with her apron, her hands on her ears to shut out her son's cruel words, and did not reply.

Orney worked himself into a frightful rage. He demanded that she should answer him; but she only rocked slowly from side to side and moaned. He got slowly up from his chair and went toward her. His eyes were inflamed and glaring from the liquor, and he staggered heavily.

When he awoke the sun was streaming in on his face. His head ached frightfully. He stumbled up and looked into the bedroom where the little ones still slept. Then he went to the outer room.

Half an hour later he was walking with head bowed along the street. He saw nothing, heard nothing. The tears streamed from his eyes and he staggered a little, although he was perfectly sober. A crowd of small boys gathered behind him and followed him but stopped at the threshold when he slowly entered a building with green glass gas lamps before its door.

"Sergeant," he said, to the man in blue clothes and brass buttons behind the desk, "lock me up. My father killed a man when he was drunk. Last night I got drunk and I—I struck my mother. I promised him when they took him away that I never would; but I—I did. I struck my mother."

He shuddered a little, as if he were cold and looked with eyes that seemed to be puzzled about something.

An officer, to whom the sergeant had beckoned as the boy talked, stood by his side and caught him as he toppled and fell.—New York Independent.

KISSES DON'T COST ANYTHING.

"Papa, kiss me," said a little brown-eyed girl on West Olive street, as she tiptoed toward the face of her bearded father.

"Oh, pshaw, I kissed you once," responded the gentleman gruffly.

Instantly the tears sprang to the eyes of the little girl, but she maintained her hold on the lapels of her father's coat as she answered sadly:

"I know it; but kisses don't cost anything, papa."

Then the man clasped her to his bosom, imprinted half a dozen kisses on her cheeks and ran away to catch the down-car.

How many times he thought of it that day: "Kisses don't cost anything, papa!" How many times he resolved never again to be angry or impatient with his children. How often he said to himself that if permitted to see his home again he would allow his babies to give him half a dozen greetings and hang about his neck without a sigh of impatience on his part.

But it was a busy day. Creditors were importunate. Orders were plentiful, but not filled promptly. The flood threatened his foundry and everything went wrong. At 6.30 o'clock he started home, wet, tired, angry and impatient. Two little brown-eyed girls and a blue-eyed boy were waiting for him on the wide stone steps of his mansion.

"Here's papa!" they shouted, and rushed down to meet him. The frowns were thick upon his brow, but he remembered the lesson of the morning and took the little ones in his arms and smothered them with kisses, while a tired mother leaned out upon the window-sill and smiled.

Truly kisses don't cost anything, and how happy they make the world.—St. Louis Republic.

THE VALUE OF FRESH AIR.—An interesting experiment that proves the value of fresh air in winter, even for young and delicate children, was tried a month or two ago in a well known babies' hospital. All the sickly babies' that were suffering from chronic indigestion and lack of nutrition, and who would not improve in spite of good food, perfectly ventilated rooms, and careful bathing were taken to the top ward of the hospital, where all the windows were open wide, wrapped as for the street, and put in their perambulators. They were kept in this room from two to four hours daily and soon showed a marked improvement. Their cheeks became rosy, they gained in weight and appetite, and would often fall asleep and remain so during the whole time they were in the air. Very delicate children had bags of hot water placed at their feet. It is recorded in the account of this experiment not one child took cold as a result of it.—New York Evening Post.

A TREACHEROUS MAID.

Mme. Loufourcade, the wife of an army officer during the French revolution, was applied to by the wife of another officer to afford concealment for her husband.

Mme. Loufourcade lived a short distance from the city of Lyons. She had four servants, and the main difficulty, provided the officer could reach her dwelling without discovery, was how best to guard the secret from them.

It was finally decided that one of the females should be taken into her confidence and that the officer, who was a rather effeminate looking man, should become disguised in female attire and passed off as a cousin of Fanchette.

So Fanchette, a rather pretty girl, was made acquainted with everything.

Captain Lavergne made his appearance in due time, disguised as a woman, and so well did he look and play his part that he was not suspected by the other servants of being different from what he seemed. In order, however, to incur as little risk as possible, he pretended to be greatly fatigued by his journey, and was, soon after his arrival, shown to a private room on the upper floor, which he did not leave again for a week, it being given out that he was quite ill.

At the end of the time mentioned some eight or ten soldiers made their appearance at the mansion and demanded the person of Captain Lavergne.

"If you think there is any such individual under this roof, you can make your search," replied Mme. Loufourcade.

When the servants were called together the lady perceived that Fanchette was pale and trembling.

As soon as the officer saw her he exclaimed:

"Well, wench, did you tell the truth or not? If you did it's all right with you, and you needn't be scared; if you didn't, it's my honest opinion you'll be a head shorter."

"What is this?" cried Mme. Loufourcade, in astonishment.

"Well, I don't care!" said Fanchette, assuming an impudent manner. "It's time the aristocrats was put down and made to know that other people is as good as them. I heard there was a reward of a thousand francs offered for this man, who's dared to come here and pass himself off as a female, and I thought I'd just as good a right to the money as anybody."

"And for this you have sold your soul," groaned her mistress.

"Don't come any religious talk over me!" cried Fanchette. "I know more of what's been going on than you think. Religion's been swept away by a decree, and death 's an eternal sleep."

"That's all true, girl," chimed in the officer with an emphatic oath. "But while we're talking the man may get away. Here, guard, seize and bind all these parties."

There was no resistance made by the mistress and her terrified servants, and in a very short time all except Fanchette were secured with cords.

"Now, girl," said the officer, with a coarse laugh, "show us the way to your sweet female cousin."

Captain Lavergne meantime was not entirely ignorant of his peril. From his window he had seen the approach of the soldiers and rightly conjectured they were in quest of himself. His apartment was so situated that he could not go down stairs and escape without being seen by some of the servants. He was alarmed, and his mind became active to devise some means of defense or escape. He had in his possesion a brace of loaded pistols, and his first idea was to barricade his door and sell his life as dearly as possible, but in looking about the apartment he noticed the fireplace and discovered that the chimney was large enough to admit his person. He could see the light at the top, and it occurred to him that perhaps he might escape, and he resolved to make the trial.

Taking his pistols with him, Captain Lavergne hurriedly pushed his way up the chimney, with the view of getting on the roof, but when he had ascended some eight or ten feet he discovered to his agreeable surprise that there was a kind of recess, such as were sometimes left in old-fashioned chimneys for the purpose of opening another flue whenever it might be wanted, large enough to conceal him from the view of any one looking up from below.

Hastily getting into it, he breathed a little more freely, though still with a good deal of nervous apprehension. He feared that in coming up he had shaken down a sufficient quantity of soot to betray his manner of escape and give a clew to his place of retreat. But a glance downward at his clothes convinced him that he had little to be alarmed about in this respect—for this flue had never been much used, his garments were not badly soiled, and he could not preceive dirt enough below to attract attention.

He had not long to wait before he heard the soldiers enter the room, led by the treacherous girl.

"Ha! he has escaped!" exclaimed the latter in alarm.

The officer swore some terrible oaths and fiercely demanded which way.

"Either up the chimney or into some other part of the house," said Fanchette. "He was here a few minutes ago."

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 29, 1893.

THERE has been some talk in railroad circles the past week that the New Haven road might take into its control the Boston and Maine system.

WHILE the East is having delightful autumn weather the West is not so fortunate. At Huron, South Dakota, Monday morning, the mercury was 15° below freezing.

ROBBERIES of express trains have become so frequent in the West of late that several roads running out of Chicago have decided to arm the crews of the trains carrying express or mail cars with revolvers and Winchester rifles.

A MAN in Sullivan county, N. Y, had a vision one night about a year ago in which his departed wife appeared and informed him that he would be with her on November 7th, 1893, and he is now making his arrangements, proposes to see his own grave dug, etc.

THE managers for both of the leading aspirants for the Republican gubernatorial nominaation have been busy since the caucuses finding out which way the delegates stood. About a thousand are claimed for Greenhalge, while 800 are claimed for Pillsbury. As there are only 2114 in all, and Hart and Wolcott each have a following, it is evident that some of the delegates must have been counted twice.

THE railroad commissioners made their return on the Chester disaster last Friday, and find the foreman in charge of the work, Daniel Belville, immediately responsible for the fall of the bridge, but that the original responsibility must rest on the railroad company in not having exercised due supervision over the work. Now comes the interesting question of prosecution — Bellville or the railroad officials, or both? If the officials, who among them?

THE Democratic state convention at Boston Wednesday was devoid of incident, everything being done as predicted the evening before with one exception, the proposed candidate for auditor declining to run. The ticket as nominated is:

For Governor—John E. Russell of Leicester.
For Lieutenant Governor—James B. Carroll of Springfield.
For Secretary of State—James W. McDonald of Marlboro.
For Treasurer—Eben S. Stevens of Dudley.
For Attorney General—Charles S. Lilley of Lowell.
For Auditor—John T. Wheelwright of Boston.

A NOVEL order was issued by Judge Barker in the supreme judicial court at Boston Wednesday in connection with a breach of promise case which was about to be tried, that no report of the case or comment thereon should be made in the public newspapers until the close of the trial. There is considerable comment upon the action, and discussion as to the court's powers in the matter, though Judge Barker is credited with being learned in his profession and a cautious man. To some it seems as though the time had hardly arrived for the application of Russian censorship methods to the press in this country, at least so far as a mere report of the proceedings are concerned.

THE Boston Journal announces that with next Sunday it will begin the publication of a Sunday paper. The assurance that it will not be the greatest Sunday newspaper ever printed, and that the sixteen pages of the first issue will be increased only in response to the requirements of news and business, will insure for it a warm welcome with many people who have no liking for the multi-page papers which have been the result of managerial ambition, and the class of matter found in them. The Journal announces that its first care will be for the news, and its readers may be sure that they have it all and the best; carefully selected reading matter will be added, which, as all acquainted with the paper's policy know, will be wholesome and entertaining.

JAMES J. VAN ALLEN of Newport was nominated by President Cleveland the other day to be ambassador to Italy, and immediately it was claimed that his appointment was the result of a trade last fall by which the Democratic campaign fund was swelled $50,000 by Mr. Van Allen, the Italian ambassadorship being the equivalent. This is of course denied by Mr. Van Allen and Mr. Whitney, the manager of the campaign. The giving of money is admitted, and it is an interesting question whether Mr. Van Allen's "fitness" for the position would have been as speedily recognized had he kept that sum with the rest of his accumulations, for he is one of the millionaires of that summer resort. Some of the warmest friends of the administration protested against the appointment, and pledged the return of the money contributed, but the appointment was evidently preferred to the cash. What will be done with the name when it comes up in the Senate for confirmation remains to be seen.

PALMER NEWS.

THE WOMAN WAS TO BLAME.

So Says Grandfather Shaw, Who Eloped with Mrs. Bosquet.

Another chapter has been added to the sensation which came to light on the morning of May 2d, when the residents of the village were surprised to learn that George M. Shaw and Mrs. Louis Bosquet had left town the night before for parts unknown. Shaw was employed as brakeman on Conductor Sedgwick's train on the Ware River road, and is the father of five children. He has also been a grandfather for more than a year. Mr. and Mrs. Bosquet formerly lived in this village on Foundry street, and an intimacy sprang up between Shaw and Mrs. Bosquet as Shaw passed their residence daily in going to and from his work. Later he hired a room in the Bosquet house. The intimacy between the two soon aroused comment on the part of the neighbors, though no wrong was seen in it by the head of the house of Bosquet. On the first of April Mr. Bosquet received an appointment as warden of the town farm at Monson, and with his wife removed there. After that time it was noticed that Mrs. Bosquet had occasion to make frequent visits to Palmer, and many times when in this village was seen in Shaw's company. At one time they spent the day together in Springfield. They also stayed at one of the local hotels one night about a week before their departure, registering as man and wife. Before she bade adieu to Palmer Mrs. Bosquet obtained $25 from the town authorities at Monson, representing that it was needed by her husband for use at the farm. Soon after they went away Mrs. Bosquet evidently became tired of her newly-acquired partner, as she returned to Palmer only a few days afterward. After her arrival she was arrested and brought before the district court on the charge of adultery, in answer to which she entered the plea of not guilty and was bound over to the September term of the superior court in $500 bonds, which she secured. Nothing definite has been known of the whereabouts of Shaw until Tuesday evening, when he was seen on board the train which leaves here for the east at 9.13. The officers were notified and Wednesday morning Officer Alexander paid a visit to the Shaw homestead in West Brimfield, and returned on the 1.55 p. m. train with the prize. He was arraigned before the district court after his arrival, on a charge of adultery, to which he first entered a plea of guilty. After consultation with his attorney this plea was withdrawn and one of not guilty was substituted. He was placed under $500 bonds for appearance before the court to-morrow morning, which he obtained.

Shaw tells in substance the following story of the affair and his whereabouts since: The night before they left Mrs. Bosquet called him out of a saloon and they went to the Nassowanno House together. At the time he had no intention of eloping, but was persuaded to do so by Mrs. Bosquet. They took the 1.46 a. m. train to Springfield, changing there to a train bound farther west. At Utica Mrs. Bosquet resolved to return to Palmer, much to the dissatisfaction of Shaw, who thought she ought to stick by him as long as she had persuaded him to leave home. From there Shaw continued on to Cleveland, where he entered the employ of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road. After staying there a while he came back as far as Herkimer, N. Y., where he was employed as a mason. While living in the latter place he contracted malarial fever, and concluded to end up the business by returning to Palmer and facing the music. He was almost sure of being arrested upon his return, but thought it would be better to have the whole matter settled up. It was reported a few days ago that Mrs. Shaw was going to dispose of her household effects and would join her husband in the west. Mrs. Bosquet's trial has come before the superior court this week and was continued to the December term.

PRINCIPAL KNOX RESIGNS

To Accept a Much Better Position in Providence, R. I.

The announcement that Principal H. B. Knox ended his connection with the Palmer high school with the close of this afternoon's session will be a great surprise to Palmer people. In fact, the move was not known to Mr. Knox until this morning. He goes to Providence, R. I., to become professor of Latin and Greek in the Friends School, at a salary of $2200, subject to increase after one year, and will commence work there next Tuesday morning. The school has about 300 students and 20 instructors. The first overtures were made to Mr. Knox on Saturday of last week, and this morning he received a letter informing him that he would be engaged.

All friends of the Palmer high school will regret that Mr. Knox could not remain here, but it is unreasonable to ask a man of his ability to do so at the salary the place can pay. He came to the school in the fall of 1884, when it was at its lowest ebb, with only 27 scholars; by his efforts the attendance has gradually increased until the last five years has seen an average of over 80. The grade of the school has been raised year after year, and graduates have gone from it into every college in New England; its standard is such that nearly all the New England colleges now admit students on presentation of certificate of graduation. Mr. Knox has endeared himself to all students under his charge, and each and every one will be glad to learn of his advancement and will wish him every joy in whatever place he may be.

Not alone among the students was he popular, for he made friends with all with whom he came in contact; friends of the class which last a man as long as he lives. He is a member and earnest worker in the Congregational church and the Christian Endeavor society connected therewith, and his departure from these and the Sunday school will occasion much regret. He is a member of Thomas Lodge of Masons, and secretary of the order. Mrs. Knox and daughter will not immediately remove to Providence, remaining here for a few weeks.

Reception to a Former Palmer Pastor.

The parishioners of Rev. A. W. Weeks, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, who has recently accepted a call to the Dewey Street church at Worcester, gave him a reception at that place on Tuesday evening of last week, the following account of which is taken from the Worcester Telegram:—

Dewey street church people tendered a reception to Rev. A. W. Weeks, the new pastor, in the church, last evening. There were about 500 present. The parlors, where Mr. and Mrs. Weeks received, were handsomely decorated with asparagus, ferns, palms, golden-rod and potted plants, and were also handsomely furnished. Deacons L. M. Wakefield and W. B. Chamberlain, with their wives, stood with the pastor and his wife during the hour they received. After the formal ceremony, Rev. H. J. White of the Pleasant street church welcomed Mr. Weeks to the brotherhood of the Baptist churches of the city. On behalf of the Dewey street congregation Mr. Chamberlain extended a cordial welcome to the new pastor, and expressed the kindly feelings they all had toward him. In response, Mr. Weeks thanked them for their many expressions of kindness, and said he already felt quite at home among them. Worcester, he said, was his former residence, he having been a student at Worcester Academy years ago. Misses Etta Rice and L. Tilden welcomed the pastor on behalf of the Sunday school, and presented him with bouquets. Rev. D. W. Hoyt of Adams square church then pronounced the benediction. An hour of social intercourse followed, during which the church quartette, composed of W. H. Bixby, Mrs. W. H. Bixby, Mrs. C. L. Fisk and Leon Bliss, rendered several selections. One of the most artistic floral decorations was a pillow made of sweet peas, asters, heliotrope and snowdrops, with the word "Welcome" in the center.

Fare for the round trip, $5.

The throwing of rice is one of the inevitable sequences of the newly-married couple's departure on their wedding trip. The station agent at the union station does not "kick" when the custom is followed there to a moderate extent, although it necessitates considerable extra work when it is done in the waiting room, but when half a dozen pounds are scattered over the floor, as was the case a few days ago, necessitating the work of a couple of men about three hours to clean it up, he draws the line. On this occasion the most of the rice was thrown by boys, though they were old enough to know the difference between doing it in a decent manner and being so offensive as to arouse the ire of those waiting for the train.

A change which would be of benefit to the traveling public, particularly those who are strangers in the vicinity, might be made in the method of calling the departure of the 2.09 and 6.10 p. m. accommodation trains at the railroad station. They are called in the waiting room on their arrival, but each is sidetracked for about ten minutes to allow an express to pass. A stranger to the method, who has looked up the time his train leaves and happens to arrive at the station with five minutes to spare, which ordinarily is time enough, congratulates himself that he has no need to hurry and sits down to await the arrival of his train. Soon an express goes by without stopping; in a few moments he sees through the window another train pulling out from a side track, and on inquiry as to what it is learns that it is the one he has been waiting for, it having been standing on the track all the time. This frequently happens and of course does not leave the traveler in the most agreeable frame of mind. If the departure of these trains were to be announced immediately before they pulled out it would be greatly appreciated by the traveling public.

State Primary School Notes.

Judge McDaniels of Cambridge visited the school Monday.

The trustees held their monthly meeting at the school to-day.

Eight boys were received Wednesday from the Lyman School at Westboro.

The annual inventory is being taken by W. E. Breckenridge and J. B. Shaw of Palmer.

Mrs. C. Moulton of Palmer has presented the Boys' Improvement Club with a quantity of reading matter, which will be much appreciated.

Rev. Mr. Hatch of Monson gave a very interesting talk to the boys last Sunday. His subject was the boasting of Paul of his school days. He took for his text Acts 22:3.

Mr. Kempton having passed a very successful civil service examination, is to take the position as watchman. He will enter upon his new duties the first of October.

District Court.

These civil cases came up for trial Saturday: Thomas Blanchard vs. Mrs. Dora Parks, in which judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in the sum of $39, without costs; William Long vs. Mrs. C. H. M. Blanchard, judment rendered for the plaintiff, and judgment satisfied; the case of James W. Calkins vs. Mary J. Plimpton was continued without date; a case in action of contract was entered by Thomas H. Linnehan of New Haven, Ct., vs. D. J. Lawlor, and the defendant was defaulted and execution issued.

On Saturday morning Joseph H. Long and Amelia Gordon, for adultery, were held in $500 bonds for the superior court, in default of which they were sent to jail. — On Tuesday morning Dennis H. McCarthy of Monson paid a fine of $10 for assault upon William O'Connell, and was placed under $200 bonds to keep the peace for six months.

Oliver Barnish of Three Rivers paid a fine of $5 for drunkenness.——The case of John Sulick of Wales, charged with assault upon his wife, occupied the greater part of yesterday forenoon. Mrs. Sulick recited a long tale of woe regarding her unfortunate condition. Her spouse is Austrian by birth and came to Wales some five years ago. He was first employed upon her farm, and after a while suggested that he would like to marry his employer. Since then she claims he has been trying to get control of her property, also that he did not provide sufficiently for the family needs. The assault in question occurred two weeks ago Tuesday, when he shook her and threw her out of doors. He paid $7.35 for costs, and was ordered to give bonds in the sum of $200 to keep the peace for one year. The case was continued to Nov. 1st to allow him time to secure bonds. T. W. Kenefick appeared for the commonwealth and H. A. McFarland of Wales for the defendant.——This morning George Colgrove, on a charge of drunkenness continued from yesterday, was given a year on the state farm at Bridgewater. George Smith, on a charge of vagrancy continued from yesterday, was given a year at the same place.

The court furnished ten cases for trial before the grand jury, which is in session at Springfield this week. Four are appealed liquor cases, two for assault with dangerous weapon, two for adultery, one for breaking and entering and one for larceny from a building.

Frank Tarbox, a former resident, called on friends in town during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols have returned after an extended tour in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Blair of Springfield has been the guest of Mrs. F. A. Ruggles during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trickett have moved to Palmer, where they will reside for the present.

A large number of people from here attended the cattle show at Belchertown yesterday.

Miss Clara Green was bridesmaid at the wedding of one of her friends in Bradford Wednesday.

Charles Ruggles has been suffering from the effects of a cold in his eyes during the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Johnston have gone to Amherst, where the former is working on J. B. Brown's farm.

Station Agent Hillman sold 116 tickets to people who attended the cattle show at Belchertown yesterday.

Mrs. J. W. Cheney and sister, Miss Mattie Goshen, attended the musical festival at Worcester yesterday.

Mr. Korffe is suffering from an injury to one of his limbs, which he hurt by falling down an embankment.

Those who have flower gardens are obliged to cover their plants nights, to protect them from the frost.

The new trotting park on East Main street is almost completed, and several horsemen have been exercising their animals there during the week.

Lewis Smart, who severely injured his hand with an ax while lathing in Palmer one day last week, has recovered sufficiently to attend to his duties again.

James Wilson had a narrow escape from being badly injured one day this week while going the round on his order wagon. It seems that the horse stumbled and fell, breaking one of the shafts and the crossbar of the vehicle, and Mr. Wilson, in an endeavor to control the animal, became entangled in the harness; however, with prompt aid from a few men he came out of the accident unscathed.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo L. Squier Celebrate Their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

It is seldom that two persons are permitted to round out 50 years in the companionship of each other, yet the completion of such a period was pleasantly celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo L. Squier on Wednesday. Mr. Squier was one of twelve children, and was born at what is now Conant's Mill, a part of the house in which his parents resided being still standing, though it has been much changed. He lived in Monson until 20 years of age, when he went with his parents to Palmer, his father building for a residence the structure on Main street now occupied by J. B. Shaw as a store, its location being the same as at present. There he learned the foundry trade, and worked with his brother, the late John A. Squier of Palmer, until 1859, when he purchased the farm on which he now resides, on the road from Colton Hollow to Hampden, there being about 175 acres. On September 27th, 1843, while at Palmer, he married Adaline Stacy, whose birthplace and home was only about one-fourth mile from the place now occupied by the couple. They have three children, Edwin L., freight agent of the Connecticut River division of the Boston and Maine railroad at Holyoke, John P., who is in the office of the road at the same place, and Eugene A., bookkeeper for J. and H. Duckworth of Springfield. Mr. Squier has never been prominently connected with political affairs, though for 14 years previous to 1887 he was a member of the school committee of the town. Of the dozen children of which Mr. Squier was one, eight are still living, six sisters and one brother.

Wednesday afternoon about 80 friends gathered in celebration of the event, coming from Boston, Springfield, Holyoke, Hampden, Chicago, Ill., and other places. The house was elaborately trimmed with golden-rod and cut flowers. Their three sons were present, with eight grandchildren, but of the seven brothers and sisters of Mr. Squier, only one was there, Mrs. M. E. Munger of Chicago. The time from 2 to 6 was pleasantly spent, Fairbanks of Springfield catering for the company. A golden wedding album was presented, in which were written the names of the couple in whose honor the gathering was held, the names of the children and grandchildren, followed by the names of the guests present. Mr. and Mrs. Squier were the recipients of numerous handsome and valuable gifts, including a French clock, a crayon portrait group of five of the grandchildren, pair of gold napkin rings, several souvenir spoons, besides other articles of gold and silver, with several pieces of valuable china and a well-filled purse of money. The following original poem was read by the author, Miss Olive M. Squier of Holyoke, the oldest grandchild:

Friends and neighbors to-day are gathered,
Happy with you here to be,
Who have fifty years together
Struggled on life's stormy sea.

Fifty years of joy and sorrow,
Have from you forever passed;
Fifty years of shade and sunshine,—
These have come and gone; how fast!

Many have been the days of gladness,
Many the blessings you have had;
Few the days of trial and sorrow
Through which you and yours have led.

Three, the sons whom God has given you,
Here to-day, beside you stand;
Wishing for you the greatest blessings;
Loyal both with heart and hand.

Few the circles that remain unbroken
For fifty years as now has thine:
Children and grandchildren now around you,
None have passed to the other clime.

Some of the friends to-day now greet you,
Who fifty years ago were at your side.
Still, you miss familiar faces;
Some, far away; others, beyond the tide.

Then, on yonder hill the schoolhouse stood,
Long since decayed and passed away,
Where both obeyed the master's word
And stored up knowledge for a later day.

And nearer yet the house of God
Which stood there long before your day,
Where children slept through sermons long,
And parents learned how they should pray.

This, too, has passed from earth away,
(With many more we might relate)
Fire claimed its own one pleasant night,
And settled up the mixed estate.

Few are the neighbors here with you now,
Who as neighbors fifty years you had
To smooth and cheer life's rugged path:
The thought of those now gone makes you sad.

May those who remain to greet you now,
As you journey nearer the other shore,
Be as true in the future as they have in the past—
You may ask as much, but can expect no more.

Though you are not called to anchor,
Yet you are near the other shore,
Hands that once were strong and steady
Tremblingly now ply the oar.

Soon, ah, soon, some blissful morning,
Or within the hush of night,
You will hear the unseen pilot
Calling out "There's land in sight!"

Watch and pray that you an entrance
To that harbor may be given,
Which is guarded by the angels,
And is known to us as Heaven.

Gould—Hobert.

The marriage of Miss Pamelia Gould and Henry Hobert took place in St. Patrick's church Wednesday at 4.30 p. m., Rev. Father Mullins performing the ceremony. The bride wore a very handsome dress of cream cashmere, trimmed with silk lace and ribbon, and silk illusion veil. The bridesmaid, Miss Ora Parent of Northampton, wore a pretty dress of cream hop-sacking, trimmed with pink ribbon. The best man was Joseph Dumphy. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gould, with about thirty-five present. Mr. and Mrs. Hobert are spending a few days at Northampton, and will go to housekeeping on their return in the upper tenement of Mr. Gould's house. The Misses Parent of Northanton were among the out-of-town guests at the wedding.

Robert Cushman is at the World's Fair.

Miss Mollie Scannell is visiting friends in Boston.

Miss Eliza Crowley is spending the week in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Buffington spent Sunday in Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Fosket spent a part of the week in Worcester.

Arthur T. Robinson has returned to the Albany Medical College.

Work is being pushed rapidly on the new schoolhouse on State street.

Mrs. F. S. Hatch and children will return from their vacation Saturday.

Misses Julia and Kate Leary are visiting friends in Boston and Taunton.

A little child of Manuel Fozzy died Monday and was buried Wednesday.

Gilbert Fosket has his sister, Mrs. Geo. Hobbs, as a guest for a few days.

Workmen are preparing the curbing south of Roger's Bros. store for a railing.

Mrs. J. C. Wing of Palmer has been the guest of Mrs. W. K. Flynt this week.

Miss Grace Leonard of Stafford spent Tuesday with her aunt, Miss Eliza Smith.

Mrs. Bragg and Mrs. Hardendroff of Hartford are the guests of Mrs. Rufus Fay.

William Meacham attended the reunion of his regiment at Hartford, Wednesday.

Mrs. H. H. Hitchcock of Warren is the guest of Mrs. Wm. Smith on High street.

John McGuire has sold his bay family driving horse to Solomon Pierce of Ware.

Mrs. William Cavanaugh, who has been at the World's Fair for three weeks, has returned.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ricketts and son William L. have returned from the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bardway returned last Thursday evening from the World's Fair.

Mrs. W. Charles McMaster has been spending a few days at Marlboro, Waltham and Allston.

The Grange is arranging an excursion to the World's Fair, to leave one week from Monday.

Rev. Albert L. Squier of Wesleyan Academy returned Monday to his home here quite ill.

A day watchman has been placed in Reynolds's Old mill, in the person of Nicholas Hughes.

The Misses Williams have returned from New York, where they attended the millinery openings.

Mr. and Mrs. Brainerd Wright of Southbridge visited Mrs. Harriet C. Woods Monday and Tuesday.

Invitations are out for the marriage at Chicago of Charles Jordan, formerly of Monson, to take place Oct. 5.

Charles Moulton of Westboro began work as bookkeeper for the R. M. Reynolds straw works last Satuday.

Rev. W. H. Marble left the World's Fair for home Thursday, some time earlier than he expected to leave.

Mr. and Mrs. George H Foskit and Charles R. Buffington expect to leave Monday for the World's Fair.

L. C. Flynt starts to-night for the World's Fair, accompanied by Mrs. King and Mrs. Dewey of Springfield.

Mrs. May Munsell of Springfield, who has been the guest of Miss Addie Buffington, has returned to her home.

Mrs. Lillian Gilbert and child of Ware, who have been visiting Frank D. Beach, have returned to their home.

The young people of the Universalist church gave a supper and very pleasing entertainment Tuesday evening.

The presiding elder of the Springfield district of Methodist churches will preach in the Methodist church next Sunday.

The buzz and whirr of machinery is again heard at the shop of Heimann & Lichten, and gives hope to the straw workers.

Carlos M. Gage and George H. Foskit have been appointed commissioners of the insolvent estate of the late Gideon S. Moore.

The annual reunion of the 27th Mass. Reg. will be held in G. A. R. Hall, Springfield, Tuesday, Oct. 10. Business meeting at 11 o'clock a. m.

John Butler expects to move his family from the Reed place on the Stafford road to the Robbins farm, recently purchased by Joel Thompson.

C. C. Keep returned from his wedding tour last week, but his trip ended in a somewhat unfortunate manner, as he lost a valuable horse by colic on the night of his return.

A number of little people of the Methodist church who are interested in mission work, and who hold a meeting one afternoon each month, are to give an entertainment in the vestry this evening. During the evening the "mite boxes" will be opened.

Mrs. Moriarty, an aged woman living on the Palmer road, died Sunday after a short illness. She was the mother of twelve children, only one of whom, Miss Maggie, survives her. The burial, which took place from St. Patrick's church, was at Thorndike.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach next Sunday morning on "Our Homes, and How to Improve Them." He will preach on some subject relative to the home on the first Sunday of every month. All are invited to all of the services.

Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., held it regular meeting Monday evening. Besides the usual formula of business the members were entertained by a very interesting description of Comrade W. J. Ricketts's trip to the World's Fair and Indianapolis. The post has made a liberal addition to the monument fund of the late Comrade A. C. Munroe, assistant adjutant of the Mass. department of the G. A. R.

George D. Brainerd died at his home in South Monson of consumption Wednesday evening, after several months' illness. Mr. Brainerd spent the greater part of his life in South Hadley, coming to Monson about four years ago, where for three seasons he was employed in the South straw shop. He spent the latter part of the past winter and spring in the South, hoping to build up his health. He was a member of the Congregational church, a man of strong moral courage, and made many friends during his stay in town. He was about 33, and leaves a widow and two children. After prayer at the house this morning, the body was taken to South Hadley for burial.

Academy Notes.

The meeting of the Western Massachusetts Athletic Association, of which this academy is a member, was held last Saturday in Amherst, three schools being represented, Springfield, Amherst and Monson, the latter by the president, Dennis J. McCarthy, P. G. An assessment of $10 was levied on each school except Amherst to pay for the prize medals won at the field meet last June. Each tied contestant in the pole vault is to receive a gold medal, and each of the two contestants for second prize in the standing high jump is to receive a silver medal.—The baseball game at Stafford Springs last week was rather disastrous to the academy nine, owing to the fact that their pitcher, Shea of Bondsville, was not able to play. The game to-morrow promises to turn the tables.—Another of the class of '92 has entered college. W. F. Bissell, who is known to all the townspeople, has joined the three others at Amherst.—The Philomathean Society meets this evening at 7 o'clock, and the following is the programme: Music; recitation, Miss Mabel Tucker; debate, "Resolved, that rhetoricals in the sense of declamations are of no advantage to the student," affirmative, Miss Carrie Chapin, negative, Miss Myrtis Perrin; music; reading, Miss Grace S. Cushman.—The Linophilian Society held its meeting last Friday evening, a large number being in attendance, including many visitors from the sister society. The debate was warmly contested, and resulted in a tie. The next meeting will be held next Friday evening, with the following programme: Reading, E. B. Flint; debate, "Resolved, that it is easier to be good than to seem good," affirmative, Leo R. Burrows, negative, James Closson; essay, Carl M. Blair.

GLENDALE.

Richard Davis, who gave the name of Richard Frost, stole a bicycle from Alvin M. Seaver last Saturday night and attempted to sell it to an officer in Springfield, by whom he was locked up. He will spend some time at the reform school in consequence.

BRIMFIELD.

BELCHERTOWN.

The 46th Massachusetts regiment held its 21st annual reunion at Belchertown last Saturday, 150 members being present. E. J. Griggs post was the entertainer, and afetr the arrival of the visitors formed in front of the Grand Army hall and escorted them to the town hall. Fernando Shaw as officer of the day led the procession, and music was furnished by the Bondsville drum corps. Dinner was served at the Belcher House at 1.30, 175 sitting down. Remarks were made by Col. W. S. Shurtleff of Springfield, Capt. F. D. Lincoln of Brimfield and others. At the business meeting in the town hall, these officers were elected: President, Col. W. S. Shurtleff; vice-presidents, Col. L. B. Walkley, Major S. B. Spooner, Lieuts. Gideon Wells, W. S. Loomis and R. De Witt, Capts. A. Campbell, J. M. Justin, R. H. Conwell, F. D. Lincoln, F. C. Cook and John Avery and Sergeant E. G. Heath; secretary, A. S. Byrant; treasurer, George W. Turner. The time and place of holding the next annual reunion was left with the executive committee, who were instructed to fix upon a date as near the 25th of September as practicable.

WEST WARREN.

Thomas McCrea is very sick from dogwood poisoning.

Mrs. Case and baby of Holyoke are visiting at Mrs. E. M. Johnson's.

Mrs. Albert Converse has returned from a visit with friends in Boston.

There are themes which require the prismatic powers of language; but is doubtful if the wealth of words that lie buried in the pages of Noah Webster are enough to evoke the melodies when it comes to the beauties of bonnets
the rhapsodies in wraps
the jewels in jackets
the confections in capes
the delights in dress stuffs of this season. Only dreams could invent some of them. An hour or two here will give you such a notion of them as can be got in no other way.

Already there is a rush for the new wraps and jackets and capes. It's not to be wondered at though. It's hard to see the new styles without buying.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recomendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

THE STORY OF A DOG.

The tourist who visits the region of Lower Plaza, N. M., will see among other things, as he drives along the trail from the railroad a grave with a thick headboard on which is painted the one word, "Phantom."

"It's only a dog's grave," the guide will explain, "but I reckon he'd more sense than some men."

Phantom was the property of Bernard Wisner, a cowboy living in the Datil mountains some years ago, but he was buried near the home of Daniel Chapman, whose wife was the sister of Wisner. Mrs. Chapman, when her brother first got the dog, had a hearty dislike for it. It was a big mongrel, with hound blood predominating, and, like all mongrel hounds, it had an enormous appetite that was never so well satisfied as with food stolen from somebody's kitchen.

For many offenses of this kind Mrs. Chapman had good reason to complain, and she would have taken the winchester and shot the hateful brute on more than one occasion but for two reasons. It was a very good hunting dog, and it would now and then play with the baby when she wanted to do the housework—come over from her brother's house a mile away as if for the express purpose of having a romp with the little tot of three.

However, the dog's manner kept growing worse, and one day when she saw it come sneaking around the corral she started for the gun, but stopped half-way because she was reminded by the sight of the dog that the little one had not been about the house for an hour or two, perhaps more, so far as she could remember. So she ran out of the house quickly without the gun and called aloud:

"Baby! Baby!"

Then she listened and grew faint, for she heard no reply, and fainter still when she remembered that her husband had told her of seeing a panther's tracks down in the hollow near by. To think of this was to send her flying toward the hollow, but no baby or trace of it was to be found, although she looked behind every one of the scattered pines and cedars growing there. Then she came running back to the house, ringing her hands and calling "Baby" distractedly. She found the dog standing right beside the door, but she would not have noticed him, she was so near wild about the baby, only for the fact that he stood looking intently at her instead of taking to his heels with his tail between his legs, as he always done when she came toward him.

Even as it was, she paid little attention to the dog, but ran hither and yon about the house and corral and horse-shed, crying and calling the child, until at last she saw the dog come square before her, and after a grave look into her face start running around the house with his nose to the ground. She remembered afterward that he circled around the house two or three times and then disappeared, but by that time her fears had so overcome her that she fell headlong on the floor in a faint, and there she lay, nobody knows how long.

When she came to her senses, the dog was licking her face, and at once began to caper about and bark in extraordinary fashion when she opened her eyes and sat up. Then he ran out the door and stopped and looked back, and directly came back and grabbed the skirt of her dress, which he pulled so hard that he tore it. Then she picked up a club and drove the dog out of the house, and when her burst of anger was over fainted again at the thought of the lost baby. When she revived this time, she was too weak to get up, but she saw that the dog was still acting in the same unusual fashion she had noticed before. A little later the sound of horse's hoofs gladdened her ears, and with a last effort she got up, staggered out the door, saw her husband as he jumped from his horse, and, gasping out the words that "Baby is lost," fainted for the third time.

Chapman carried the woman to the bed, took one look around the room in order to assure himself that he had rightly understood what she had said, and then grabbing the winchester said to the dog:

"Hi, Phantom! where's Baby?"

"Wow!" replied the dog, and started away on a lope that kept Dan humping himself to equal. The trail zigzagged about for nearly half a mile, then crossed a broken lava bed and ran off down a draw to the creek valley. Had any other dog than Phantom been on the trail Dan would have not believed the child could have gone that way, but he banked on Phantom and kept trotting along until at last a thicket was reached just two miles and a half from him. Into the thicket the dog plunged by what was really a sort of tunnel through the brush, and Chapman had to get down on his hands and knees to follow. Two rods in he came to an opening, and there on the dry sod lay the baby fast asleep. It was apparently in the den of some wild animal.

As Dan picked up the child the growl of the dog made him look around. Phantom was standing over the dead body of a recently killed coyote.

Phantom died of old age last spring, and was buried with many tears near the public highway, where all who pass can see it. It was only a dog that was buried there; but, then, as the cowboys say, "I reckon he'd more sense than some men."—Cor. New York Sun.

A WESTERN TRAGEDY.—The saunterer has a friend on the staff of a Western newspaper with whom he often exchanges interesting clippings. The latest bit received at this office was the following, cut from a small paper published in North Dakota: "The many friends of Mrs. E—— will be pleased to learn that she is not in serious danger, as the shock is not so severe as at first supposed. The particulars of the unfortunate affair are interesting. It seems that Mrs. E——, while going upstairs, saw a mouse run behind a barrel. Her cries were heard by the hired man, who hastened to the scene armed with his gun and followed by his faithful bulldog. Mrs. E—— then took courage and poked the barrel with her broom. The mouse ran out, the dog started in pursuit, the hired man fired, the dog dropped dead, Mrs. E—— fainted, and the hired man, thinking he had killed her and that he would be arrested for murder, took to his heels and has not been heard of since. The mouse escaped."—Boston Budget.

NONE OF THEM HAD HOMES.—A wellknown broker was saying last night that a few days ago he had been engaged at his office [that's what he said] until far into the morning. "I boarded a car," he said, "at Madison street. At Congress street a crowd of people got on and filled the car. As we proceeded several other passengers entered and had to stand, among them an old Irishman.

"As street after street was passed and not a single seat was vacated a comical look of weariness stole over his face, until at last, just as we passed Twenty-Second street, he could stand it no longer, and looking slowly around the car, he said: 'For the love of heaven, is there none of yorse have homes."—Chicago Post.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulas and testimonials. Address, F. J. A Perfect Cure

Mr. Joel H. Austin is a man very highly esteemed by all who know him. He is now pension attorney at Goshen, Ind., and was for 20 years a Baptist missionary minister. He says: "I suffered years with swelling of my limbs, at times very painful, especially at night. I could not sleep. I have taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and for weeks there has not been any swelling of my feet and limbs. I have also suffered for years with catarrh in the head, which was working down into my lungs. Since trying Hood's Sarsaparilla the pain in my head has stopped and I am positive of a perfect cure." Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

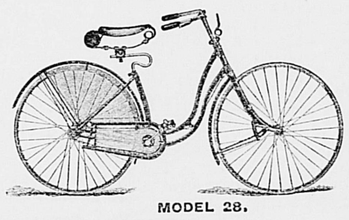
MODEL 27.



MODEL 28.

BEAUTIES, AREN'T THEY?

u can have them with cushion tires at $110 each, or with pneumatic tires at $115 and $125 each, cash, according to the quality of the tires.

The tire on the $125 machine is our best Columbia pneumatic, the best and most expensive tire to manufacture ever used on a bicycle, fully guaranteed against puncture for the year; moreover, we guarantee the whole machine from rim to hub, from handle bar to pedal.

HOW TO GET ONE.

Go to our nearest agent. If you don't know who or where he is, write to us and we will tell you, satisfy him of your honorable intentions and ability to pay, pay $25 in cash and arrange to pay the balance within one year. This is an easy way to possess a bicycle worth two or three of the fourth grade machines which are hawked about in auction rooms. If you wish to take advantage of this offer you should attend to the matter at once, as we have but a few of them.

You are welcome to our catalogue, it is a beautiful little book, beautifully illustrated. Call on our agents for free copy, or send us two two-cent stamps for postage and we will mail it.

HER FIRST EXPERIENCE.

This is what Mrs. Gen. Grant says of her first dinner-giving:

"Imagine my husband's inviting four or five of the officers to dine with us at our first dinner! Of course he had to withdraw the invitation, for how did I know that Hannah understood cooking? He was amused at my real dismay.

"'I thought everybody knew how to cook—I do,' he said, 'and many a savory mess I have helped to make at West Point. I have roasted apples, and sometimes even ventured on roasting a fowl.'"

"When I inquired when and how, he told me, with boyish pleasure, 'The potatoes, beef, etc., we fellows brought from the mess-hall(now Grant Hall) in our caps. The apples were usually the result of a foraging party to old Kingsley's garden.'

"'And the fowls, Ulysses, where did they come from?' I asked.

"Oh, usually from Col. Delfield's coops."

"At my expression of horror at this really dreadful admission, he said: 'Do not be alarmed; I was not adroit enough to be of these parties, but I did both help cook and eat those wonderful suppers.'

So of course he thought any one could cook. Hannah proved, to my great satisfaction, a household treasure.

"The officers were asked to come the next day, when I had much pleasure, though I felt some responsibility in arranging the appointments of my pretty table, seeing that all were properly placed, and remembering with loving pride the well-served table of my father's house.

"Well, the officers came, and to my smiling welcome they said: 'Then we can stay to-day, can we? Everything is right, is it? And Hannah really knows how to cook, does she?'

"Only imagine, the lieutenants had told all these men that they could not come to dinner because Mrs. Grant was not sure that Hannah knew anything about cooking, and would like to have a trial dinner first. How they all loved to tease me ever after when he would ask any of them to dine with us! They would timidly peep in at the door, and ask, 'It is all right?' or 'Shall we come next time?'"

WHY THE GUIDE LIKED HER.

Haven't written up my diary for days. So enormously busy. This camp life is entirely entrancing! Had I my way, I would never go back to New York, or long petticoats, or civilization, but would build myself a hut in these woods, wear a coat, cap and leggins of fur, and go hunting with Jake next winter in the snow. Jake and I have become the dearest friends in this short time. Mr. Van Rensselaer tells me that, ordinarily, this lank, blue-eyed, kindly-faced old giant of the mountains professes an aboriginal contempt for women-kind. Even Dolly and Mrs. Van Rensselaer he treats with paternal tolerance, but I am permitted to bask in the sunlight of his favor. He likes me because I am not afraid of a horse or gun; because I have strong wrists at paddling and a consuming desire to kill a deer. He has taken my education in hand and taught me how to build an open-air fire and how to cook on it, how to trail my paddle through the water without a sound, how to cook on it, how to cook a fish on two sticks, and how to read the signs of animals' tracks in the earth-mold. He lets me go jolting with him in the rude mountain wagon to the village, miles away, and he depends on me to catch the fish for our dinners. He also delights in my ability to "pick er banjer," and he assures me I'm "the right sort."—Demorest's Magazine.

NO DOCTOR'S BILLS IN JAPAN.—When a rich man calls in a physician he does not expect that he will be presented a bill for medical services. In fact, no such thing as a doctor's bill is known in Japan, although nearly all the other modern practices are in vogue there. The doctor never asks for his fee. The strict honesty of the people does not make this necessary. When he is through with a patient a present is made to him of whatever sum the patient or his friends may deem to be just compensation. The doctor is supposed to smile, take the fee, bow and thank his patron.—Interview with a Japanese.

Doctors Astonished.

Something They Cannot Understand or Explain.

It Makes Even the Medical Fraternity Open Its Eyes.

If This is Not a Wonder Worker We Should Like to Know What Is.

Doctors are surprised at any cure of paralysis, but there is one form of paralysis which has been pronounced absolutely incurable—locomotor ataxia. This is indeed, the most serious and dreaded of all nervous difficulties.

Having so long pronounced this disease incurable, the astonishment, not to say amazement, of the doctors can be imagined when they learned from Mr. John H. Golding who resides at 166 Christopher street, New York city, the following wonderful facts:

"I was taken six months ago with locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis. The numbness of limbs and dizziness rapidly increased until I could not walk or stand without assistance; could not button my clothes or dress myself without help.

"On the sixth day of October I commenced taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and have taken four bottles and can now walk without a cane, and am rapidly gaining every day.

"The numbness has almost completely left my limbs and I feel first rate. I eat and sleep well, and I can recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, since I know that it has saved my life.

"I was refused admittance into St. John's Hospital because they said my case was incurable.

"But Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has done its work well. It is the wonder of my friends that I am alive to-day, and when I tell them that this medicine cured me when the doctors had pronounced my case incurable, they say it was a miracle.

MR. JOHN H. GOLDING.

"I was two months under doctors' hands and getting worse. I was discouraged when I began to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. But to-day I am well. A week ago I walked eight miles and felt no bad results.

"I am now feeling like a new man, my nerves are strong and I feel happy. I hope that this will be received by all suffering from disease."

It does really seem that there is no disease which baffles this marvellous remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It certainly does seem to cure almost everything, and if it will cure a terrible disease like the above, heretofore pronounced absolutely incurable by doctors, how much more certainly and surely will it cure all the ordinary complaints of life. If you are sick you are not wise if you do not give this health restorer a trial. It is truly the greatest curer of disease in existence. Druggists keep it for $1.00 and it is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

Physicians have been everywhere surprised at its wonderful powers to cure disease and they unhesitatingly recommend sufferers from ill-health to use it, because it is the discovery and prescription of a well-known physician, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple place, Boston, Mass., the successful specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Remember, son, that the world is older than you by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself that their feet stuck out of the dormer windows; that when they died the old globe went wagging on and not one man in ten million went to the funeral, or even head of the death. Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can, without blowing the packing out of your cylinder heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it. And don't imagine a thing is so, simply because you say it is. Don't be to sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do. The world has great need of young men, but no greater need than the young men have of it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money, they are more stylish, your moustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier, oh, far prettier, than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and his homely, scrambling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of the bank in five minutes than you could get out of a ream of paper and a copper plate signature in six months. Young men are useful, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties, son. Oh, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before. Don't be so modest as to shut yourself clear out; but don't be so fresh you will have to be put away to keep from spoiling. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you, and if you are worth finding, they will find you. A diamond isn't as easily found as a quartz peddle, but people search for it all the more intently.—Robert J. Burdette.

HE HAD GIVEN HER SOMETHING.—A plainly dressed and simple minded looking young woman had applied for a summons. The magistrate, desiring to know what money she received for the support of herself and child, asked:

"Has he (the defendant) ever given you anything?"

"Yes," answered the woman. "A black eye a month ago, a punch in the head after that and 10 cents last week."

Amid an outburst of laughter the summons was granted, and the applicant left the court, apparently oblivious of the merriment she had occasioned.—Germantown Telegraph.

A STORY OF LOT'S WIFE.—A little five-year-old, who had been to Sunday school for the first time, came home puffed up with importance over what he had heard.

"Mamma," said he, "do you know about Lot's wife?"

"A little," she said; "but tell me what you know."

So the little fellow told his story very earnestly, becoming positively dramatic when he reached the climax, and said:

"And the angel of the Lord said unto Lot's wife, 'Skate for your life, and don't look back;' but she did look back and turned a somersault."

What the farmer boy sighs for is the last rows of summer.—Plain Dealer.

IN THE HUMAN BODY.

An interesting exhibit at the National Museum shows the physical ingredients which go to make up the average man weighing 154 pounds. A large glass jar holds the 96 pounds of pure water which his body contains. In other receptacles are three pounds of white of egg, a little less than 10 pounds of pure glue—without which it would be impossible to keep body and soul together—18½ pounds of fat, 8½ pounds of phosphate of iron, 1 pound of carbonate of lime, 2 ounces of sugar and starch, 7 ounces of fluoride of calcium, 6 ounces of phosphate of magnesia, and a little ordinary table salt. Divided up into his primary chemical elements the same man is found to contain 97 pounds of oxygen—enough to take up, under ordinary atmospheric pressure, the space of a room 10 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet high. His body also holds 15 pounds of hydrogen, which, under the same conditions, would occupy somewhat more than two such rooms as that described. To these must be added 3 pounds and 13 ounces of nitrogen. The carbon in the corpus of the individual referred to is represented by a foot cube of coal. It ought to be a diamond of the same size, because the stone is pure carbon, but the National Museum has not such a one in its possession. A row of bottles contain the other elements going to make up the man. These are 4 ounces of chloride, 2½ ounces of fluorine, 8 ounces of phosphorus, 2½ ounces of brimstone, 2½ ounces of sodium, 2½ ounces of potassium, one-tenth of an ounce of iron, 2 ounces of magnesium and 3 pounds and 13 ounces of calcium. Calcium, at present market rates, is worth $300 an ounce, so that the amount of it contained in one ordinary human body has a money value of $18,300. Few of our fellow-citizens realize that they are worth so much intrinsically.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Susie's mother sent her to Warren's the other day for some shoestrings. The little girl tipped the door latch and slowly walked up to the proprietor. "Mamma sent me down for a pair of shoestrings," and Susie fingered her pennies nervously as she looked into the dealer's face. Warren turned to a bunch of strings upon the wall and began to pull a couple out. Then he stopped. "How long does she want them?" Susie look fluttered. "I don't know, but I think she wants them to keep."—Boston Transcript.

Smothering Asthma!

SLEPT IN A CHAIR 40 YEARS!

Now Goes to Bed and "Sleeps Like a Child!"

We Challenge the World to Show a Parallel Case!

TO ANYONE WHO DOUBTS THE TRUTH OF MR. COBSON'S STATEMENT WE WOULD SAY, "INVESTIGATE." WE COURT THE MOST THOROUGH INVESTIGATION OF ALL OUR TESTIMONIALS.

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.,

GENTLEMEN:—I have been troubled with ASTHMA for 40 YEARS, suffering so badly as to be unable to lie down in bed for any length of time, being compelled to obtain what sleep I could get sitting in a chair.

I have tried Doctors and every medicine I could see or hear of without obtaining much relief. Last Spring I saw advertised and concluded to try it, though without much faith, but after taking a few doses, feeling easier at night I continued, and at the expiration of a few days COULD SLEEP IN A HORIZONTAL POSITION AS WELL AS A CHILD. Have never had any sleepy since. In consequence of which my general health has improved wonderfully. Have only taken two bottles.

I remain, yours respectfully,

Freedom, N. H. JOHN A. COBSON.

GENTS—I am personally acquainted with J. H. Corson and can assure you of his PERFECT RELIABILITY. Yours truly,

CHAS. W. HICKS,

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by foreing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A Friend

Wishes to speak through the Register of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of AYER'S PILLS. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills."—Boothbay (Me.) Register.

In Need

"Between the ages of five and fifteen I was troubled with a kind of salt rheum, or eruption, chiefly confined to the legs, and especially to the bend of the knee above the calf. Here running sores formed which would scab over, but would break immediately on moving the leg. My mother tried everything she could think of, but all was without avail. Although a child, I read in the papers about the beneficial effects of Ayer's Pills, and persuaded my mother to let me try them. With no great faith in the result, she procured and I began to use them, and soon noticed an improvement. Encouraged by this, I kept on till I took two boxes, when the sores disappeared and have never troubled me since."—H. Chipman, Real Estate Agent, Roanoke, Va.

"I suffered for years from stomach and kidney troubles, causing very severe pains in various parts of the body. None of the remedies I tried afforded me any relief until I began taking Ayer's Pills, and was cured."—Wm. Goddard, Notary Public, Five Lakes, Mich.

October.

How rainbow-clad the year walks forth
With queenly step upon the earth,
With eye serene she looks abroad,
Her work she sees and all is good.
The forest princely robes receives,
Inwrought with gold and crimson leaves,
With fairy tints and brilliant dyes
Like sunset's glory lighted skies.

Wood asters lift their starry eyes,
Blue gentians softly fringed uprise;
Ripe grapes with purpling lustre shine,
Where graceful droops the clinging vine,
In shadowy woods the brown nuts fall
As sweeps the wind through treetops tall;
The moss is green by shaded spring,
Where still the crystal waters sing.

The alder wears its scarlet beads,
The clematis its downy seeds,
The sumach's deepening ruby gleams,
The birch in hues of topaz beams;
In golden bars through leafy doors
The sunshine falls on forest floors,
While the warm air with balsam breathes
A spicy odor from the trees.

The softened light, the veiling haze,
The calm repose of autumn days,
Steal gently o'er the troubled breast,
Soothing earth's weary cares to rest.
A glorious crown the year puts on,
Its fruit matured, its harvest done;
A beauty lights the fading year
Like smiles the sainted dying wear.

THE VINDICATION OF SISTER BURTON.

Moss Hollow had a grievance.

That of itself was nothing strange, for a village without such a dispensation is as hard to realize as the islands of the blessed.

As usual, it was a woman who was making all the trouble—John Burton's wife—she that was Lucy Moors.

She was apparently losing interest in those good enterprises with which she had so long been actively identified; she had not been to the social gatherings for weeks; she had been rather slack in her church attendance for a year or more; and now it was actually two months if it was a day since she had shown her face at the Hollow, in church or out.

She was, therefore, apparently as indifferent to people as to principles.

To be sure, old Squire Burton had died, after a long illness, so long that the poor man almost thought that the Lord had forgotten him; and when the bell tolled ninety years one day everybody experienced a genuine surprise.

Then Grandma Burton lost her mind and became a child again, a veritable old baby, that had to be dressed and fed and tied into her chair all day long—her own rocking chair, where she had sung many a lullaby in her time.

And John Burton's wife cared for her most tenderly night and day for months, and never said she was weary or sick and tired of her life, as well she might have been.

The old woman woke with a joyful smile one morning, reached up both trembling hands—on one her wedding ring was shining—and crying out, "Oh, James, I am so glad," over the hills and far away she went, nobody knows where, to paradise.

And now, both old people having been—as everybody admitted—tenderly cared for in life, and piously buried at death, with a funeral sermon apiece, it did seem as if Sister Burton might get out into the world again and be like other folks; and, as she did not hurry all sorts of speculations were rife.

Old Mrs. Brown thought likely she was low spirited; she had always been a little strange; came honestly by it, too, for one of her uncles on her mother's side died insane or insolvent, she couldn't rightly recollect which.

The Widow Stanley hoped she didn't hurt her feelin's along of a remark she let drop about her bunnit. Such an unbecomin' thing as it was, and made her look yaller as a saffron bag, too. She had gone so far as to wonder why Sister Burton hadn't put on crape for the old folks, especially seein' they left John so well to do. For her part she thought Miss Burton was in duty bound to do it, and she just gave her a piece of her mind, too.

"Crape?" cried John Burton's wife, with wide open eyes. "I wear crape for them when they have just gone right into the Lord's own glory? Why, it is the best of all good things that could ever come to them. Dear, happy souls! I am so glad for them. It seems to me they must be just walkin' together all about holding hands."

"Just as if she knew what the Lord had laid out for them," said the shocked sister. "It sounded like sheer blasphemy to me, and it just made my blood run cold to hear it. Them dead and gone folks was sinners just like the rest on us. Why, the old man himself was suspended from churchfellowship more'n sixty years ago for goin' to a sleighride where there was supper and dancin' to wind up with. Don't tell me! I know it for a fact; and it's on the church book now. And I've seen it, too."

The ladies' circle felt aggrieved.

For years Mrs. Burton had been the greatest worker of them all. They missed the piles of well-made garments that fairly flew from under her slender fingers in days gone by.

And the stockings that woman had knit for the soldiers! Why, if they had been hung top to toe on the equator they would have reached half way round the globe.

Yes, a great worker, they all admitted; and such a mystery that now, with no old folks and no children, and nothing in the world to do, she should all at once fold her hands and sit down; a young, healthy woman like her, too; what had she ever done to break her health?

By common consent there was no need of it, and no sense in it; and, as occasion offered, they all meant to tell her so.

The village schoolmaster, who boarded around, was not without his views. As he was the remote descendant of a clergyman he was supposed to have inherited theology with his Roman nose, and his opinions were received with profound respect.

He thought Mrs. Burton's religious views tended toward ultraism; he had heard her say she thought there were people outside the church who would go to heaven—even Melissa Barnes.

Poor Melissa. She was only 17. And Mrs. Burton had been a mother to her when the whole world frowned. And when she died—for she said, truly, that she could never hold up her head again—it was John Burton's wife who went with her down to the deep waters and gave her into the Lord's own hands, no doubt.

Some contended that she was an out-and-out Spiritualist, because she had said, "How beautiful it was to think Grandpa Burton came back when grandma died. It seemed so much easier for the gentle soul to have him to go with her up to the golden gates."

The summer boarder at the postmaster's thought there might be a trace of Swedenborgianism in that. And as nobody really knew anything about such far away heresies it was all the more likely to be true.

The shepherd over this troubled flock was a young man, acting as temporary supply.

A newcomer, he had not met the offending Mrs. Burton, but so much had been said to him that he felt it to be plain duty to preach a sermon on the sin of staying away from church. In the course of his remarks he mentioned an excuse sometimes urged by certain vain and frivolous sisters—that they had no seasonable bonnets.

What he specially dwelt upon was the foolishness of committing so great a sin for so small an article—for it was a time when bonnets had suffered a partial eclipse, as it were; for his part, when a bonnet was so small one couldn't tell whether a sister was bareheaded or not, or whether she had it on wrong side to or not, and was trimmed so remarkably one could scarcely tell by the bonnet whether a sister was going out from church or coming in, he thought it made no difference whether the bonnet was in season or out of season.

All this, being aimed at Sister Burton, was lost, for, as usual, she was not at church.

Dr. Sims, being interviewed at every turn, said she was not ill, not as he knew of, so her last chance for mercy was gone. Only she lived so far from the hollow no one could conveniently investigate or remonstrate, for it was four miles or more, up hill all the way, a bad road except in midsummer, when it was delightful to creep up its cool and shady ways, where the blue harebell nodded and the wood thrush sung; but autumn found it muddy and disagreeable, and it was slippery and perilous in the winter snows.

Mr. Burton went down occasionally to store and post office and sometimes to church, but even he was not as regular as he had been in his father's time.

And the elderly woman said, with a sigh, that this was the way with children when the restraint was gone. Though, indeed, John Burton would hardly be classed with the young and giddy; a bashful man of 45, who had married the little schoolmistress a few years before.

To the oft repeated inquiries he always said: "Mrs. Burton would be down before long, he guessed." But the questioners thought he looked solemn and worried like, and it was surmised that there might be trouble at home; and family troubles, we all know, are second only to a church quarrel or a cabinet crisis.

It is rumored that some relative of Mrs. Burton had left her a large sum of money recently—some said $500, some $1000. Nobody knew, but it was a large sum, anyway, and Mr. Burton couldn't touch a cent of it, either, unless she chose to let him—and folks knew he had long wanted to buy the Widder Cocksen's medder lot, and Mrs. Burton was dead set against it. She'd rather have it in the bank where she could lay her hands on it any time.

All these things having been duly commented on, the ladies of the social circle decided that Mrs. Burton ought to be interviewed: first, by the minister; second, by a committee of ladies; third, by the brethren, if she proved unmanageable by the others. So the minister, like a plenipotentiary, went with full powers to treat.

Unfortunately it was the week before Thanksgiving, and on that day he was to be married. He had meant to keep it secret, but he had confidentially mentioned it to the deacon's widow, with whom he boarded, and she had imparted it with equal confidence to a few close friends, "Of course Brother Swan would not mind if a few of the good sisters knew it."

For this reason it was though Brother Swan's mind was more on the future than the present or past, for he really seemed to feel no interest in the Burtons. He only said he guessed he would come back with the birds in the spring.

So he packed his rusty portmanteau and whisked away for the wedding. But the ladies declared Mrs. Burton had just pulled wool over his eyes. What a shame! Such a nice young man, and the minister, too.

But then, it was just like a young man to be taken in by a pretty face, even if he were a minister. Some had always mistrusted that Mrs. Burton was a bit foxy.

In a happy moment they fell upon Aunt Sabrina Reed and implored her to pay Sister Burton a visit the very next time Mr. Burton came down.

She was a good little soul, Aunt Sabrina, who lives alone; one of the Lord's own poor, always pinching herself in small ways to help on the charities of Moss Hollow.

"I can't do much," she said to herself, "but I can use poor tea and cheap molasses and go without butter. If the good Lord had only made me like them small cherubs in the minister's picture, all head and wings, and no stomach to fill how handy it would be, and so economical!"

But, alas! her appetite always seemed to grow in proportion as her means decreased. As for Sister Burton—poor, dear lamb—Aunt Sabrina had know trouble herself, and she was glad of the chance to go; and she could come back easy enough, she said, if they didn't want her.

She filled her carpetbag with some of her choicest herbs, took an old dress and wore her best bombazine that had been willed to her by her great aunt in Dracut and set forth cheerfully with Brother Burton, who, all unsuspecting her secret mission, was heartily glad of her company.

It was two weeks before the annual meeting of the circle, and Aunt Sabrina was expected to return and make a report. But Aunt Sabrina, having ascended to the upper regions in the flesh, came back no more than Elijah of old.

When Mr. Burton finally appeared at the post office he said they were enjoying Aunt Sabrina's visit first rate and he guessed she would stop with them quite a spell.

Poor Aunt Sabrina! She had never been so comfortable in her life. She had a warm little bedroom off the sitting room, with a sunny south window full of blossoming plants; a soft bed—oh, how soft to her poor old bones; a bright rag carpet, to look cheerful to old eyes; a great, deep, cozy rocking chair, and a generous, open fireplace, with a cheery fire all day.

Why, it was like heaven to her, she said, over and over again, with happy tears in her faded eyes; and there was no more cheap molasses nor weak tea. And what good naps she had in the capacious rocking chair!

But, of course, the ladies felt that this was adding the last straw to their burden. It was resolved, therefore, to send a committee of good and wise men to deal with all three. Mr. Burton himself having now fallen under the ban of suspicion, as well as his wife and Sister Sabrina Reed.

It was fearful traveling. The snow had fallen and fallen and fallen again, until the roads were almost impassible. Fences were blotted out, leaving here and there black spots, where the tops of the post appeared like a line of floating buoys on the sea.

Somebody had floundered through with an ox team, and a freeze having followed the tracks of the oxen were hardened into many an icy pitfall, so that it was as much as one's life was worth to travel over the place where the road had been and it was with some misgivings that the three good and wise men started on their perilous errand.

They had all been made thoroughly aware of Sister Burton's alleged shortcomings—there was really no room for further conjecture, and they therefore refreshed their minds with various agricultural matters as they toiled along—such as the merits of triangular churns as compared with round ones, prospects of maple sugar and winter wheat, and some forebodings on the subject of oleomargarine, varied occasionally by one or more of them jumping out to balance the sleigh or to lead the horse over some dangerous place in the steep and slippery path.

They were rather tired, too, and were all well pleased when the cozy red farm house appeared, still at some distance away over the hills, shining in the afternoon sun like a beacon fire.

They turned then somewhat doubtfully to the matter in hand. Mr. Jones being the senior member, it was decidedly his place to open the subject to the family, while Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown, were to be the Aaron and Hur to stay his hands with appropriate remarks as they might seem to be required.

At last, all being arranged, they rode with becoming gravity to the offending house. Brother Burton had seen them toiling upwards for the last ten minutes. He met them with a cheerful face, although a little flushed, as though conscious of their errand and his own impending doom.

The good brethren thought among themselves that possibly he was secretly glad to have some sympathy and friendly counsel.

Meanwhile, Mr. Burton, mindful of hospitality, put their tired horses into the barn and gave them a generous feed of oats. Then he ushered them into the sunny kitchen, where the table was spread as if for company and the oven gave forth a savory smell of roast meat; but Mrs. Burton and Aunt Sabrina were nowhere to be seen. Doubtless, aware of their shortcomings, they had retreated to the uttermost limit of some interior apartment, and were tremblingly waiting to be summoned forth and dealt with.

"Take your things right off, brethren," said Mr. Burton, heartily. "Why, how pleasant this is; you are just in time for supper."

"We have come," said Brother Jones, not to be diverted from his errand, solemnly opening the meeting, "to inquire for Sister Burton and our Sister Sabrina Reed. They have been somewhat remiss of late."

"Oh, yes—yes, to be sure! Take some seats brethren," said Mr. Burton, rather flurriedly, offering the corpulent brother his wife's chair, which was altogether too small for him.

"My wife—oh, yes—well—er—the fact is—er—I guess I'll call Sister Sabrina," and he darted out of the room, his broad face beaming like the full moon at harvest time, while the three rusty black coats sat in a row, eyeing the table as three hungry crows might survey a freshly planted cornfield in April.

The door swung slowly open, as though pulled by unwilling hands. Instead of Sister Burton—whom they expected to see like a weeping willow on a monumental stone—Sister Sabrina Reed appeared, waxed almost fat with her good living, flushed and smiling—actually smiling in their faces.

The brethren started to their feet, and, if they had had time they would have been amazed and displeased at such brazen conduct.

But what? How is this? She was bringing something to the table; not a turkey, nor even a goose, nor a chicken—a lamb, rather, by the soft bleat.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Brother Jones leading the remarks as prearranged.

"Heavens and earth!" cried Brother Smith in his capacity as Aaron.

"Oh, mercy sakes!" ejaculated Brother Brown, as Hur mopped his face with his red and yellow bandana.

All three at once, "It's a baby!"

Sister Sabrina looked back over her shoulder and still mysteriously smiling, said, "You'd better come right out, Brother Burton."

And so, while their amazement was still at white heat, Brother Burton emerged, red and perspiring, but radiant, with—a second bundle wrapped in flannel like the first; and if any doubts had been experienced as to the nature of its contents two simultaneous cries from two small throats settled the question then and there and Sister Burton was vindicated.

"Good conscience!" cried Brother Jones, "It's twins!"

"O Lord, what fools!" exclaimed Brother Smith.

While Brother Brown fell in with the Doxology, "The Lord be praised!"

"You see how it is, brethren," said Mr. Burton, deprecatingly, his face glowing like a double heated furnace, giving the child an awkward swing as he spoke, and putting its life in imminent peril. "And she says," he contined, jerking his thumb over against the bedroom door, "that she hopes you'll all overlook it this time, and now, just set right down to supper."

That was some time ago, but Sister Sabrina still inhabits the sunny bedroom, and out of the old carpetbag of herbs she prepares many a healing draught for the Burton twins.

While Parson Swan, in his distant parish, smiles softly to himself sometimes, when he thinks of his first case of church discipline and the vindication of Sister Burton.

THREE GOOD ACTIONS.

An eminent New York divine, in the course of an address at a fraternity dinner recently, told this story: "I met a Brooklyn friend of mine a few days ago, and, as he appeared to be feeling in an unusually exuberant frame of mind, I asked him why. He replied that he was happy because he had done three good actions the day before. He had met a poor woman on the street. The woman had a sickly looking child in her arms, and she was weeping. Inquiry showed that she was weeping because she was convinced that her child was dying and unbaptized.

"'But,' said the Brooklyn man, 'why do you not have the child baptized?'

"'Because I have no money, and the fee for baptism is $1,' said the woman.

"Whereupon the good Samaritan handed the woman a $10 bill, gave her his address so that she could bring back the change—which she did return—and went his way.

"'That is one good action,' said the doctor. 'Now for the other two.'

"'Oh,' observed the Brooklyn man, 'they are all three in that one. First, I relieved the sorrows of a weeping woman: second, I assured the child of eternal salvation, and third—here he hesitated.

"'Yes?' said the Doctor. 'What was the third?'

"'Well,' said the Brooklyn man, 'the third was that I got rid of that vile counterfeit $10 bill I had been carrying for more than a year.'"—Harper's Magazine.

A WORLD WITHOUT MEN. Aunt Samantha is visiting at a house in Buffalo. She is an old maid and very devout, always concluding her prayers with the gloria.

"Why does she say such funny things in her prayers?" asked the little daughter of the house.

"Why, what does she say?" replied the fond mamma.

"I don't remember all she says, but she always ends with 'World without men, ah me."

"My little boy does very well at school," said Carraway. "He knows his 'letters, though he often gets B and R mixed up." "That's natural," commented Barker. "Up country most of the farmers do that. They say 'you be' for 'you are' half the time."—Harper's Bazar.

"I like you very much, Charlie, but I couldn't marry you. I don't think we could live happily together." "But, my dear Maude, reflect. After we were married I wouldn't be home very much."—Judge.

WOMAN'S CORNER.

SYSTEM AND ROUTINE IN HOUSEWORK.

The JOURNAL goes into a great many homes, and if each individual paper this week were to send back to the office a description of its first impression as it enters the house of its destination, what a "Home Album" the several narratives would form!

Here is a house of wealth where there are soft carpets and artistic furnishings and where quiet, well-trained servants, under systematic management keep every appointment of the house in perfect order. Here is a house where everything is in confusion; it may be the paint and floor are clean, but papers and books and articles of clothing are thrown about, and dirty dishes are piled up here and there in the kitchen, to draw flies and add to the discomfort of the household. Here is a house where there are only such furniture and furnishings as are in constant use; there are no ornaments, but all is severely plain and clean. Not a speck of dirt upon the painted floor, not a fleck of dust on table or chair. The books, if there are any, are ranged in book-cases; the newspapers and magazines are nowhere to be seen, and neatness reigns supreme. Here is a house whose appointments, although not rich are harmonious and in good taste. Every article is neat and in order, and although not scrubbed to that immaculate whiteness said to prevail in Dutch farmhouses, yet it is a house pretty, home-like and inviting; "not too good for human nature's daily food," not too well-kept to make people uncomfortable.

These four houses may be types of all the homes to which the JOURNAL goes, except possibly the place hardly to be called a home, where filth as well as confusion holds sway, and the purposes of this article are to call attention to the many untidy homes and to suggest systematic methods of housework for the untidy and the unsystematic housekeeper. The wealthy family has not a monopoly of artistic taste, good order and right methods. The poorest woman in any country town may have pleasant and attractive, although a humble, home.

A writer in the October Ladies' Home Journal says in an article about dressing, "The best knowledge for a woman to possess is how to be attractive and how to make her home the most delightful place in the world." Why should a woman try to make her home attractive? As well ask why she has a home or a husband, or why she should meet her obligation to God to do faithfully all that is given her to do.

An untidy house is a disgrace to its housekeeper; her friends despise her and pity her husband. An untidy house lowers the taste and the morals of its inmates; a man grows first cross and then unkind under its influence; boys are more likely to go astray who are reared in such a home, and girls go into homes of their own to propagate the mischief. I wish I had forceful utterance sufficient to arouse even one woman who is thus careless to a sense of the wrong she is doing herself and her family and the world outside by her habit of untidiness.

Talk with a young man about his future and before he has any special attachment, before he has even made a choice of his life work he will express the purpose to have "a home of my own." He sees his ideal in his father's house in, the house of a brother or a sister or a friend, a home that is attractive because in good taste and in good order rather than because it is richly adorned and expensive.

A young man idealizes young women. To his mind they are a race of being, unlike any other creatures; and, knowing that it is the woman that is the home maker, he fancies every young woman will make a beautiful home. How disappointed many a young man must be when the fair girl whom he believes will be the queen of his home becomes as a housekeeper a slouch or a drudge.

If we look for the causes of such housekeeping, we will find that the lack of any plan or system is the principal cause. The woman may in her girlhood have been

PALMER NEWS.

TRAIN WRECKING ATTEMPTED

On the New London Northern Road—Three Efforts, All Unsuccessful.

Three attempts have been made within as many weeks to cause a wreck on the New London Northern division of the Central Vermont road near Palmer. All of the attempts have been made at the same place and on the same train, the last passenger north at night, due at Palmer at 8 o'clock, and from these facts the officials think that they were the work of persons who have some fancied grievance against the road, or by some one with an insane desire to see a wreck. The place where the attempts were made is at the trestle near the road from Fay's bridge to the state primary school, about a mile south of this place, and the first attempt was on the night of September 19th, when two tramps came to the station and reported that they had found a pile of fence rails and large stones on the track. Employes of the road went to the place and removed the obstructions. There were some queer statements in the story told by the tramps, one being that they were on their way from Worcester. The point where the stuff was found would be considerably out of their way if their story were true, and it is thought they might have placed the obstructions there and then "discovered" them in the hope of getting a reward or a pass to some other point. The next attempt was not very serious, and was only a single fence rail laid across the tracks on the night of September 21st, the stick being so rotten that when struck by the locomotive it was easily broken. The last effort, and the one which came nearest to accomplishing the end evidently aimed at, was last Saturday night, when the train struck a couple of fence rails and a sleeper which had been placed in the end of the trestle nearest the village. The rails were long enough to reach down into the water and mud beneath, but the sleeper was stood with the end upon the stone abutment of the bridge. Fortunately thetimbers were old, and when the locomotive struck them they slivered off and the pieces were thrown one side, no harm being done. The railroad officials have endeavored to keep the matter quiet, but passengers on the Saturday night train told of it in other places, and the first news came to Palmer Sunday afternoon through outside sources.

LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATES.

Who Are Likely to be Nominated in the 10th Hampden District.

The republican convention for the 10th representative district will be held in the district court room in this village at noon on the 17th, and it is probable that a Palmer man will receive the nomination. By the understanding between the towns of the district the nomination comes to Palmer every other year. Last year Ludlow named the candidate and he was elected. Before that Palmer had the honor two years in succession, Brimfield withdrawing in her favor. Thers was a possibility that on account for this Brimfield might ask for the nomination this time, but no name will be presented from that town, and Holland is understood to have no desire to name the candidate. There are two candidates for the nomination, H. G. Loomis and H. P. Holden, quite a little work having been done for the former in the past week or ten days. Both have held town offices, and Mr. Holden is now chairman of the board of selectmen. Either would make a good man for the place. Mr. Loomis evidently has a lead as matters now stand, but there is still ten days before the convention, and the Palmer caucus has not yet been held.

The Democratic representative convention for the 10th Hampden district is called to meet in the court room in Palmer at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 17th, and the probability is that the naming of the candidate will be left to Palmer, and that C. K. Gamwell will again be the nominee. It was Ludlow's turn last year, but her claims were waived in favor of Palmer and the supposed stronger candidate. Mr. Haviland, who was the man Ludlow would have presented last year, is now postmaster, and so cannot enter the lists this year, though Dr. Hannum of that place is said to be a possible candidate.

IS NEWELL TAYLOR MARRIED?

His Housekeeper's Former Husband Thinks He Is.—"Let Him Prove It."

A few unpleasantries are cropping out in the household of Newell Taylor. Some years ago Mr. Taylor's wife was ill and he secured as housekeeper one Mrs. Albert D. Elmer of Greenfield. Mrs. Taylor died and the housekeeper has since retained her position. Several times the rumor has been around town of the marriage of Taylor and Mrs. Elmer. Lately Mr. Elmer appeared on the scene with a statement that he had had considerable family trouble with his wife and had secured a divorce which was not yet absolute. Ho also claims that Taylor, about two years ago, kidnapped his son, who is now employed by Henry D. Converse as driver of the street sprinkler. Elmer paid a visit to this village one Sunday some two months ago and stopped at Mrs. Coleman's. While there he aired his tale of woe. He also tried to prove the rumor of Taylor's marriage by an examination of the town records, but was unsuccessful. On the strength of the supposed abduction of the boy and, as he claims, the illegal marriage, Elmer placed an attachment for $500 upon the property of Taylor. Taylor states that he at one time, at the request of Mrs. Elmer, took a quantity of clothing to the boy, who at that time lived in Orange. Afterward Mrs. Elmer wrote to her son that if he needed anything more to write to a certain box in Palmer post office and he would receive an answer. The boy then ran away and looked up the lessee of the post office box. He has since stayed in town, and has no desire to go back to his father. In regard to his marriage, Taylor says "Let them prove it if they can."

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

Possibly Another Contest Between Messrs. Brainerd and Buck.

Sheriff W. H. Brainerd of Palmer, who was chosen to fill the vacancy in the board of county commissioners caused by the death of Lewis F. Root of Westfield, is a candidate for the nomination for county commissioner on the Republican ticket. Mr. Brainerd would fill the office acceptably, without doubt, as his work on the board during the time to which he was chosen testifies. Holyoke, however, has a candidate for the place, and that city somehow has the reputation of scooping pretty much everything which it makes up its mind it wants. However, Mr. Brainerd's friends will see that he makes a good showing in the convention, if he does not secure the nomination.

On the Democratic ticket friends of G. E. Buck of this place would like a chance to vote for him for the same office, but again Holyoke is understood to have longing eyes in the same direction, and there is no knowing what the outcome of the convention will be. Should both Palmer men be fortunate enough to be successful, it would renew the contest of last fall, when Messrs. Brainerd and Buck ran against each other for special commissioner, the former being the winner.

Local Cases in the Superior Court.

Charles G. Field, who assaulted S. Wilson Lawrence last July, was tried before the superior court at Springfield this week. He told his own story in the court, saying that he was hired by Mr. Lawrence to pitch hay, and that Mr. Lawrence called him names and assaulted him. He said that he was born in Virginia, but had wandered all over the country since. His trial was short, and he was sentenced to five years in state prison. Amelia Gordon and Joseph H. Long pleaded guilty to a charge of adultery. Long was given seven months in the house of correction, and Mrs. Gordon will live there the next six month. Isaac Newhall pleaded guilty to larceny from the house occupied by E. G. Bass and S. M. Nichols near the state primary school.

The following cases of local interest was entered in the superior court at Springfield Monday: William Barry of Chicopee wants $6000 for injuries received while at work for the Flynt Building and Construction Co. at Wellesley; Clark & Hastings against Frank R. McFarland of Monson for $1000; O. W. Roberts of Springfield against H. W. Cleveland of Ware for $300; all actions of contract.

The second meeting will be held Oct. 20th in the Baptist church. Everybody invited.

At the meeting of the town and district school superintendents association in Springfield last Saturday Superintendent Small of the Palmer schools was one of the speakers on the topic "Enrichment of the grammar school course." He was also one of a committee appointed to appear before the next Legislative educational committee to secure needed changes in the educational laws. Mr. Small will also speak on "School supervision; ends to be attained; difficulties to be encountered," at the institute in Springfield next Wednesday.

The registrars of voters will be in session at the following places and dates for the purpose of revising the list of voters: At the office of the Palmer Mill, Three Rivers, Thursday, 19th, from 2 to 4 p. m.; at the office of the Thorndike Co., Thorndike, Friday, 27th, from 2 to 4 p. m.; at the district court room, Palmer, Wednesday, Nov. 1st, from 12 to 10 p. m., at which time registration will cease. A copy of the list as it stands at present is posted in the town clerk's office in this village, where all can see it who wish. At the meeting of the assessors Monday 34 names were erased from the list and 22 new names added.

A Frenchman who evidently wanted to discuss the "stringency" of the times with someone wandered into the banking rooms on Church street a day or two ago and interviewed the employes on the saving bank side. He evidently had but little affection for this "glorious land of the free," for after discoursing a while he remarked: "United States d—n bad country. Mill run four day a week, all right; mill run t'ree day a week, all right; mill run two day a week, pay board; mill no run at all." And the tone of his last remark plainly indicated that he had a personal knowledge of the "scarcity of the currency" at the present time.

At Wednesday's session of the probate court in Springfield administration was granted in the estates of—Madaline A. Morgan, late of Brimfield, Edward H. Morgan administrator; Julia A. Bliss, late of Palmer, Ebenezer Brown administrator. The will of Walter Haynes, late of Brimfield, was approved, Daniel Haynes executor. Accounts were rendered in the estates of—George Parker, late of Brimfield; William H. Pierce, late of Brimfield; George N. Fisk and others of Ludlow; Ambrose Clough, late of Ludlow. License to sell real estate was granted in the estate of Noah G. Stebbins, late of Hampden.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Co. is troubled at present to obtain a sufficient supply of water at the Blanchardville station to run the machinery. It has been necessary to discontinue the running of the incandescent lights all night, and for a few nights there has not been water enough so the street lights could be operated after the lights were not needed at the depot. Yesterday the company set up an incandescent light machine in the old Water street station, and operations were commenced from there again last night. The house lighting will be run from there for the present, or until the water supply at Blanchardvile is sufficient for all their needs.

The state board of health has recently sent to the boards in the cities and towns a circular calling attention to the laws regarding the reporting of cases of contagious diseases. The local boards are now required to report diseases which are considered dangerous to the public health to the state board within 24 hours after their presence is made known. In addition to small-pox, the following diseases are considered "dangerous to the public health:" Scarlet fever, measles, typhoid fever, diphtheria, membranous croup, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever, cerebro-spinal meningitis, hydrophobia, malignant pustule, leprosy and trichinosis.

There was a good joke on the employes at the Boston and Albany freight depot one morning last week. Considerable trouble has been caused by tramps breaking car seals and entering the cars at night. They also have done considerable damage to the contents of the cars. On the morning in question a man was discovered in a car. Someone went up very quietly and closed and fastened the door. It was intended to make an example of this victim. A telegram was sent to the officers of the road in Springfield for permission to have the man arrested. The desired permit was obtained and an officer descended upon the supposedvictim,when it was found that the door had been opened and the bird had flown. He was probably liberated by some of his companions, as the freight house men in their hurry to have the arrest made neglected to place any watch over the car.

State Primary School Notes.

Miss Mabel Moore has returned from her vacation.

Mr. Howe returned from the World's Fair Saturday.

F. U. Wetmore was in Springfield Sunday, visiting friends.

Miss Hancock and Miss Page, agents of the State Board of Charties, were at the school Thursday.

Mr. Davis returned to his duties on Monday, after having spent a month in visiting Indianapolis and the Fair.

Already eight of the officers have visited the World's Fair, and several more expect to visit it during the present month. Miss Luther started Monday, and Dr. Gable last night for the Columbian City.

District Court.

On Saturday David Gebo and Delos Roberts of Thorndike were found guilty of robbing the orchard of A. B. C. Deming of Thorndike, but on request of the complainant the cases were placed on file. Arsine Buchard was also brought in on the same charge, but was dismissed, as nothing was found against him. Teddy King of Three Rivers and Thomas Corcoran had their terms of probation extended to Nov. 4th. G. Marshall Shaw, whose adultery case was continued from Sept. 27, had it continued until November. He was allowed to withdraw the plea of guilty, which was entered previously.—On Monday Thomas Cook's term of probation was extended to November 4th. Richard Riley was given a year at Bridgewater for drunkenness. He was sent to the house of correction for two months the latter part of June and was pardoned early in August. He has been employed by Dr. Holbrook, but went on a spree Saturday and was gathered in again by the officers of the law.—This morning another family feud from Wales was aired. Gilbert C. Roth was charged with assault upon his wife, Delia Roth. The affairs of this family have been tangled up for a number of years. The defendant paid a fine of $5, and gave sureties in the sum of $200 to keep the peace for the term of one year.

School News.

The school in the Mason district was opened Tuesday, Miss Jennie Twiss of Three Rivers being chosen as teacher.

The vaccination question is a very important topic among the school children and their parents just at present. The committee decided this term to enforce the following statute in regard to the vaccination of school children:

CHAP. 47, SEC. 9.

The school committee shall not allow a child who has not been vaccinated to be admitted to or connected with the public schools.

Last Monday all the scholars in the various schools who had never been vaccinated were sent home with orders to be vaccinated before they returned. At the schools in Thorndike 107 were sent out, at Three Rivers 12, at Bondsville 35, at Palmer 17. All but six of these in this village have complied with the law, and all but one in Bondsville. It was voted by the committee this week not to withdraw their decision to enforce the statute. The committee will probably make some arrangement so the children in those families who are at present out of work in the various villages can be treated at the expense of the town. One father in this village positively refuses to have any of his children vaccinated under any circumstances.

There were many applications put in for the position of principal of the high school made vacant by the resignation of H. B. Knox. Of the applicants 16 appeared personally before the school board. At a meeting of the committee Wednesday evening the number to be considered was reduced to two. A sub-committee, consisting of L. E. Moore and Dr. H. M. Auger, has since been looking up the records of the two and will render their decision at a meeting of the committee this evening. Matters at the school have been moving on smoothly this week, the classes formerly under the guidance of Mr. Knox being taken in hand by Miss Brigham.

The committee has found this term 156 scholars in the grammar school building at Three Rivers with six teachers, while in this village 217 scholars are being taught by five teachers. The committee decided to transfer Miss Sedgwick from Three Rivers to this village and to open the unoccupied room in the grammar building. The scholars have been apportioned more evenly, the change taking place this afternoon.

THORNDIKE.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Hanks of the Eastern Avenue Congregational church of Springfield, have enjoyed the opportunity of meeting them in the village again. On Sunday Mr. Hanks occupied the Congregational pulpit and gave an inspiring sermon on "Obedience" to a large number of his former listeners. All expressed the desire that Mr. Hanks may enjoy his new field of labor in Ohio.

PALMER CENTER.

D. J. Mahoney was called to Hartford Wednesday by the sickness of his brother's wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Baisa of Boston were the guests of Horace Hamilton the first of the week.

Mrs. Samuel Brown and daughter left for the World's Fair Tuesday morning, and will visit other parts of the west before returning. Mrs. James Cochran and daughter of Minneapolis, Kansas, accompany them to Chicago.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Etta Ruggles visited friends in Ware one day this week.

Mrs. John Lavene of Richford, Vt., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lavene, on Maple street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Frame are griveing over the death of an infant son, born a few days ago.

Mrs. L. B. Kendrick spent a few days in Springfield this week, with her daughter, Mrs. Crossman.

The Palmer Mill will start up a week from next Monday on full time, but only about half of the machinery.

John Barker has returned from Lewiston, Me., and is now conducting some engineering operations in Chicopee.

Mrs. Dudley Desmaris has returned, after an absence of six weeks, during which she visited the World's Fair and other places.

Dr. H. S. Hillman of Northampton and Mr. and Mrs. H. Hillman of New York were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hillman to-day.

S. B. Barnes, Mrs. F. A. Upham and daughter Blanche, and Mrs. Squiers attended the wedding of Frank Upham and Miss Sturtevant at Ware Wednesday.

N. M. Nichols has resigned his position as overeeer of the spinning-room in the mill, and has moved his family and effects to Haverhill, Mass., where he intends to engage in business.

Miss Sedgwick, teacher of the second intermediate department in the public schools here, has been removed to Palmer, to teach in the grammer school there. Only a few pupils have attended the intermediate classes since the suspension of business by the Palmer Mill.

Some person, at present unknown, enjoyed a practical joke at the expense of Three Rivers high school pupils on Monday. It seems that Gilbert Forte received a postal card the previous Saturday, stating that no school would be held in the high school on Monday on account of Mr. Knox's resignation, and requesting him to notify the pupils here. The card was signed Supt. Small, but now proves to have been a forgery. It is probable that the writer was not aware of the penalty to which he was exposing himself.

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. R. A. Bond and child returned from Boston Monday.

O. A. Parent has been to Boston this week for his fall goods.

Miss Letia Lourkes spent a few days this week with her sister, Mrs. Rivers, in Ware.

William Parker of Worcester was the guest of his sister, Miss Maggie Parker, a few days this week.

Mrs. Richard Russell and Mrs. O. A. Parent attended the W. C. T. U convention in Springfield this week.

Notice has been given that a reduction in wages will be made to the employes of the Boston Duck Company.

George Lee goes to Vermont next week to bring home his children, who have been spending the summer there.

Miss O'Brien, teacher in the third primary school, has been absent from her school part of this week on account of illness.

The annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society was held at Mr. Hale's Friday evening. Refreshment was served.

David Dillon of Palmer was the guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Dwyer, over Sunday, leaving Monday morning with C. S. O'Regan to resume studies at Tufts College.

Parker—Bowen.

A pretty October wedding was the marriage of Miss Maggie Parker and Orrin Bowen, which took place at the residence of Mrs. Mary Clark on High street Monday afternoon, Rev. F. J. Hale performing the ceremony, and Mrs. Charles Armstrong playing the wedding march. The parlors were tastefully trimmed with evergreens, ferns and cut flowers. The bridal couple stood under a bell of ferns and autumn leaves. The bride looked charming in pale blue cashmere and lace trimmings, and carried a bouquet of white pinks. Miss Lena Canterbury, who was maid of honor, wore cream cashmere and lace trimmings, and carried a bouquet of carnation pinks. The best man was the groom's brother, Harry Bowen. A reception followed, with refreshments. The ushers were Henry Coyle and Elbridge Horton. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen left on the 3 o'clock train for a trip to Nova Scotia, and will visit Boston and Lawrence before returning. They will be at home the last of the month at West Ware. They received many useful and ornamental presents, among them being a china tea set from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith; silver cake basket, bride's brother, William Parker; toilet glass for dressing stand, Mr. and Mrs. George Chaffee; silver nut picks, Mr. and Mrs. David Lamb; rocker, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. Ryther, Mrs. Culver, Messrs. 20th Anniversary of the W. F. M. Society of the M. E. Church.

Presiding Elder Thorndike preached in the Methodist church last Sunday morning and evening. The evening service was a missionary one, it being the twentieth anniversary of the reorganization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of that church, and the following report, written by Miss Sophia Ross, was read during the evening:

Early in 1873 Miss E. A. Fay attended a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held in Springfield, at which were returned missionaries who spoke of the urgent need of woman's work in the foreign field, and emphasized the importance of more systematic and hearty effort in missionary work on the part of the women of the home churches, and those who were willing to do so were requested to pledge themselves upon returning home to try to enlist their sisters in the work—then but recently organized—of the W. F. M. Society. This appeal met with a prompt response on the part of our sister, who caused a notice to be given one Sabbath, requesting the ladies present who were interested in missions to stop a few minutes at the close of the service. Quite a good number stayed, and Miss Fay told them what was in her heart, and asked if it was not possible to form a society here that should be auxiliary to the W. F. M. Society of the M. E. church. The suggestion was favorably received, but it was thought advisable to delay the organization until the opening of the next conference year, then close at hand. In April, 1873, Rev. William Silverthorn was appointed pastor of this church, and on the first Sabbath of the following month a notice was given requesting those desirous of forming a missionary society to meet in the vestry that evening. For an account of this meeting we will copy from the secretary's report:

SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1873.—At six o'clock p. m. a meeting was called for the purpose of organizing a society auxiliary to the W. F. M. S. There were twenty-one ladies present, and it was voted that a society should be formed, and fifteen members were obtained at this meeting. It was also voted that the original constitution should be adopted, and that this auxiliary should hold a meeting on the evening of the third Friday in each month, and that it should be a prayer meeting. At this meeting the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. William Silverthorn; vice presidents, Mrs. Gilbert White, Mrs. Gilbert Edson, Miss Samantha Ross; corresponding secretary, Miss E. A. Fay; recording secretary, Miss Lizzie J. Topliffe; treasurer, Miss Nettie C. Hoar.

Thus the organization was effected, and of the 15 charter members we gratefully record that all except three are still living and doing service, either here or elsewhere.

The largest membership reported for any one year is in the year 1881, numbering 56. There have been 27 life members, made like by the payment of $20 each. The whole number of persons connected with the auxiliary since its organization is not less than 150. The whole amount of money raised and forwarded to the treasurer of the New England Branch is over $1500. This is exclusive of expenses attending the work, such securing speakers for public meetings, sending delegates to district and branch annual meetings, the cost of money orders, postage, stationery, and so on.

In the year 1875 this auxiliary had the honor of being the banner society in the Springfield district in the amount of money raised per member, which was nearly $1. This society has a good record for promptness and fidelity in its business management, and the reputation of being well read in missionary intelligence, more copies of the Heathen Woman's Friend being in circulation than the average among auxiliaries.

This society had no special work until the year 1885, when it assumed the support of a Bible woman in India. The sum required, $60 per year, has been forwarded for this purpose each year since. The work of this Bible woman, whose name is Helen Soule, is in Bynour, India. Her duties are to visit the women in the Zenanas, read to them from the Bible, sing Gospel hymns, and give religious instruction; also teaching needle work and giving lessons in reading. She is a young woman of marked ability, has passed examinations in the four-years' course of study, and has done excellent work.

The report of the work of this society would be incomplete without tender mention of one of its members, who in the earlier years of its history felt herself called to labor in the foreign field, and promptly entered upon a course of training for that purpose. While hastening the work of preparation the overtaxed physical powers gave way, and instead of the anticipated activities of service, it was given her to walk the shadowed path of suffering for weary years. Still another of our members, in these later years, has consecrated her noble young womanhood to the foreign mission work, and is now pursuing preparatory studies at Northfield. It may be mentioned in this connection that a flourishing Young Ladies' Band has been formed within a few years, with special work of its own.

The secretary's report for the year just closed is as follows: Present number of members, 30; amount of money raised, $76; copies of "Friend" taken, 18; meetings held, 11.

Edward Sisson is at the World's Fair.

Henry Exley spent Sunday at his home at Westboro.

The railing south of Rogers's store was set last Saturday.

Herbert M. Smith has returned from the World's Fair.

Rev. John F. Lee has returned from the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Bliss have returned from the World's Fair.

The Misses Leary have returned from their visit in Boston and Taunton.

Miss Mabelle Fay has returned to the training school at Northfield.

Andrew Coleman returned to the Philadelphia Dental College last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Blanchard have been visiting friends at Belchertown the past week.

Miss Frank M. Fenton and Mrs. Eugene Griswold are spending a few days in New York.

Miss Addie Peck gave a party to some of her friends from Hammond Hall Wednesday evening.

The observance of the Lord's Supper will take place in the Universalist church Sunday morning.

M. S. Taylor and Charles E. Smith have returned from camp at Spicer's Point, Groton, Ct.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Foskit and Charles R. Buffington left Monday night for the World's Fair.

A. F. Smith, a former resident of this town, has gone to Wilbraham, and will make that place his future abode.

Rev. W. H. Marble and George L. Keeney returned to town at 9.30 Sunday morning from the World's Fair.

Mr. Norcross, so well known as a poultry exhibitor, took first prize as usual at the Stafford fair Wednesday.

A large crowd attended the Stafford Fair Wednesday and Thursday, Wednesday being the banner day for this town.

The hum of machinery in the laundry of Charles F. Orcutt tells of his attempts to meet the needs of his increased business.

At an adjourned probate court held in Springfield last Friday C. L. Peck was appointed guardian of Edward M. Peck, minor.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church will meet next Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. William N. Flynt for reorganization.

Duller times seem to be in store for Monson people, as the only mills which are running in town—Cushman's—will only run 5½ hours per day.

Mrs. Bragg and Mrs. Hardendorff of Hartford, who have been the guests of Mrs. Rufus Fay during the past week, have returned to their home.

Mrs. Mary Love and daughter, who have been visiting Mrs. Julius Stewart, started for the World's Fair and California Thursday morning.

Miss Filer of Springfield has been the guest of Miss Hattie F. Cushman the past week. Miss Filer is forming a children's class in dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Brooks of Greenwich have been stopping at Stephen Lamb's on Moulton Hill the past week, and calling on old friends. Mr. Brooks formerly lived in Monson.

At the meeting of the school committee and selectmen Monday Wesley A. Squier was appointed a member of the school committee to take the place of Willard Leach, deceased.

The straw shops of Heimann & Lichten present a pleasing appearance to passers, they now being lighted by electricity. Quite a number of machines are running, turning out samples.

Rev. Mr. Woodworth of Jacksonville, Fla., was the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Emily J. Green, over Sunday, and assisted Rev. F. S. Hatch in the morning service at the Congregational church.

Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, will have a paper on "School Supervision; Ends to be Attained; Difficulties Encountered," at the superintendents' institute to be held in Springfield next Wednesday.

At the Methodist church last evening the vestry was well filled to listen to Mr. Mason of the Freedman's Aid and Educational Society. Mr. Mason's lecture, illustrated by the stereopticon, was interesting and instructive.

Painting seems to be the order of the day. E. J. Osborne is painting William Underwood's house on Lincoln street, Mr. Wood is brightening Mrs. Fenton's house, and William Carroll the house and store of George E. Grout.

The janitor of the Moulton Hill schoolhouse was surprised to find a fire in the stove one morning last week, and later investigations brought to light a bundle containing among other things a new pair of pants, and it was decided that a tramp had spent the night in the building and been frightened away earlier than he had expected to leave.

The social life of the Congregational society has taken on activity earlier than usual. The Endeavor young people give a sociable next Friday, at which some original features will be introduced, calling out all the youthful artists. The following week the Ladies' Benevolent society will inaugurate their social gatherings for the season.

The meeting of the school committee last Friday evening was of unusual interest. It was decided to continue the school in Day's block during the winter; voted to give the same day to the town schools which the academy had for visiting the Stafford fair; the subject of paying the tuition of post graduates was discussed at some length, and will be decided in the near future.

These children in Green street primary school have been perfect in attendance during the past month: Lizzie Bradway, Bertha Cantwell, Lizzie Connell, Anna Krause, Greta Merrick, Alice Noble, Kittie O'Brien, Florence Parke, Jenny Prue, Grace Thayer, Frank Cushman, Eddie Hanley, Willie Hines, Frank Holloway, Herbert Howe, Peter Kearns, Bruno Krause, Carl Rand.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. Edward D. Cushman Sunday afternoon for reorganization. Mrs. Edward D. Cushman, who made the sociables last season a great success socially and financially, was unanimously reelected but decined to serve, and the vacancy was not filled. The following other officers were chosen: Vice president, Miss Esther R. Holmes; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mabelle Anderson; entertainment committee, Miss Hattie F. Cushman, Miss May Wales, Miss Alice Morris, Mrs. Marble Bacon, Mrs. John Cross. A meeting will be held next Tuesday afternoon to choose a president.

The Congregational church will observe next Sunday as Rallying Day. All who attend church only occasionally are invited to take special pains to be present, and strangers will be cordially welcomed. In the evening at 6 o'clock, (the audience should be promptly seated,) Prof. Richardson of Amherst College will give a description of the famous Passion Play of Oberammergau illustrated by stereopticon views. Prof. Richardson has seen this play, which is given only once in 10 years, and his life abroad has fitted him to describe it. The pictures were carefully selected and represent the most wonderful scenes and tableaux in the play. Admission is free, though a small collection will be taken to defray the necessary expense of the service.

Academy Notes.

School closed Wednesday in order that the students might go to the Stafford Fair; 32 attended.

The academy has just received its 100th student in the person of Constantine Stephan of Bulgaria. He was educated under the direction of the American Board, the missionary organization of the Congregational church. He is a young man, and was advised to pursue his studies in this country. He will attend Amherst College and then return as a missionary to his own people.——George H. Stone, '94, one of the best athletes in the academy, won two races Wednesday at Stafford, taking second prize, a fine French marble clock, in the hundred yards dash, and the first prize, a beautiful diamond ring valued at $30, in the half mile.——At the meeting of the athletic association the assessment was raised. At the same meeting the president, D. J. McCarthy, P. G. was instructed to appoint an entertainment committee, which is to furnish entertainments by which to raise money for the spring meet, thus doing away in part with the subscription paper. The committee is George H. Stone, '94, George W. Brown, '95, E. B. Flint, '94.——The present senior class is the first in the history of the academy to have a constitution and by-laws. L. R. Burrows, E. B. Francis and Florence J. Deverell were the committee appointed to draw the constitution.——Athletics have begun to boom already, and the campus at Hammond Hall presents a lively scene before and after school. There are many promising additions to the academy team, and the prospect of the banner remaining with this school is bright.

WEST WARREN.

The fire companies will attend inspection and muster in Warren Saturday afternoon.

William Sheehan, Jr., was one of the fourth class postmasters appointed Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Brooks returned Wednesday from a three-months' visit with their son in Philadelphia.

Cornelius Sullivan met with quite a serious accident near the station Monday afternoon. As he was attempting to jump on a freight he was thrown under and the wheels passed over his left leg between the knee and ankle, severing it completely.

At the business meeting of the Epworth League Monday twelve new members were admitted. After adjournment the members enjoyed themselves with singing and games. A special meeting is called for next Monday evening, to see what shall be done in the literary line this winter.

WILBRAHAM.

Rev. Franklin Fisk, who has been a resident of the town for many years, has sold his property here, and will hereafter live with his daughter at Natick.

Philo Society, assisted by the teachers at the academy, held one of the most successful receptions in its history in Rich Hall Friday evening. The usual custom of an interview in Fisk Hall was done away with this year, and the reception was held in Second parlor and the adjoining rooms of Rich Hall. The guests were received by Professor Newhall, Miss Wythe, Professor Kingsbury, Miss Pike, Professor Austin and wife, Miss Hyman, Professor Mohler, Miss Prentis, Miss Howe, Professor Sanford and wife, Miss Colburn, Mr. and Mrs. Russell, Miss Russell, Miss Howard, Professor Ellis and wife and Mrs. Burke. During the evening music was rendered by Miss E. M. Ford, W. A. Harrison, R. P. Leech and W. J. Merwin. The halls of the building were very prettily decorated with plants and ribbons.

WALES.

Superintendant Landon has moved into the Warren Shaw house on Main street.

The wood lots belonging to the estate of the late Daniel B. Needham will be sold at auction in about two weeks.

Dr. Rafferty of Stafford Springs collided with John Moran's wood team recently and had his carriage somewhat broken.

Shaw's block is about ready for occupancy.

Salem J. and Elmer Shaw of West Sutton have visited friends here this week.

The Wales Savings Bank held is quarterly meeting Tuesday. Josiah Hiscock, Wm. L. Webber and George S. Rogers are the committee of investment.

The Republicans of Wales chose these delegates to the different conventions at a caucus held last Friday evening: State, Leroy Squier and H. A. McFarland, instructed for Pillsbury; county, C. G. Needham and G. S. Rogers; councilor, E. A. Clark and W. A. Lyons; senatorial, W. R. Lathrop and H. A. McFarland.

BRIMFIELD.

Horatio L. Converse is confined to his house by illness.

Charles Tarbell was in Springfield last week as juryman.

Mrs. E. T. Sherman and family returned to New York Saturday.

Mrs. R. V. Sawin and daughter are visiting relatives in Brockton.

Miss Fannie Walker of Hardwick has been the guest of Mrs. John Noyes.

W. A. Janes and Dr. R. V. Sawin are in Boston attending the state convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Moore were thrown from their carriage last Friday morning by coming in contact with a bicycle. Mrs. Moore had two ribs broken, while Mr. Moore was cut about the face.

Brimfield people who have been to the World's Fair are George Streeter, Mrs. John Noyes, Mrs. O. F. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Miner Corbin, Mrs. Frank Traverse, Mrs. A. F. Pierson, Miss Miss Minnie T. Pierson, Rev. W. K. Pierce and Charles Harrison. Those who are there are G. M. Hitchcock, Miss Alice M. Bacon and John Noyes. Those who are going are Dr. R. V. Sawin, Miss Sena Webber and Miss Sadie Webber. Rev. Mr. Kyle, the new minister of the First Congregational church has moved into the parsonage.

LUDLOW.

Dogs entered F. P. Tilley's flock of sheep Monday night and did considerable damage.

Deputy George R. Chase is expected to make an official visit to Ludlow Grange the 16th inst.

Sone one entered the house of Charles B. Bennett a few evenings ago and relieved him of the care of $15.

Henry Beauregard had several ribs broken last Friday afternoon by having the beam of a derrick fall upon him.

The Ludlow Republicans held their caucus Wednesday evening for the choice of delegates to the several conventions, and elected the following: Councilor, John Hobson, B. F. Burr; county, A. D. King, J. B. Knowlton; senatorial, E. E. Fuller, Alfred T. Jones; representative, Henry Burke, Frank Sturgis, David C. Jones, Alfred H. Bartlett. The town committee is J. B. Knowlton, A. D. King, E. E. Fuller and A. T. Jones.

The Springfield District Grange will meet with the Ludlow Grange Oct. 18. The Grange discussed the question last Monday evening, "Can the eastern farmer better afford to raise corn than to buy it?" Opened in the affirmative by Dea. H. S. Jones, and in the negative by F. E. Sikes; opened then for discussion. A vote taken resulted in the affirmative. At the meeting of the Grange Sept. 18 the lecturer offered a prize to the lady who brought the handsomest bouquet and to the gentleman who brought the largest apple at this meeting, so after the discussion, judges were appointed for each side. Mrs. F. G. Bennett received a fine linen handkerchief for the bouquet, and Mr. Taylor a black silk one for the largest apple.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

L. G. Stacy is spending a weeks' vacation in Connecticut.

Howard King, cashier for the Cutler Co., is enjoying a week's outing.

C. E. Stacy has purchased a new horse for his increasing business demands.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bell are spending a few days in Lancaster and vicinity, visiting relatives.

A new assistant is to be seen occasionally in the post office here, in the person of Joseph Baldwin, Sr.

A legal Democratic caucus was held last evening. This was to offset the last one, held a short time since, and declared illegal by the state committee.

At the annual business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Grace Church on Tuesday evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, J. M. Perry; vice president, E. Eva Cunningham; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Fletcher; corresponding secretary, H. W. Cutler; lookout committee, Mrs. H. E. Gates, E. Evelyn Bell, Gertie Chase; prayer meeting, W. E. Oliver, Maud Bemis, Ada Clement; social, Mrs. H. W. Cutler, Minnie Morgan, L. G. Stacy; flower, Mrs. C. E. Stacy, Mrs. C. E. Fletcher, Myra Gates, Nellie Fuller; organist, E. E. Cunningham. Favorable reports were read of the past year's work, and accepted; a gain of five active and two associate members were reported; it was unanimously voted that this society should attend as a body the Endeavor convention which will be held in Holyoke some time in November.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hill have gone to the World's Fair.

Nine persons who were disorderly at the recent cattle show have each been fined $10 and costs.

The Methodist society cleared about $140 and the Congregational society about $100 from their dinners cattle show day.

Mrs. Lillian C. Powers and Dr. C. H. Walker, who were recently married at South Pasadena, Cal., were formerly residents of Belchertown.

Killed by the Cars.

The body of an unknown man, who was stealing a ride on the eastern-bound freight train on the Central Massachusetts road Saturday evening, was discovered after the train stopped at the station here. He had stowed himself in the vacant end of a flat car loaded with railroad iron. The train became uncoupled between South Amherst and Belchertown, and when the cars came together on the down grade the concussion drove the iron into the end of the car where the man lay, causing his death. The inquest that was held Sunday showed that the man's skull was broken in and his body otherwise injured. He was about 30 years old and had no papers about his person by which he could be identified. In his pockets was a small sum of money, a paper from a charity institution in Syracuse, N. Y., declaring him to be a worthy tramp, but giving no name, and a theater ticket from the same place. The man's clothes were decent.

WARE.

H. M. Bartlett intends to enter his trotter in the cattle show races to-morrow; the horse can trot in 2.50.

There was some trouble with the engine at the Geo. H. Gilbert Mfg. Co's. mill on Monday, so that it was shut down for the day.

The Author of "When the Mills Shut Down" was A. T. Gorham, the sign painter. The words have been set to music by the Republican Campaign Club in the west, and Mr. Gorham's name appears prominently on the handsome title page.

Seth Dunbar died last Saturday at his home on the Palmer road, aged 72 years. Rev. A. B. Bassett, officiated at the funeral, which took place on Monday in charge of J. W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., of which he was a member. The burial was at Aspen Grove cemetery.

A grand fair is to be opened in the town hall to-morrow evening, and continue every evening for two weeks, to raise money for frescoing the new All Saint's church. Preparations are being made for music and other attractions each evening, eminent talent being employed for some of the concerts, of which due notice will be given.

SHORT NEWS NOTES.

Over 700 women cast their ballots for school committee at the election at Hartford Monday.

James A. Trefethen, who was once convicted of the murder of Deltena Davis at Everett, was acquitted at the second trial Saturday.

Burglars entered the Barre National Bank at Barre early Sunday morning and blew the safe open. The noise of the explosion aroused the neighborhood, and the cracksmen were frightened away before securing any of the safe's contents

One of the worst disasters that have ever occurred in the Lake Superior mining region took place near Crystal Falls, Mich., last Friday night, when a river broke through a bed weakened by mining, flooding the mine, and twenty-eight miners lost their lives.

A 14-foot fly-wheel weighing about 15 tons in the Windsor Locks steel company's mill burst Monday morning, tearing out a large section of the roof and causing a general wreck in the mill in that section. It will cost about $10,000 to repair the damage.

The trainmen, switchmen, yardmen and coal heavers on the Chespeake, Ohio and Southern road at Fulton, Ky., and other places on the line, went out on a strike Sunday on account of a reduction of wages. Workmen on other roads have refused to handle their cars, and it is feared they may also strike.

A terrible wind and rain storm occurred Monday on the gulf coast between Mobile and New Orleans, causing an awful loss of life and the destruction of a vast amount of property. It is estimated that 1000 people lost their lives. Miles of railroad were under water and several vessels sunk with all on board. The wind blew at a terrific rate, blowing the water inland for miles, where houses were flooded and blown down and many lives lost.

Jesse Pomeroy has made another unsuccessful attempt to escape. An officer noticed the end of a wire working back and forth between the granite blocks of the wall, and on searching his cell the warden found a nine-inch bar of iron about half an inch thick and weighing between three and four pounds, a steel file of the same length, two six-inch pieces of steel bar, one a quarter and the other a half inch in diameter, and a piece of steel wire about two feet long. How he obtained them is a mystery.

The gossip of the trade is the great business in dress goods, silks and velvets, now going on in the store. The stocks are in prime condition and are moving faster than is comfortable. The best evidence of the fact is the number of dress lengths we are selling every day; or, to put it another way, the number of buyers you meet here.

Our stock is twice over the largest in this region, and includes about every fabric we care to keep. A little booklet at gives the names and prices of a great many. Sent free.

Black gros grain silk, worth $1 and $1.35, for 67½ and 89 cents respectively. These are parts of lots held as security by a banker in New York; and are great bargains. Samples sent. Left aisle, of main floor.

Coats and capes and wraps are having their time also; and never was variety greater. Nowhere else in this region is there such a range of stylish garments at medium prices; nowhere such a collection of swell things at the price of not swell. We feel particularly elated over the jackets from $4.50 to $20. Second floor, Vernon street side.

If the new hat isn't ordered yet, see what we can do. Second floor, south side.

It will be a great season for fur capes. The new styles are made with sloping shoulders and very wide skirts, some of the latter being three yards around. They come in all the popular and fashionable furs, prices ranging from $5 to $189.

Treatment of Eczema and Salt Rheum.

These two complaints are so tenacious that the readers of The JOURNAL should know of the success obtained by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

In cases where all other treatments have failed, it has made a complete cure.

Perhaps no more horrible case of Salt Rheum was ever reported than that of William L. Hale of Rondout, N. Y. Several physicians utterly failed to render him any relief whatsoever; it was finally suggested by one of the physicians attending, that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy be tried, and steady improvement followed its use, and a permanent cure resulted.

It is used with similar success in cases of scrofula, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, and in all diseases brought about by bad blood and shattered nerves.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Sold by LEGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

Offering you a preparation containing the highest order of ingredients, free from all opiates, harmless even to a baby, and a request to return the empty bottles and get the amount paid for the full ones if no cure is effected, is our way of gaining your confidence. If there were any better ingredients we would use them. We cure our patients or get no pay.

The PALMER JOURNAL.

Have mats before the outside doors, a place for overshoes and umbrellas, a place to hang outside wraps and hats that are in common use. Have a place for your books, each class of magazines, for newspapers; indeed, have the appointment of your home complete in the minutest detail. All such needful articles may be bought with a very little money; it may take a good deal of effort to establish a systematic routine in your household, but if you yourself will always put every article in its place after you have used it; if you request the new members and require the children of your family to do the same, the good results will well repay the persistent effort.

Have a regular day for washing, ironing, sweeping, and the different kinds of work; you must decide which day best suits your convenience. One of the most common plans is washing on Monday, baking on Tuesday, ironing on Wednesday, sweeping, etc., Fridays, baking on Saturday, leaving Thursday for special undertakings. Some housekeepers prefer to sweep a chamber or a room each day instead of sweeping the entire house on Friday, but decide what is best and then carry out your plan. Do not say, "well, this room does not look very bad; I guess I'll leave it;" but sweep and dust and wipe the paint and wash the windows before it begins to look bad, and always on the day fixed upon.

Having your house in order, begin in the morning to keep it so, or rather, begin the night before. Any article of dress not to be worn next day should be dusted and put in its place when it is taken off. In the morning, before leaving your room, open your bed and put it in order to make; open your window, and it is a good plan to pour out all the slops, wipe up the commode and dust the bureau and take the lamp to the kitchen with you. The night before, also, should have decided the breakfast, and as far as possible the food to be prepared the following day. After a little experience you will learn just how long it will take you to prepare each article for the breakfast table. Stop a moment before beginning to plan each part of the work so that it will proceed regularly. If you have a dining-room, the floor should have been brushed and the table neatly laid for breakfast the previous night. If your kitchen serves you as a breakfast room you may find other arrangements necessary, but it is always desirable to leave the rooms in good order at night, however tired you may be.

After breakfast clear the table, set the dishes into the sink soaking in water, and brush up the cloth and the dining-room and kitchen floors and set everything in its place. Then wash and wipe the dishes. If you have meat to boil or bread that should be attended to, all that may be done before washing the dishes and you still have a neat place to do the work in. In piling up dirty dishes to wash it makes all the difference in the world how they are piled; whether put in the pan ready to wash and the tins and irons soaking or whether put in as if a whirlwind had dropped them in. It is always a good plan to get breakfast work done before beginning other work where possible.

There is not space here to outline even a day's work. Miss Parloa has done it in a last winter's number of Ladies' Home Journal.

If you have hired help, or a daughter who does a part of your work, you will plan your work accordingly, and find the planning much easier.

There is great neglect on the part of many mothers who are themselves systematic, but who do not train their children also to be systematic. Often children are allowed to throw their clothing down instead of hanging it up, and to demand help when they could just as well wait upon themselves. Children should be taught to brush their garments when they lay them aside; they should be provided with hooks, drawers, bags, boxes, places to keep all their belongings, and they should be required to put their belongings in their respective places Such a training is invaluable to a child, and such habits early formed and followed in later life often mark the difference between a distinguished man and a man of equal mental ability who has never persisted in any one purpose long enough to accomplish anything. Have some system, for a badly-planned routine is even better than no routine. FRANCES VIRILLA DOANE.

THEY ONLY KNEW AGASSIZ.

In 1858 a party consisting of Lowell, Emerson, Agassiz, Judge Hoar, W. J. Stillman and several others spent a few weeks of the summer in the Adirondacks.

The journey of the company gave rise to an incident which has often been incorrectly told, and which, as a curious comment upon human fame, deserves to be told again. The coming of the party was of course made known along the track it would follow, and at Keeseville, where the common roads then ended, the town was agog to see the "philosophers," as they were at once collectively called. But neither Emerson nor Lowell was known, Agassiz being the only celebrity to that world, owing to his having recently refused the offer by the emperor of France of keepership of the Jardin des Plantes at Paris and a senatorship with a large salary, he preferring to devote himself to science and America.

The selectmen of the town waited on the visitors early in the morning after their arrival to pay their respects, they said, but really to see a man who had no regard for money and distinction. They were received formally, the spokesman bringing a copy of a periodical which contained a portrait of Agassiz, which he produced and carefully compared with the lineaments of the professor until he had satisfied himself of the authenticity of the individual, when he addressed his followers with "Yes, it's him!" And then they proceeded to shake hands with him, the rest of the party being ignored. — W. J. Stillman, in the Century.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

THEIR VERSION OF IT

Each Tells The Whole Story In Her Own Way.

But Both Disclose the Plain Unvarnished Truth.

There Is No Getting Around Such Facts As These.

WATERBURY CENTRE, VT.—This is a small own, but often interesting happenings take place, even in a small town. This will be found interesting news.

Mrs. G. C. Town, a well-known resident of this place tells the following story:

"I was suffering terribly from nervousness," she says, "caused by female weakness, kidney troubles and backache, and was so weak I could not walk across the room without help. The nerves of my eyes were so effected that I feared that I would lose my sight.

"I saw Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy recommended so highly that I thought I would try it. I had not taken but one bottle of this wonderful medicine before my eyes were cleared of their dull aching, and all other pains and aches left me.

"I grew stronger every day until I am now well and able to do my own work. I cannot do half justice in the praise of this medicine, and I give these facts for the benefit of others who are ailing."

MRS. C. G. TOWN.

Just over the state line in Champlain, N. Y., lives a lady widely known, Mrs. B. Wilson by name, who also tells an interesting story.

"I have been seriously afflicted," she says, "with rheumatism for over 20 years and I did not think I could ever be cured.

"I have taken only two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and am now taking the third, and I can truly say that I have not been so well and free from pain for 20 years.

"What induced me to use this remedy was seeing the wonderful cure it wrought in my husband—it saved his life.

"I feel it my duty, therefore, to tell the great benefits I have received from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and to advise all who are ailing to try this wonderful medicine.

MRS. B. WILSON.

"I have the most unbounded confidence in the curative powers of Dr. Greene's nervura blood and nerve remedy."

Take this medicine now if you are not feeling just right, if you are weak, nervous, run down in health and strength; if you do not sleep well nights, and if you wake mornings tired and unrefreshed with little or no appetite for breakfast. Take it for headache, backache, constipation, stomach, liver or kidney complaints. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists sell it for $1.00.

It should not be classed with ordinary patent medicines, for it is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene of 34 Temple place, Boston, Mass., the well-known and successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted free in any case, personally or by letter.

ONE DAY'S FISHING.

"Like a blooming idiot," said the major, "I agreed to take the colonel fishing."

"Well, the next afternoon, which was Saturday, he came around with a fishing rod that I gave him, and when I got into the cab blame me if he didn't have a trunk. 'Got my things in that,' said he, and may I eternally fry if there weren't things enough in that trunk to stock a pawn shop. By ged, he had everything from evening clothes to a patent bootjack. But he hasn't them any more," and the major chuckled.

"We started for Mud Run, out in Pennsylvania. I'd never been there before, but a man told me there was good fishing there. He was a liar, by the way.

"About the time we got started the colonel wanted to smoke, and by the hind hobs of Gehenna if he hadn't packed all the cigars in that bloody trunk. When I cussed, he tried to get up in the baggage car and was nearly killed. Then he got some bad cigars from the porter and growled for an hour steady. Pretty soon he wanted a drink, and the whiskey was in that confounded trunk.

"The woman at the hotel where we got out said it was too late to get anything to eat, and the colonel got mad and called me a burbling chump for dragging him out into the wilderness.

"When the boy waked us in the morning, the colonel kicked because he had to get up so early. He had the duece of a time finding his things in that eternal trunk, and he kicked because I got impatient

"The woman at the hotel looked queer when we got down. 'Going fishing?' says she. 'You'd better look out for the constable. It's against the law to fish round here Sundays.'

"Then the colonel got suspicious and said he didn't want to be locked up. I got him into the wagon, and the driver says: 'Better look out for the constable. It's against the law to fish round here on Sundays.'

"'Say,' says the colonel, 'I'm not going to get locked up and bring eternal disgrace upon my family.' I choked him off finally, and we started. Then we met a farmer, and he 'lowed that we'd get in trouble if we fished on Sunday. The driver grinned and the colonel, like the eternal galoot he is, says, 'I told you so.' It took me another 10 minutes to choke him off, but he growled all the way to the stream.

"Say," continued the major, "did you ever see the colonel catch trout? No? Well, neither did anybody else. He couldn't catch a trout in a week of leap years. By ged, it was a sight to see him whip the stream. It was like driving balky mules over a broken bridge. He banged that river until half the fish in it were scared to death, and I guess he thought he could catch trout by knocking them stone dead with his rod. He lost about two dozen flies trying to cast half the length of his rod, and then he got his line tangled up in the bushes. Did you ever hear the colonel swear? Well, hodcarriers and river pirates aren't in it with the colonel. Talk about breaking the Sabbath! Why, the colonel swore enough to send an army to perdition for eternity.

"While the colonel was cussing everything in sight the driver came tearing down the road, waving his hands like a windmill in full sail.

"'Hi!' he yelled, 'the constable's coming, and he's after you, too. You'd better get. Cut up through the woods there, and I'll meet you at the turn of the pike.'

"We didn't know where the turn of the pike was, but the colonel grabbed me by the arm and hustled up into the woods. When we got under cover he was steaming like a soap factory and cussing me too.

"'What in the name of thunder did you ever bring me out here for? You want to get me arrested, do you?'

"I was that speechless that I couldn't answer. I just stood and looked at him. Pretty soon I recovered.

"'Brought you out here?' said I. 'You blooming blot of idiocy, who brought you out here? You came yourself.'

"Then the colonel got madder than ever, and he wouldn't talk again. But that was a mercy.

"It was getting along toward dark when we got to the hotel. The colonel was prancing up to the front door when the man who drove the team came out of a barn.

"'Hey,' says he, 'the constable's waiting for you fellows. He's over to the hotel.'

"Maybe I and the colonel didn't run. We just lit out and hung around in the brush until it was plum dark. Then we crawled back to the hotel, but the constable was still sitting there.

"Then the colonel tried to make a bolt to the woods, and the constable saw him. With a whole pack in full cry after us, the colonel and I ran down the hill. I guess we outdistanced the constable and his crew. But after a while they came after us with lanterns, and we had to run again. Up in the heavy brush they lost us, and when we got our wind we struck out for the railroad.

"The nearest station was ten miles away, and the colonel was nearly dead before we got half way there. He sat down on a tie and swore that he was dying. He was wet through and about the most miserable man that ever cussed a streak of hard luck.

"The colonel got so bad that I got some chips and started a fire by the railroad track. He lay down beside it and tried to get dry. He was just beginning to grunt, when there was a roar down the road, and the train came puffing round the curve.

"The first thing the engineer saw I guess was our fire, and then you should have heard the racket. He just turned all his steam into his old whistle and tooted like a fiend possessed. The train came to a standstill by our fire, and then the conductor came racing up, swearing awfully. I got out. The colonel expostulated, but they were so mad they were going to thrash him. I got on the platform of the last car, and blow me if they would let the colonel get on. He prayed and pleaded, but the conductor said no, and the train started with the colonel doing more cussing.

"When the last car was abreast, however, the colonel grabbed the hand bar and hung on for his life. He took steps about four yards long, and when the train got going he just sailed out behind. I yanked and pulled till I got him aboard. My, I thought he was going to die. But he didn't. After a while he began swearing again, and then I felt relieved.

"After we had gone about ten miles we got up to get into the car. The colonel went first, but he hadn't taken two steps when he fell back with a gasp.

"'What'g the matter?'

"'Matter?' says he. 'The constable's in that car.'

"And sure enough he was. Then we went out on the steps and sat in the cold. The colonel shivered till he rocked the car, and he more than lit into me. Say, I've been sworn at in 15 different languages, but the way the colonel sailed into me was art. I sat there and groaned, and for about 20 miles the train left a streak of blue behind.

"We rode on the tail of that car for 50 miles, and the colonel swore all the way. Every time we came to a station the colonel was worse than ever.

"Finally it got so bad that I got desperate and went into the car. The constable was gone. I asked a red-nosed man in the back seat where the constable was, and he told me that the constable had left the train an hour before. And there we two blooming chumps sat on that platform all that time.

"I let the colonel sit there for about an hour more before I went out and told him. And then you should have heard him curse. It was awful, and I had to leave him. I haven't seen him since."

Just then a limp figure came slouching around the corner. When it saw the major, there was a start of surprise. It made a vain attempt to escape discovery. The major saw, and with a dash he secured the cringing form. It was the colonel.

"Colonel," said the major, "let bygones be bygones."

"They are," said the colonel. "Let's take a drink."

And they did.—New York World.

INCOMPATIBILITY.

Through the pines, across the tiny lake, she could see the team standing at the back door of the Princess Anne hotel.

"Fully an hour before it goes back to Norfolk," she thought. "How on earth shall we ever get through it without saying more than we mean?"

"What a dreadfully short time an hour is," he said.

She started.

"Yes," she said cordially. "Is not it? Do you really have to take the New York boat to-night?"

"If I get back in time to lecture to my young ladies Saturday morning," he said. "Seems queer for girls to care about diseases of the skin, does not it?"

"Not at all," she said promptly. "I have thought a good deal about acne myself, though I am not a medical student."

He looked with amused incredulity at her smooth, daintily flushed cheeks.

"How did you treat it?" he asked.

"Medicine is surely a safe topic," she thought. "Why," she said hesitatingly, "I took liquor potass, arsen,—is that right?—internally, and put a horrid sort of paste on every night for a week."

"What results?" he asked.

"Judge for yourself," she answered, drooping her long lashes and letting a little more flush creep into her cheeks.

They were sitting beneath the pines, on an upturned boat; she had realized that the surroundings, in themselves were entirely too conducive to unconventionality, and now felt irritated for having added to their influence. She returned vigorously to her safe topic.

"Tell me about women medical students. Do you like teaching them? Are they as bright, really, as your boys?"

"Oh, as a rule, they are good students," he said. "Quiz day is a real lark; they rattle twice as easily as men. I enjoy pouncing down on a sleepy-looking girl and seeing her get scared." He stretched his long legs out and laughed with lazy pleasure at the memory.

"How can you?" she said reproachfully. "I am sure the poor things have a hard enough time anyway, and you ought not to be cruel to them."

"I am not hard on them, really," he said, apologetically. "When it comes to examinations I ask 'em easy questions about eczema and pass every one."

"Do they like you?" she asked, adding mentally, "why can't I keep away from personalities to-day?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I hear I'm quite a pet with them. But I did not come down to talk of women in medicine. I came to see if you would marry me."

"Oh, I can't," she gasped.

He got up, walked slowly around one or two pine trees, then came back and stood before her with his hands in his pockets and his chin well down in his collar. "When he did so at home his sisters said despairingly: "It's no use; Dick's mind is made up the other way."

"Why not?" he asked. A tingle of irritation passed through her. "I never knew before," thought she, "that he was conceited."

Aloud she said promptly and clearly: "Because I have not the faintest desire to do so."

He sat down by her again, picked up a stick and poked the laurel bush near him thoughtfully.

"I love you," he said, "as much as I know how."

"They usually say that first," she said quickly.

He threw back his head and laughed.

"Do they?" he said.

She flushed in intense indignation. "Evidently this whole matter seems to you a flippant joke," she said bitterly.

"Virginia!" he exclaimed, then added quietly: "You have known the whole state of affairs for a long time, I am sure. My great desire to be with you, my happiness when with you have been patent to all. Sometimes, after a peculiarly happy time together—such as we had at Bar Harbor last summer—I have felt sure that you loved me. It hardly seems as if we could have had such days as those unless you did."

He paused and looked intently at her. She met his gaze with the steady look which had so often delighted and interested him—it seemed so inconsistent with certain other of her traits.

"How chilly this air is, even here," she said.

"You are cold?" he asked, rising quickly.

"No, I am not," she answered, changing her mind. "Sit down. I wonder how it would do to be perfectly honest with you?"

"I think it would do first-rate," he answered.

"I never tried it before," she said thoughtfully.

He could not repress a faint smile. "This seems to be different from the others in several minor points," he said, and then he wished he had not.

"It is certainly too chilly," she said rising. They walked half across the bridge. He stopped in the sunshine and leaned on the railing.

"Much warmer here, isn't it? Now you are going to be honest with me."

"Well," she said, "this is how it is. I don't know really whether I love you or not. I have never been in love before."

"I am glad to hear it," he said gravely.

"Why," she said, startled, "have you?"

"Not since I was a boy," he answered. "But go on. You don't know how you regard me—"

"There are some reasons why I could think either way. If I did care, I should know it, think. Girls who care say they could not be happy doing anything but marrying, while I could go on and do any number of things—be just as I am for a long time, and then study, oh, all sorts of things! I might even, after I got past—after people stopped saying I was attractive—like to study medicine. You do have some girls like me in your class, don't you?"

"We have some quite pretty girls," he said, "who apparently have no real love for the work."

"There!" she cried. "Don't you see how just the way you say that makes a reason for me to be afraid to marry you? Now your queerness, and abruptness, and the not being sure whether you are making fun of me are half fascinating, but perhaps if I were married to you they would irritate me and we should be dreadfully unhappy!"

"Could you ever believe that I make fun of you?" he asked. She did not answer, but gazed down into the water with unseeing eyes.

"This getting married is a great problem," she said, with a sigh.

"Yes," he answered, heartily, "one of the most urgent and important questions of the day." She looked up at him uneasily; he looked down tenderly, and continued, "So urgent that I long to have it settled in the little time left before the train goes."

"Oh," she said, "you don't realize how seriously and earnestly one should think it over."

"Yes, I do," he answered. "I myself have pondered on it long and carefully."

"So," she said, "you had to argue yourself into it, to work yourself up to believing you cared for me! This wind really is as keen as in Boston. Come, let's go and get warm."

They walked on in silence toward the hotel. As they crossed the platform and picked their way among the boxes and bundles, a man who was busied with a paste pot looked up with an amused smile at their solemn progress. She caught it.

"Everything is being labelled," she said, inantly.

"Yes," he answered, "except me. Am I to be tagged 'rejected' or 'accepted?'"

She stood still and looked at him with indignant contempt.

"Your train leaves so soon perhaps I had better say good-by here; you must have some final arrangements to make. I hope it will not be too windy for a pleasant trip back to New York. Good-by."

He took her extended hand. "As you say," he answered, "we must make some final arrangements. You know how I love you. Will you marry me?"

"Can't you see how incompatible our natures are?" she cried. "I so earnest and warm-hearted, and you so flippant and cold."

The man among the boxes grew interested. He chose a box nearer them for his next label.

She lowered her voice. "Do you know," she asked, "that you are still holding my hand?"

"Yes," he said, "I knew it, though I am so cold and indifferent. Will you marry me?"

The train bell rang. "They must have changed the time," she said. "Run or you will be left!"

As the forlorn little train pulled out they walked down to the beach.

"You will have to wait for to-night's train, and won't that make you miss your boat? How about those poor girls and eczema?"

"They will have to get on without me, poor things," he said. "But it is the patients who have eczema, you know. Perhaps I shall stay over Sunday now."

She looked at him with delighted eyes. "What!" she said, "two whole days for us to be happy in!"—Katharine Bates, in Kate Field's Washington.

THE SHOEMAKER SHOULD STICK TO HIS LAST.—Meissonier's wife sent in haste for the doctor, who responded promptly, fearing that serious illness had overtaken the famous artist. But it was only a lapdog for whom his services were required, and he was indignant. Pocketing his pride, however, he ministered to the patient and cured him. At the end of the year Mme. Meissonier noticed in the doctor's bill no item for this case, and called his attention to it, whereupon the medical man explained that he was not a veterinary surgeon, and could not, therefore, make a charge. He was glad, however, to do the dog a kindness. But the lady insisted. "Well," said the doctor, "the hinges of my garden gate are rusty. Ask M. Meissonier to bring his brush and paint them for me."

THE KIND THAT CURES

H. B. HITCHCOCK, Springfield, Mass.

The following wonderful testimonial from Mr. H. B. Hitchcock, who was shipping clerk for the Powers Paper Co. for 19 yrs., and who now resides at No. 100 Water St., Springfield, Mass., proves that DANA'S is "THE KIND THAT CURES."

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA CO.:

GENTLEMEN—I am now 41 years old, and some 15 years since I began to fail—an all-gone, tired feeling would permeate my whole being. I grew worse and worse, and as the years went by I consulted in all seven Physicians—tried a noted Sarsaparilla, but received no benefit. I had terrible headaches—had to live on the least apple dumpling stomach was so weak that it would retain only the lightest food—had severe constipation. It was hard work for me to rise from my bed. My nerves were prostrated to such a degree that I could not be left alone in a room, I seemed as though I should fly, and I felt that I would either die than live. This was my condition last November when I began taking as a last resort. It helped me from the first. I have taken only four bottles. Can eat anything—sleep like a child, and am in fact, completely CURED. DANA'S is the only medicine I could recommend for it cures when all others fail.

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

Yours very truly, H. B. HITCHCOCK

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Cures Others

Will cure You is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend and try to impose upon you as "just as good as Ayer's." Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla and AYER'S only, if you need a blood purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation and made a record for cures that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and in a short time the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every young man or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, 33 William street, New York city.

The Fore-Fall of the Year.

As in the Autumn's olden,
In the fore-fall of the year,
Brown and bronze and golden
And purple tints appear
O'er all the landscape splendid
On which I stand and gaze,
Or watch the blue sky blended
With sunshine and with haze.

The ancient alder stoopeth
To drink the brooklet's wine,
Like a red banner droopeth
From tree and porch the vine;
The maple turning rosy
And crimson in the Fall,
Is of all trees the posy—
The fairest of them all.

Now blanches many a blossom
That bloomed sweet and fair
Upon earth's kindly bosom
That alas, will soon be bare;
Hastes the Indian Summer hither,
Of sunny age a type;
The sun-burnt grasses wither,
The foliage all is ripe.

The sumach's leaves are crimson,
Her seeds are garnet-red,
And Pan lays hairy limbs on Fire by the river's bed.
The day be bright or duller
Fair is the scene unrolled;
The woods are gay with color,
The ways are filled with gold,

The sunlight warm and mellow
Bathes town and tower and church,
And turns the green leaves yellow
Upon the silver birch.
We can hear the cascade falling
Full half a league away;
And in the pine woods, calling,
The blue and crested jay.

As in the Autumns olden,
As in many a Fall to be,
The fern leaves gilded golden
Are beautiful to see.
All nature now is sober,
A calm rests over all,
And taught by tanned October,
We feel serious in the Fall.

THE RIFLED LETTER.

I am an old man now, having passed my seventy-fifth milestone, yet I remember as if it were but yesterday every detail of a case—one of my first criminal cases, which I conducted more than fifty years ago.

It was in the month of March, 1841, that I was called to Jackson, Miss., having been retained in the interest of a young man who had been accused of robbing the mail. I arrived early in the morning, and at once sought my client and had a long conference with him. The rifled mail bag had been recovered and the letters from which money had been extracted were given me by the prosecuting attorney for examination.

After satisfying myself with its contents, so far as the interests of my client demanded, I returned them, and as I had nothing special to do during the afternoon I went into court for the purpose of getting a little insight into the methods of a Mississippi tribunal.

The first case on the docket was one of theft, and the prisoner against whom this charge had been filed was a young girl—not over seventeen—named Katherine Hunter.

She was exceedingly pretty and looked like one who had been tenderly reared. There was something very attractive about her—something so pure and innocent that it at once convinced me that she was not guilty of the crime catalogued against her. She looked troubled and her eyes were red with weeping, but when the case was called the multitude of faces turned searchingly upon her frightened her so as to make her forget that she was actually on trial.

The complaint set in a positive way that the prisoner had stolen $100 from her mistress, the wealthy Mrs. Morgan, and although the poor girl protested her innocence in the wildest terms, the circumstances were all against her and her chance to escape conviction seemed very slight indeed.

The $100 was in bank notes and had been taken from Mrs. Morgan's trunk, which occupied a little closet off her sleeping room and to which no one had access except this maid—Katherine Hunter.

While Mrs. Morgan was giving her testimony, I felt some one clutch my arm tightly, and glancing around quickly, encountered the tearful eyes of a young man fixed pleadingly upon me. He was a fine-looking youth, with much intelligence in his face, and in a hoarse whisper said:

"I see you are interested in the case in progress, and as I have been informed that you are a first-class lawyer I wish you would do me the favor to undertake the defense."

"Has she no counsel?" I inquired.

"None worth speaking of," was the answer, "and she is innocent—as innocent as the angels in heaven. Save her and all I possess shall be yours."

"Is she your sister?" I asked.

"No, sir," he replied, "but—but—I am interested in her and she must be saved at any cost."

I was interested in the prisoner simply because I thought she was innocent, but not knowing the history of the case I feared I could not do her justice, and this I confided to the youth who, I was now fully persuaded was her lover—perhaps her affianced husband.

He continued to urge me to take the case, as the counsel employed was wholly unfit to manage it. I am not sure that I should have granted his petition even then had not I at that moment caught the prisoner's eye, and in that glance read a whole volume of humble entreaty. That look decided me at once, and informing the young man that I was at his service, he conducted me at once to the girl, who very gladly consented to give me the whole charge of the case.

I then informed the court that I was ready to undertake the defense, and asked for a few minutes' cessation in the examination of witnesses that I might have an opportunity of speaking to my client. Retiring to a private room, in as few words as possible she repeated the story of the theft.

Her mistress first missed the money when she went up to her room—just after dinner—and in a quiet way inquired of her if any one had been in the room during her absence, but she did not intimate that she mistrusted her until after Rachel Rose, the chamber-maid, had been questioned. The girl's story was that some time in the forenoon, while passing her mistress's door, she detected a slight noise, and peeping through the keyhole, had seen the lady's maid rumaging through her trunk.

Katherine said she denied the charge indignantly and raised no objections when they proposed examining her trunk. Judge of her surprise, then, when $25 of the missing money was found in the tray near the top, as if it had been hastily stowed away.

She had always thought Rachel honest, though she had never taken kindly to her, principally, she thought, because the girl had always shown a dislike to her. The person she pointed out to me as Rachel Ross was a bold-faced, impudent looking specimen, scarcely up to the average of her class in intelligence, and it required but the look of intense hatred which I saw in her little gray eyes when she turned them on the prisoner, to convince me that the rogue was before me.

"Rachel Ross! Rachel Ross!" I repeated, a new light breaking in upon me as something in the letters I had examined in the morning came back to me with peculiar force. I went to the prosecuting attorney and requested the loan of the rifled letters again. Selecting the one I wanted I returned the others and hurried back to my seat in the court room.

Mrs. Morgan then resumed her testimony, which did not differ materially from the statement given me by my client. She identified the bills, two tens and a five, found in the prisoner's trunk, and swore positively that no one else except herself had access to the closet where the trunk was kept.

I asked her a few questions regarding the prisoner's former character, and was assured that up to the date of the theft she had never given her the least occasion to mistrust her.

Rachel Ross was then put upon the stand and in a bold way told how in passing Mrs. Morgan's room she had heard a suppressed noise which arroused her suspicions, and how in stooping down to look through the keyhole she had discovered the maid, Katherine, tossing through the little hair trunk which stood back from the door, in direct range with the keyhole, through which she was stealthily peeping.

Finally, she discovered the package of money in the girl's hands, which was immediately thrust into her pocket, a proceeding that so horrified her that she ran away without waiting to confront the culprit, as she should have done.

When she sat down, flushed with conceited triumph, I asked to have Mrs. Morgan recalled, and when she had again taken the stand, I inquired if it were impossible for the chamber maid to enter her trunk room.

"Certainly not, sir; the door was never locked between it and my chamber," was the answer. "What I meant was that no one except my maid had any right there."

"Do you think she could have had any knowledge concerning the money in the trunk?" I asked.

"She might, for I have frequently gone to the trunk in her presence for money to pay her wages," she replied somewhat reluctantly.

"Have you known of the prisoner having used more money than was her custom since the money was stolen?" I questioned, watching her closely.

"No sir; I think not, I am sure she has not," returned Mrs. Morgan decidedly.

Rachel Ross was then recalled and I asked her why she had not informed her mistress of her discovery before she had been compelled to do so, and her answer was that she did not like to expose the poor girl, who seemed to be friendless.

"How long have you been with Mrs. Morgan?" I asked, disgusted with the pretension to friendship.

"Not quite a year, sir," she answered promptly.

"How much does she pay you?"

"A dollar and seventy-five cents a week.

"Have you been using your money as you earned it since you have been in her employ?"

"Certainly, sir, what I needed of of it."

"How much, do you suppose?" I urged.

"I don't know, I am sure. How should I, spending it along as it was necessary, thinking it was nobody's business since I earned it myself?" she replied defiantly, glancing around the court room to see if her sarcasm was appreciated.

"Then you have not laid by any considerable sum since you have been working for your present mistress?" I insisted.

"No, sir," she retorted sharply.

"And you had no money when you came here?" I insisted.

"No, sir," disdainfully.

"If you had really wished to injure the prisoner you could not have raised $25 of your own to put in her trunk then?" I questioned.

"Indeed I could not. I never had that much money at one time in my life, and I would not have been fool enough to throw it away in that fashion even if I had." she answered flippantly. "Besides, the money found in the girl's trunk was identified by Mrs. Morgan, a fact you might have remembered if you had paid attention to her testimony."

Without being in the least crushed by what she evidently considered her sharpness, I said quietly:

"Will you tell me if your home is in this state?"

"It is, sir."

"Please name the town in which you reside?" I continued.

She hesitated, and the defiant look passed from her bold face, but finally she replied: "I live in Lawrence on the Mississippi."

"Do you take receipts from your servants when you pay them?" I inquired, turning to Mrs. Morgan.

"Always," she responded; "the girl has told you the truth about the payments."

"I don't doubt it in the least," I replied, but as particular proof is the thing the court demands, I would be under obligation if you would procure some bearing Miss Ross's signature, madam.'

The lady went out somewhat reluctantly I fancied, but in a few minutes returned with four receipts which she had taken from the witness. The signature in each was the same, written in an odd, irregular hand that would be hard to counterfeit.

"Now, Rachel Ross," I exclaimed in a quick, startling tone, at the same time looking her sternly in the eye, "be kind enough to inform the court where you got that $75 which you sent your sister at Lawrence."

The witness turned white to the lips and trembled so violently that I was sure she was going to faint, but she did not, and after a brief interval, to give the jury time to witness her emotions, I repeated the question.

"I—never—sent her any," she gasped, holding to the rail to prevent falling.

"You did, and you know it," I thundered, for I was beginning to get excited, too. She made no answer, and turning to the court, I said: "May it please your honor and gentlemen of the jury, I came here to defend a man charged with robbing the mail, and in the course of my preliminary examination I had access to the letters that had been rifled.

"When I entered upon this case and heard the name of the witness pronounced, I went out and got this letter which I now hold, for I remembered of having seen one bearing the signature of Rachel Ross. This letter was taken from the mail pouch, and contained $75, and by examining the postmark you will see that it was mailed from this place on the day of the robbery."

"With your permission I will read it to you."

The court nodded assent and I read aloud:

Dear Sister Ruth:—I enclose $75, which I want you to keep for me til I cum home; don't say one word about it to no one, as I don't want folks to know I've got so much money; now don't mention it to a livin' sole. I'm gettin' along all right and enjoyin' myself, only I don't like that gude for nothin' Kate Hunter that is here, but never mind, she'll have to go one of these days or I miss my gess. Your sister till deth. RACHEL ROSS.

Passing the letter and receipts obtained from Mrs. Margon to the judge, I said:

"You will observe that one hand wrote the letter and signed the receipts. It is quite evident that the balance of the $100—the $25 found in the prisoner's trunk—was put there with the design of criminating her."

"Without another word I leave my client's case in your hands, assured that you will do her justice." The jury had heard the witness testify that she had no money, and after satisfying themselves that she had written the letter, they could do nothing but bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

The applause in the court room showed in what channel the sympathies of the people ran, and while Rachel Ross was marched away to answer to the charge of theft, Katherine Hunter walked on the arm of her lover triumphantly from the court room.

The same evening a prominent citizen called and presented me with a purse containing $100, which he informed me was raised by the young girl's friends in return for what I had done for her.

Consequently, when at a later hour the young man came to me with his earnings I told him I had been recompensed, and suggested that he use the amount tendered in setting up a little home of his own. He took my advice, and before I left town I had the pleasure of attending a quiet wedding in which he officiated as groom and my fair client was the happy bride.—Chicago News.

THE GREEDY BOTTLE.

A poor under-sized boy named Tim sitting by a bottle, and looking in, said "I wonder if there can be a pair of shoes in it." He wanted to go to a Sunday school picnic, but he had no shoes. His mother had mended his clothes, but said his shoes were so bad he must go barefoot. Then he took a brick and broke the bottle, but there were no shoes in it, and he was frightened, for it was his father's bottle. Tim sat down again, and sobbed so hard that he did not hear a step beside him, until a voice said:

"Well! what's all this?" He sprang up in great alarm; it was his father.

"Who broke my bottle?" he said.

"I did," said Tim, catching his breath, half in terror and half between his sobs.

"Why did you?" Tim looked up. The voice did not sound so terrible as he had expected. The truth was, his father had been touched at the sight of the forlorn figure, so very small and so sorrowful, which had bent over the broken bottle.

"Why," he said, "I was looking for a pair of new shoes; I want a pair of shoes awful bad to wear to the picnic—all the other chaps wear shoes."

"How came you to think you'd find shoes in a bottle?" the father asked.

"Why mother said so; I asked her for some new shoes, and she said they had gone into the black bottle, and that lots of other things had gone into it too,—coats and hats, and bread and meat and things; and I thought if I broke it I'd find 'em all, and there ain't a thing in it!" And Tim sat down again and cried harder than ever. His father seated himself on a box in the disorderly yard, and remained quiet for so long a time, that Tim at last looked cautiously up.

"I'm real sorry I broke your bottle, father, I'll never do it again."

"No, I guess you won't," he said, laying his hand on the rough little head as he went away, leaving Tim overcome with astonishment that his father had not been angry with him. Two days after, on the very evening before the picnic, he handed Tim a parcel, telling him to open it.

"New shoes! New shoes!" he shouted. "O father, did you get a new bottle! And were they in it?"

"No, my boy, there isn't going to be a new bottle. Your mother was right—the things all went into the bottle, but you see getting them out is no easy matter; so, God helping me, I am going to keep them out after this."

A COURT SCENE.

At the Assize held on a certain occasion in the County of Lincoln, England, and while a case of importance was on trial, both the court and counsel had much difficulty in getting the timid country witnesses to speak loud enough to be heard by the jury. It was an august and awe-inspiring place to these simple-minded people. One of the counsel in particular, had been especially bothered, though it is more than probable that his own ungentlemanly and coarse badgering had more to do with intimidating witnesses than anything else.

He was a self-sufficient and overbearing man who had gained place by having married the rich widow of a deceased nobleman. After this counsel had coaxed, and badgered, and bullied a number of witnesses into confusion, there was another called upon the stand—a young hostler, stout and vigorous, who seemed the very incarnation of simplicity.

"Now, sir," said the counsel aforesaid, in a tone stern and outrageously loud, "I trust we shall have no difficulty in making you speak up."

"Sartin, zur,—I hopes not," shouted the witness, in a voice which almost shook the building.

"How dare you speak in that way, sir?" demanded the counsel, indignantly.

"Please, sur, I can't speak louder," returned the witness, with a volume of tone which this time shook the building entirely.

"Look ye, my man,—have you been drinking this morning?" demanded the counsel, his temper evidently tried to its utmost.

"Yes, zur."

"Aha!—and what have you drank?"

"Coffee, zur."

"Did you have anything in your coffee?"

"Ye-e-s, zur?"

"What was it?"

"A spune, zur."

The audience roared, and even the court hid its face, while the exhausted counsel sank into his chair, evidently feeling that he had had enough.

HOW CHURCH BELLS SAVED ATLANTA.—"I remember," said an old soldier last Sunday morning, "when church-going bells much more distant than those saved the city of Atlanta. It is a story I never saw in print:

"In early August, 1864, Gen. Sherman had closed in on Atlanta. The Eleventh Indiana Battery had placed in position, with our assistance, four 64-pound rifle guns to shell the city with heavy artillery, under the command of Gen. John M. Brannan. Our regiment, the Second Massachusetts, had had Sunday morning inspection and parade, after which the men of the regiment went to the hill back of the camp to see the effect of the fire on the city lying below us and two and a half miles away.

"We could see the churches of Atlanta, from the spires of several of which were floating rebel flags. The batteries were in position, the guns were shotted, the fuses were in and an officer stepped up to pull the lanyard to fire the first shot. As he lifted his hand the sound of a church bell ringing the people to worship fell on his ear.

"For a moment there was silence. The officers looked from one to the other, and the shot was not fired that day. The Sunday church-going bell was too much for the Twentieth Corps of Sherman's army. But on Monday the city got it."—New York Times.

ONE WAY OF LOOKING AT A CROWD.—A gentleman who had promised to meet his wife in a large establishment where all sorts of things are sold at low prices was making his way through the throng of women. Forced to pause for a moment near a counter behind which stood a pretty saleswoman, he blurted out:

"Is there anything on earth that would reconcile a man to such a crowd as this?"

"Yes, sir," was the quick reply. "Belonging to the firm."

A TRIP TO CHICAGO.

WHAT M. J. SISK AND F. U. WETMORE SAW AND HEARD.

Starting from Palmer at 6.15 p. m., we went by the Boston and Albany Railroad to Springfield. From Springfield we went by Connecticut River Railroad to Northampton, where we arrived at 7.45, and had to wait an hour and a half. At 9.15 the janitor called "All aboard for Chicago," and in almost an incredibly short time the sound of the whistle and the rattle of the car wheels told us that we were speeding on our way towards the Western City. The night was beautifully clear, and as we passed the many villages on our way, it seemed as if the moon shone forth with greater radiance so that we might be more forcibly impressed with the beauties of New England.

It was about 3 o'clock when we passed Poughkeepsie Bridge and shortly after the appearance of the Aurora Borealis told us that the light of another day was near at hand. I doubt if Lieut. Greely welcomed the return of Lieut. Lockwood and Secretary Brainard from the fartherest north with more heartfelt appreciation than did the writer of this article the rays of the morning sun. After washing and partaking of a breakfast, our faces were almost constantly turned toward the windows. As we neared Philadelphia, we saw several canal-boats, heavily laden, being towed to their destination by mules. The mules were about 100 yards in advance of the boat, and seemed to perform their task with apparent consciousness of the good work they were doing.

At 8.30 we arrived in Philadelphia, which is among the first of the historic cities. It is in this city (Carpenter's Hall) that the Declaration of Independence was formulated. It was our privilege to sit in the chairs used by the members of the first Congress. Not far from this historical place is found Independence Hall, where the Declaration of Independence was signed by George Washington. We saw the spectacles worn by him and the inkstand from which the ink was taken to sign this important document; also sat in the chairs used by Washington and William Penn, and saw the belt which the Indians presented to Penn in 1682 as a token of their friendship. On it was written, "Not sworn to but never broken." Also saw the baby clothes made by Mrs. John Adams for her son, John Quincy Adams. We next visited Christ church and rested ourselves in the pew occupied by George Washington when attending church. Our next object of interest was the United States Mint, where all the pennies, nickels, dimes, etc., are made. No wonder if our eyes were unusually large when we saw $5 gold pieces being manufactured at the rate of about 100 per minute. After partaking of a hearty dinner at Wanamaker's we visited the Drexel Institute, which is magnificence in itself, and fully equipped in all its branches.

We again resumed our journey and took the 4 o'clock train for Washington, D. C., where we arrived at 8.30. A cab took us to the International Hotel, Pennsylvania Avenue, where we had engaged rooms for the night. Early the next morning we were on the sight-seeing path again. Now we were in a city where interesting places were almost innumerable, and as we were walking up the avenue a guide confronted us with the assurance that his services would be indispensable. As the time that we could be away from our official duties at the state primary school was considerably limited, we soon made a bargain with this gentleman in blue and the first place he led us was to the Botanical Gardens. All kinds of plants and trees were to be seen, such as the gingo, banana, sago, palm, coffee, allspice, pepper, and a tree called bunya bunya, which sometimes covers nearly an acre of ground. We next visited the Pension Building, which is 400 feet long by 200 feet wide. Eighteen millions of bricks were used in its construction. Besides being used for offices of the pension department, which employs 2000 clerks, it also contains the inaugural ball room, which is 316 feet long and 116 feet wide. The post office building will long be remembered by us for reasons other than what it was our privilege to see. It does not seem that there could be a more perfect system of handling this immense business than is used by our own government. It took only a few seconds for us to see the report of Cyrus Knox, the postmaster in our town, and find that his accounts with the government were square. In the dead letter department 65 clerks are employed and from 1800 to 2000 letters opened daily. Peculiar indeed are the articles that are sent through the mails and find their way to this department. Among this great collection we noticed tambourines, birds' nests, thimbles, watches, bracelets, rings, pictures, toys, cocoanuts, raisins, fancy work, cake, wax candles, Chinese shoes, night watchman's clock, combs, lamps, tin cans, horns, bricks, snakes, skulls, tobacco, etc.

On our way to the White House we saw the theater in which Lincoln was assassinated. The rooms at the White House are magnificent. The east green or music room contains paintings of the highest art. Another room of still greater interest was the blue or diplomatic parlor. The satin on the wall cost $14 per yard, and it was in this room that Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland were married. Having become lately interested in bicycles it gave us much pleasure to visit the Capital Bicycle Club. This is a very fine building and the principal headquarters of the Washington wheelmen. No wonder that the city is called the Bicyclists' Paradise, for it contains no less than 185 miles of pavements on cemented streets, with scarcely an elevation that could in any way be termed a hill. We were informed that 12,000 bicycles were used on those thoroughfares. As we journeyed along we passed the Methodist church were Gen. Grant met for worship; also the Presbyterian church, where Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland attend. Still further on we saw the criminal court room in which Guiteau was tried for the murder of President Garfield, and the cell in which he was confined. The next public building of interest that we visited was the bureau of engraving and printing. Here all the notes from $1 to $1000 are made and all the government stamps used on exported or imported goods. Five hundred people are employed in this department. We next visited the Agricultural Building, where all the different woods, grains and fruits of the country are exhibited, and different species of cocoon from which silk is obtained. The Medical Museum also elicited a portion of our time. Here we saw a portion of the vertebra of Booth, showing the course of the bullet when shot by the officer who was striving to capture him. The fish commission and the National Museum were visited, but as the most important articles had been sent to Chicago a passing glance was all that was given them.

Being somewhat wearied we sat down beneath the shade of a tree to soliloquize on what we had seen and make plans for the future. While we were thus meditating a cry "Where is my ticket?" suddenly startled us. Could it be possible that we were to to have our happiness marred by the loss of such an essential article? A search through the pocket that had been its resting place still further proved that it was gone.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE NOTES.

The president of Wellesley College begins this year with a new title, Doctor Shafer, Oberlin having conferred upon her the degree L. L. D. Says the Journal of Education, "There has been no more conspicuous success since the days of Mark Hopkins and Dr. McCosh than has been witnessed in the case of the president of Wellesley College."

This college year begins also a new curriculum in which a number of specified courses required for graduation are fewer, and a great many new electives are opened. The number of students this year is 752.

Prof. Morgan and a number of instructors are to be in Europe this year. The professors who were abroad last year are back again at work.

One hundred dollars is the contribution of the college for bread for the poor people of Smyrna who are suffering because of the quarantine of that part.

Republican Senatorial Convention.

The Republican delegates of the First Hampden Senatorial District, which comprises the towns of Brimfield, Holland, Monson, Palmer, Wales and Wilbraham, and the city of Springfield, met in convention at the district court room in this village at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. The meeting was called to order by Col. A. H. Goetting of Springfield, member of the Republican State Committee. On a call for nomination for chairman Dr. William Holbrook proposed the name of Judge Robinson, who was chosen. Nominations for secretary of the convention were then called for and resulted in the election of George D. Lang of Springfield, and by vote of the convention the chairman appointed the following committee on credentials: Chauncey Peck of Wilbraham, Henry P. Holden of Palmer and S. S. Taft of Springfield. After examining the credentials the committee reported 57 delegates present, apportioned among the various towns as follows: Brimfield, 2; Holland, 1; Monson, 4; Palmer, 4; Wales, 2; Wilbraham, 3; Springfield, 41. At the call for nominations for senator, S. S. Taft of Springfield in a short speech presented the name of Edwin F. Lyford of Springfield. On taking the vote the name of Mr. Lyford was unanimously adopted. The work of the convention was finished by the unanimous selection of Col. A. H. Goetting of Springfield as the member of the state committee from this district for the ensuing year, the nomination being made by Mr. Nason of Springfield.

John A. King, son of George A. King, formerly of this place, has commenced the study of medicine at the Gross Medical College, Denver, Col.

O. D. Wells will have a husking bee at his farm next Monday evening. A general invitation is extended and a good time promised to all who will attend.

The Thursday evening meetings at St. Paul's Universalist church will be in charge of William Merriam for the next two weeks, in the absence of the pastor.

The pastor of the Congregational church will preach Sunday morning on "The Bible in the Life of To-day," and in the evening on "A Personal Testimony."

Miss Jennie Rogers has returned to her duties at the state primary school after a long absence, during which time she has been caring for her mother who has been ill.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Weld attended the wedding at Westboro yesterday of Mr. Weld's sister Ida to Rev. Charles Denfield, an Episcopal clergyman of Providence, R. I.

A fire was discovered in the house of Horace Hamilton at Palmer Center Tuesday afternoon. The cause was probably a defective flue. The damage was about $200.

A new feature was introduced in the Sunday school work at the Second Congregational church last Sunday. A part of the lesson was illustrated by the use of a stereopticon.

Edson Walker, who has been in the employ of Charles D. Holbrook at the grain store, has removed to Three Rivers, where he has taken a position as night watchman in the mill.

W. W. Main of the Baptist state convention gave an illustrated lecture on state missionary work at the Baptist church Tuesday evening. The lecture was interesting and well attended.

The newly-organized whist club held a meeting with Mrs. B. P. Morse at the Converse House Monday evening. The club has decided to adopt the name of Woronoco for the organization.

George M. Atkins has purchased the residence of A. H. Willis on Thorndike street. Mr. Atkins will remove from his present home on Converse avenue some time about the first of next month.

Dr. W. H. Stowe has recently added to his collection of relics and curios an Indian stone war club 21 inches long. He also has some relics from the old Elam Ferry house, which was recently burned.

Mrs. Emma Royce, daughter of Wallace Chilson, was married at Chicago Tuesday to Dr. Elmer E. Hill, formerly of this place. After their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Hill will reside at Red Wing, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mitchell of New York have been stopping at the Converse House a few days this week. Mr. Mitchell is the editor of Life, and with his wife is taking a carriage trip around the country.

Arthur Paddock and George Johnson of Conway were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Paddock on State avenue Monday night. They had been taking a bicycle trip through Connecticut and were on their way home.

George Moore, who for over a year has been employed in Brooks's jewelry store, has accepted a position in the same line of business in Hartford. He left Monday morning to enter upon the duties of his new situation.

There will be a union meeting of the Baptist and Congregational churches to-night in the Congregational church. The subject will be "Removing Hindrances to a Larger Spiritual Work in Palmer." Everybody invited.

The school committee has decided that children who have never attended school before can only enter the first grade at the beginning of a term, instead of at any time during the term as has been the custom heretofore.

Superintendent of Schools Small of this town delivered an address before the institute of school superintendents at Springfield Wednesday on "School supervision; ends to be obtained; difficulties to be encountered."

Edwin H. Hecox has purchased a building lot on the road leading from George Ely's farm to Three Rivers of James W. Calkins of Springfield for $500. F. F. Marcy has the contract to erect a house upon the lot for Mr. Hecox.

The Republicans will hold a caucus at the town house this evening to elect delegates to the representative convention the 17th. The contest for the position appears to lie now between H. G. Loomis and H. P. Holden, both of Palmer.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Henry A. Day of Wilbraham and Miss Alice Avery of Montgomery at the residence of the bride's parents the 25th. Mr. Day was formerly a clerk in the store of Robinson & Tayior in this village.

The meeting of the Western Massachusetts Universalist Ministers' Association, which was to have been held Monday at St. Paul's Universalist church, was postponed until next mouth, owing to the inability of some of the members to attend.

An average sized audience gathered at the opera house last Friday evening to see Frank Jones in "Our Country Cousin." The play is founded upon farmer life, and quite a number of specialties are introduced. The production was good but lengthy.

A movement is being made among the young people to organize a dancing class for the coming winter. All interested should leave their names with either Edwin E. Brooks or Fred Adams. The class will meet on Tuesday evenings if one is formed.

At the Baptist church Sabbath morning the pastor will preach, taking for his subject "Everlasting fire in the heart." Meeting for men only at 6 o'clock. Evening service at 7 o'clock; subject,—"The change produced by the conversion of a sinner."

A telegraph pole was found on the track of the Ware River road between Old Furnace and Gilbertville Monday afternoon by the train which arrives here at 5.20. The train did not strike the pole and was only delayed while the train hands were removing it.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church held a social and supper in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon and evening. Tea was served under the direction of Mrs. E. Brown, Mrs. E. Calkins, Mrs. H. Lawrence, Mrs. S. C. Hunt, Mrs. J. H. Kenerson and Mrs. George Ezekiel.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins, James B. Shaw, O. P. Allen and Deacon G. H. Hastings have been chosen delegates to represent the Second Congregational church at the Hampden Conference of Congregational churches to be held at the Eastern Avenue church, Springfield, next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Word was received early in the week of the death at Providence of C. W. Scott, who for some time was a clerk in the drug store of LeGro & Lynde in this village. While in town he made many friends. At the time of his death he had a position in a wholesale drug house in the city of Providence.

Mrs. George Scripture of Stafford Springs had a stroke of paralysis while coming out from Springfield on Conductor Camp's train Tuesday evening. One side was completely paralyzed and she was not able to talk until after the train arrived here. She was taken to her home on the 7.10 train for the south.

C. A. Brown & Co. are putting in a Howard furnace for W. N. Flynt in his residence at Monson. This furnace is the largest size made and is larger than any other now in use anywhere in this vicinity. They also will put one of the same make into E. H. Truesdell's new house on West Main street.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Baptist church held its monthly meeting in the vestry Wednesday. The usual good supper was enjoyed by the large number that attended. Mrs. P. M. Shearer, Mrs. F. M. Eager, Mrs. E. B. Taylor and Mrs. L. W. Parkhurst had charge of providing the supper.

C. M. Duncan, who formerly had a repair shop in connection with R. J. Henry's shoe store, but who recently has been living with his daughter at South Framingham, has returned to this village and will open a repair shop in the building on Walnut street formerly occupied by C. L. Alexander & Co. as an office.

The residents of this village may be thankful that the town is not in as bad condition, as far as the water supply is concerned, as a great many towns in the state. The reservoirs of the Palmer Water Co. have fully kept up with all demmands made upon them, and the supply in the upper reservoir is gaining slowly but surely each day.

The Tuesday evening class for Bible study at St. Paul's Universalist church will be in charge of Judge Robinson next week. The subjects to be considered will be: "If God knew there would be use for an endless hell, must He not have created some men for endless misery? Can there be any such thing as sin in heaven? If there was sin in heaven, may not sin be committed there again?"

An alarm was rung in from box 48 a few minutes before 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for a brush fire on land owned by Dr. W. H. Stowe on Thorndike street. The department responded, and a gang of men were soon on the spot armed with hoes. The fire burned over two or three acres before it was subdued. The timely aid of the high school boys did a great deal toward putting out the fire.

Mrs. William Merriam, Mrs. Joseph Holbrook and Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Moulton will start Sunday evening for the Universalist general convention at Washington. After the convention they will take a trip to the World's Fair. While away Rev. Mr. Moulton will gather material for two lectures, one on "Washington and the Conventions," and the other upon "Chicago and the World's Fair."

Two good rehearsals of "Wanita" have been held this week. There is a good demand for tickets for both evenings. All the members of the Puritan chorus are requested to meet at the opera house this evening at 7.30. Everybody who takes part must be on hand promptly at 7.30 Monday evening for a dress rehearsal. Everything points to a very successful presentation next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening the prizes for the leaf collection were awarded, the first, Gray's Botany, going to Miss Julia Allen; second, Mrs. Dana's book, to Henry McGilp; third, Mrs. Dana's book, to Harry Sisk. The society has been presented with a fine specimen of hen hawk by Charles Johnson. The bird will be mounted and placed in the society's rooms. At the next meeting Miss Bertha Royce will read.

At the annual meeting of Washington Council, Royal and Select Masters, Monday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Thrice Illustrious Master, George Robinson; deputy master, Frank A. Royce; P. C. of W., W. A. Weld; treasurer, H. Newton Sedgwick; recorder, George A. Bills; chaplain, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; M. of C., D. H. Brown; C. of G., Frederick Allen; C. of C., H. E. W. Clark; steward, William A. Barnes; sentinel, S. W. Shumway.

Thomas Blanchard's horse, "Caddie Stout," which took third money in the stake race at Mystic two weeks ago, was awarded second money, as the winner was ruled out because it came from outside the limit to which the race was confined. "Adelle," who won the four-years-old race at Spencer recently, has been protested by the owner of another horse in the race as being over the age claimed. Mr. Blanchard has sent proofs to the National Driving Association to substantiate his claims that she is entitled to first place.

A number of Universalist people from this village, in company with several from Monson, formed a party yesterday to attend the dedication of the new Universalist church at Amherst. The Amherst parish was organized in 1887 and has now about 40 families. The first service was held in February, 1888. They now have built a fine modern church at a cost of about $7500. Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston delivered the dedication sermon. Some of the members of the parish here have contributed to the movement.

It is reported that Rev. Herbert F. Moulton, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, has been asked to consider an invitation to a pastorate in the growing city of Somerville. This would offer a larger field than he at present occupies. The church is finely located near Tufts College, three miles from Boston. In view of the aggressive and thorough work now commenced, and the entire harmony of feeling which exists in his charge here, he has declined any inducements which might be offered him to leave. His decision will be welcomed by his many friends in town.

The school committee held a meeting at 9 o'clock Monday morning and elected A. W. Thayer, the present principal of the Maynard high school, to succeed H. B. Knox, resigned. Mr. Thayer was graduated at Wesleyan in the class of '87, and has had six years' experience as principal, the last four of which, before he took charge of the Maynard high school, being as principal of the Westboro high school. A committee consisting of L. E. Moore and W. A. Breckenridge looked up the record of Mr. Thayer and found it satisfactory. Mr. Thayer's salary at the start will be $1400. He is about 30 years of age and married.

The express train from New York to Boston, which passes by this station about 8 o'clock in the evening, had a narrow escape from a bad accident down by the fair grounds Wednesday evening. In some way the coupler on the front of the baggage car slipped, letting the weight of the train come upon the chains which are fastened to the front end of the platform. The front beam of the platform and the steps were torn off. The train stopped by the automatic action of the air brakes without injury to the passengers, save from a slight shaking up due to the sudden stop. The baggage car was brought back to the depot and the train proceeded to Boston without it. The mail and baggage were transferred to the 9.13 train.

At the Republican County Convention held at Springfield Tuesday William H. Brainerd of this village secured the nomination for county commissioner by a good majority over his opponent, E. A. Ellsworth of Holyoke, and the latter and B. F. Burr of Ludlow were chosen for special commissioners. James R. Wells of Springfield was nominated for register of deeds, and Samuel B. Spooner was unanimously nominated for register of probate. The members of the county committee from this vicinity are as follows: Brimfield, James Noyes; Hampden, Charles Burleigh; Holland, William L. Webber; Ludlow, J. B. Knowlton; Monson, William L. Ricketts; Palmer, William W. Leach; Wales, H. A. McFarland; Wilbraham, Earl M. Scott.

A cow belonging to Charles Smith, who lives near the wire mill, got loose last Friday and strayed into the garden of John Wright, who lives in the same neighborhood. As Mr. Wright did not desire to keep any stray cattle the cow was turned over into the care of Field Driver Lawson, who put the cow in his barn to await the appearance of an owner. Smith ascertained the whereabouts of his missing cow and proceeded to the barn and made vigorous demands for his property. He was reinforced by two of his daughters. Lawson declined to give up the animal until the customary charges were paid. Smith made his demands still more emphatic and finally secured his cow. He and his wife were summoned before the court Tuesday morning to explain matters. The case was continued to await the recovery of Smith, who has been taken ill in the meantime.

District Court.

On Saturday Special Justice George H. Newton of Monson presided in the absence of Judge Robinson. Patrick Hickey of Schodack, N. Y., was fined $5 for indulging in a jag. He settled.——On Monday Michael Smith of Monson was charged with assault upon Joseph Folla of the same town. The case was continued to the 14th.——On Tuesday Charles E. and Jane Smith appeared before His Honor to tell why they forcibly took a cow from the custody of the pound keeper. The testimony of Jane Smith was taken and the case placed on file to await the recovery of the husband, who was unable to appear on account of illness.——On Wednesday Timothy Donovan of Monson was given two months in the house of correction for drunkeness.——This morning Herbert Wright of Monson for larceny for Mark Noble was given four months in the house of correction.

State Primary School Notes.

The apples are being gathered and a fair crop is promised.

Mrs. James Knox of Palmer is substituting for Miss LaSalle, who is away on a two-weeks' vacation.

The horse barn is being painted orange, and ere long all the farm buildings will present a similar color.

Last Sunday morning the chapel services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Jenkins of Palmer. In the afternoon Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston delivered a short address to the boys.

A few days ago a recent arrival at the school was seen weeping bitterly while the rest of the boys were enjoying their noon repast. Upon being asked the cause of his grief he very pathetically told how it was impossible to eat all the pudding that had been served him by the waiter, and which he so much appreciated. At the assurance that no such imposition would be permitted in future a happier boy could not be found.

A Plea for Evening Schools.

Editor Journal: — The columns of the JOURNAL reveal from time to time the formation of some society or club for mutual improvement and other progressive objects. Some there are whose purpose is to pick the thorns from the pathway of the sinner, and so lead him kindly to the arms of his Redeemer. Others, again, interested in missionary work, are reaching out the light of faith to those hidden in the obscurity of an unrevealed religion, while others see God everywhere, worship Him in the flowers and hears His voice in the songs of birds.

While all these are commendable in their way, there is another duty that we too utterly neglect. There are growing up in our midst youth of to-day, who will be our mechanics to-morrow. These youth are children of poor parents. It is no disgrace to be poor, because the poor are always with us, and so it is that provision should always be made for children of the poor. The nation's prosperity, then, depends upon educated mechanics. Of course I do not mean that a college education is necessary, for somehow or other, of late, the art is acquired in college of being too strong to work, which gives us an abundance of Micawbers waiting for something nice and genteel to turn up. But we as citizens of Palmer and of this great and glorious republic of America, should feel it a duty incumbent upon us to give to those of our children who are forced at an early age to leave school and enter the mill, an opportunity to pursue their studies. This can only be done by means of evening schools. No town of any importance is up with the times without them. Without them the moment the youth enter the mill the schoolroom will be a closed book to them forever.

Open wide the doors of the evening schoolroom, that all who will may come. Let no citizen of ours go to the gates of the stranger uneducated. We are Americans. Let us glory in the fact, and with a mind filled with intelligence, under the protection of the stars and stripes we can defy the world.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

THREE RIVERS.

F. A. Ruggles is building a new barn for Thomas Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. F. White spent this week at Worcester among friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Bliss enjoyed a carriage ride to Collinsville, Ct., this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alden of Springfield visited Mrs. A. Green during the week.

F. A. Upham attended the Sunday school convention at Springfield Tuesday.

Mr. Netherwood of Holyoke visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruggles yesterday.

Rev. G. H. Butler attended the convention of the American board at Worcester this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edson Walker have returned and are occupying one of Charles Murdock's tenements.

The registrars of voters will be at the office of the Palmer Mill next Thursday, from 2 to 4 p. m., for the purpose of revising the list of voters for the coming election.

While J. W. Chency was visiting the World's Fair in the early part of the autumn he purchased a handsome open carriage, costing $450. The vehicle arrived this week, proving to be very satisfactory.

Two young ladies, accompanied by two young gentlemen, left here last Sunday afternoon with the intent of seeing the "Passion play" presented at Monson. But it now seems as if the young people must have been beguiled by some "Lethean" spring, as they arrived at their destination in season to find the church deserted.

Dr. Desmaris of this place went to New York last week to assist in a very difficult operation to be performed on the eyes of Mr. Cadarette of Thorndike, who has been suffering for some time from impaired eyesight. The operation was a critical one, but success attended it and the patient is now doing well. Last Monday, the same physician, assisted by Dr. Bliss, performed another remarkable operation, this time the patient being Miss Mina Moran of North Wilbraham. The young lady has suffered a great deal the past year from synovitis of the knee, and the disease had become so serious that it was necessary to remove a large quanity of cartilage off the joint. This also proved to be a successful operation, as the patient had more relief since than she experienced for many months before.

BONDSVILLE.

Eddie Alden is visiting his parents in Springfield.

Frankie P. Carroll, who has been sick for the last week, is better.

Mrs. Harry Ryther, who has been quite sick, is much improved.

Mrs. Jane Thompson of Nova Scotia has taken a position as housekeeper for George Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Bond started for the World's Fair Tuesday morning to be gone a week or two.

Mrs. Clark of Northampton is visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ryther, on Spring street.

Arthur Monroe of Amherst College has been visiting his uncle, Henry Hobson, a few days this week.

Harry Sedgwick returned Tuesday night from the World's Fair, where he has been for three weeks.

Miss Katherine Burns of Springfield, who taught the intermediate school here last year, visited friends here last week.

Mrs. W. H. Noble returned Tuesday night from Boston and vicinity, where she has been visiting friends the last two weeks.

Thomas Kirke has moved into the tenement recently vacated by Vincent O'Regan, in the company four-tenement block on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Oren Bowen reurned from their bridal trip Monday night, and will be at home to their friends, in West Ware, after this week.

The many friends of Mrs. Lottie Ely, who formerly taught here in the schools and who is now in Colorado, will be pleased to hear that she has recovered from a siege of the typhoid fever.

Mrs. Charles Armstrong and daughter Ruth, and George Lee, are visiting at their old home in Fletcher, Vt., this week. Mr. Lee will bring home his three children, who have been there this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Doolittle have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. Will Taylor, the last two week. From here they go to Chicopee to visit another daughter for a few days, after which they will start for their home in southern California.

The annual meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. was held at the residence of Rev. F. F. Hale last Friday night. It was voted to change the name to Epworth League. These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. J. F. Hale; vice presidents, Richard Russell, Mrs. Ed. Sharrett, Olen Parent, Miss Mabel Ryther; treasurer, Miss Ethel Hayes.

THORNDIKE.

Rev. F. J. Lynch is away for a few days on a vacation.

Millard's mass in F. will be sung by the choir at St. Mary's church Christmas.

The Sunday school children of St. Mary's parish are preparing for first communion.

Several fine shade trees in the grammer school yard have been cut down the past week.

John W. Loftus and Michael Riley have both leased apartments in Hitchcock's block for three years.

Services will be held at 9 o'clock a. m. on Sunday at the Catholic church, instead of the usual time, 10.30.

It is rather strange to think that with all the doctors in the town some of them cannot be induced to locate here.

O. B. Sikes is having all he can do making cider, and his mill is kept running full time in order to keep up to the demand.

The work of moving the residence now occupied by Agent Hobbs to its new location on the old Packard estate will be commenced soon.

People in this place who wish to attend the Comic opera, "Wanita," to be given at the opera house in Palmer next week, can obtain tickets at Allen's drug store, in that village.

The Columbian Band will give another concert to-morrow afternoon on the band stand. The band is now open for engagements. Corespondence may be addressed to the secretary, D. F. Sullivan.

Beni Furkey, who for several years has been a resident of this village, moved last week to Holyoke, when he will go into business. He has rented his property at Four Corners to Joseph Bonville.

The crop of potatoes in this vicinity is unusually large and of good quality, and is being sold at from 70 to 85 cents per bushel. Farmers are finding a ready market at the above prices. Good apples are rather scarce and bring a good price.

The state law requiring all children attending school to be vaccinated kept nearly 100 pupils from the schools in this place for a few days. Many have complied, while others are willing to, but as their parents cannot afford to pay the necessary fee it is a question if some are not kept from school this term on that account.

Through the kindness of Agent Hobbs, many sheds are filled with a supply of wood which will last through the winter. While the mills were not running Mr. Hobbs gave the help permission to cut what they wanted, and it is only putting it mild to say that they accepted his proposition. Some have put in what would cost them many dollars, and they are speaking in the highest terms of Agent Hobbs for his generosity.

The mills are still running three days a week, and although it is not like old times the people feel much more satisfied than if they were out of employment altogether. The merchants are feeling a little more confident, and it is hoped that before long the mills will be running full time, so that the people may be happy once more and everything prosperous in our little village, which is second to none in the town for all kinds of business when times are good.

The Columbian Band will give its first concert and ball at Union Hall Thanksgiving Eve, and is making arrangements to have it first-class in every respect. The concert will consist of selections by the band, also vocal selections by the Columbian Quartette and others. The proceeds are to go toward securing uniforms for the band, which is rapidly improving under the able leadership of Malcomb McKenzie. Tickets for the concert will soon go on sale at 25 and 15 cents; dance tickets, 50 cents.

The Republican state convention was held in Boston last Saturday and nominated the following candidates for the different state offices:

For Governor—Frederick T. Greenhalge of Lowell.

For Lieutenant Governor—Roger Wolcott of Boston.

For Secretary of State—William M. Olin of Boston.

For Treasurer and Receiver General—Henry M. Phillips of Springfield.

For Attorney General—Hosea M. Knowlton of New Bedford.

For Auditor—John W. Kimball of Fitchburg.

Mrs. Charles Bruce, Mrs. Orren Shaw, Mrs. Marvin Bradway, Mrs. William J. Ricketts and William L. Ricketts attended the dedication of the Universalist church at Amherst yesterday.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church held an adjourned meeting at Mrs. Edward D. Cushman's Tuesday afternoon, and elected Mrs. Rufus P. Cushman president.

The lecture by Prof. Richardson of Amherst College Sunday evening on the Passion Play was listened to with much interest by a large audience. The stereopticon views were very clear and fine.

Dr. C. Oscar Thompson of Boston has been in town, and Mrs. Thompson and child, who have spent the summer with Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward King, returned home with the doctor.

Imbibing too freely of the contents of the wine cup caused rather an unsatisfactory ending of what might otherwise have been a very pleasant party at the home of Mr. Folla and wife, near the W. N. Flynt quarry Saturday evening.

The Dorcas society of the Congregational church met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. William N. Flynt and elected these officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. William N. Flynt, president; Mrs. Samuel F. Howard and Mrs. Alvan Merchant, vice presidents; Mrs. Charles O. Chapin, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Carlos M. Gage, Mrs. Cæsar Entwistle and Mrs. Esther R. Holmes, executive committee.

Academy Notes.

It is reported that the first senior class entertainment will be given by Robert J. Burdette, the humorist.

The entertainment committee of the athletic association is planning for an entertainment to be given the first Friday in November.

There has been a change in the meeting of the Philo Society, so that now both societies meet on the same evening. At the next meeting this programme will be rendered: Music; recitation, Mabel Tucker; selected reading, Mary C. Fitzgerald; essay, Carrie Chapin; selected reading, Miss Bowe; essay, Myrtis Perrin.

A slight change has occurred in the order of studies, owing to the fact that the class in botany have just completed their course. This class is now taking chemistry, which is taught wholly by experiment, thus giving the scholars a practical knowledge of the science. The academy furnishes the best science course that can be obtained in any preparatory school in Massachusetts.

The new constitution of the class of '94 is now in use and in accordance therewith the following officers were chosen: President, Leo R. Burrows; vice-president, L. H. Austin; secretary, M. Esther Keep; treasurer, E. B. Flynt; entertainment committee, E. B. Francis, George H. Stone, Florence J. Deverell. The officers form the executive committee, and the term of office is one school term. The last meeting was very interesting and showed a decided increase in attendance; the debate was given to the affirmative. The next meeting will occur next Friday, and the following programme will be carried out: Essay, F. L. Moores; debate, "Resolved, that poverty develops character more than riches,"—affirmative, D. J. McCarthy, negative, H. W. Cristy; recitation, L. A. Prouty.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The Democrats held a caucus Thursday evening, at which some of the state committee presided.

At a meeting of the officers of Grace church Monday evening last, all of the old board were reëlected.

Rev. N. Vanderpyl, pastor of Grace church, will occupy the pulpit in the church at East Wilbraham next Sunday, services beginning at 3 p. m.

The Republicans held a mass meeting in Music Hall Wednesday evening for the purpose of selecting a candidate for nomination as representative to the General Court, and chose Jason Butler.

BELCHERTOWN.

Station Agent W. Stebbins is at the World's Fair.

Alvertus M. Morse has received the Republican nomination as candidate for representative of the Fourth Hampshire district.

The store occupied by Postmaster Bridgman was broken into Sunday night, and between $200 and $300 taken. Admittance was gained by prying open the door with some tools taken from a blacksmith shop across the street, and the safe was blown open by the use of dynamite. Mr. Bridgman was treasurer for several societies and had small sums for each on hand, besides a small amount of government money and stamps. He seems to be peculiarly unfortunate, this being the fourth time that buildings occupied by him have been broken into and money taken. The selectmen of Belchertown have offered a reward of $50 for the apprehension of the thieves.

WALES.

Miss Carrie Houghton is visiting her niece, Mrs. Dr. Buffington, in Springfield.

Mrs. W. A. Harrington of Boston is visiting at her mother's, Mrs. H. A. Chilson.

Mrs. Mary D. Smith has sold her house and lot in Brimfield to Walter E. Bedell for $550.

The harvest concert by the Young People's Union at the Baptist church Sunday evening was very fine.

Lydia A. Shaw has sold a tract of land to Ansel H. Shaw of Monson for $1000. A. G. Fuller to Mary J. Eager, land, $125.

W. A. Lyon, John Swindell and E. A. Clark are delegates to the Republican representative convention at Monson to-day. H. A. McFarland, George S. Rogers and A. A. Hubbard are the new Republican town committee.

BRIMFIELD.

Rev. W. K. Rand and family left Tuesday for Pelham.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown are at the World's Fair.

Mrs. Will A. Janes is visiting relatives in Manchester, N. H.

Dr. R. V. Sawin left for the World's Fair last Saturday evening.

Miss Hattie Brown returned to her home in Springfield Wednesday.

Miss Lilla Warren left town Tuesday for New York to spend the winter.

Newton S. Hubbard and wife left Thursday for Chicago, to remain for some time.

Rev. W. K. Peirce is giving a series of lectures on the World's Fair to the high school students.

Misses Carrie Smith and Bessie Brown attended the teachers' meeting in Springfield Wednesday.

Thomas Morgan, Elijah Allen and Sanford Booth were in Springfield Tuesday as delegates to the county convention.

Miss Carrie Knox of Palmer, who is spending a few weeks at William H. Shaw's, is very ill, and is being attended by Dr. Chamberlain.

WILBRAHAM.

Rev. Fayette Nichols preached at both services in the Highlands Methodist church at Holyoke last Sunday.

The cattle show and fair of the Young People's Agricultural Society, held on the green last Friday, had the largest attendance for years. The schoolhouse was used for fancy goods, canned fruit, flowers of every description, and works of art, which were arranged very tastily. The cut flowers were noticeably fine. The live stock exhibit of horses, cattle, sheep and swine was unusually good and the fine breed of animals from the Wigwam Hill stock farm attracted much attention. They took nearly every first premium in the classes in which they were entered. The ducks, geese and hens received considerable notice, the birds of E. W. Fisher and D. A. Bliss being the favorites. The apples were of an excellent quality and the Congress variety, belonging to L. A. Fiske, was undoubtedly the best line ever exhibited at the fair grounds. In the ten-mile bicycle race there were eleven entries, which was won by Fred Allen of Indian Orchard. The two-mile race was won by G. Heath. Speeches were made after dinner by Secretary William R. Sessions of the state board of agriculture, C. L. Buell of Ludlow, and Rev. Mr. Howard of the Congregational church.

WEST WARREN.

Walter T. Carlisle started for the World's Fair Monday morning.

William Nebert is visiting friends in Taunton and Providence.

Frank Tagan and son Thomas sailed for Ireland, for a three-months' visit, last Saturday.

Rev. Putnam Webber preached in the M. E. church in Ware Thursday night. The Praying Band and other members attended.

W. T. Carlisle and J. J. Lester, the new proprietors of the meat and provision store lately occupied by C. Patnode, commenced business this week.

There were twelve representatives from this place at Springfield Wednesday to attend the Epworth League convention, held in Trinity M. E. church.

Nos. 1 and 4 of the Warren cotton mills will start up on full time for a while next Monday. These two mills employ about one-half of the entire working force of the corporation here.

Michael J. Shea, who was convicted of illegal liquor keeping at the January term of the superior court, and who carried the case to the supreme court on exceptions, will receive his sentence at the coming term. The supreme court has overruled the exceptions.

Epworth League Notes.—At the special business meeting Monday evening it was voted to take up the regular reading course this winter.—C. O. Walker, Mrs. Putnam Webber and Misses J. Johnson and M. Irving, delegates, and others attended the convention at Springfield Wednesday.—A party of about twenty Leaguers went to Ware Thursday evening and took charge of the meeting at the M. E. church.—A "penny social" will be held at the parsonage next Thursday evening.

WARREN.

C. F. Staples started yesterday on his annual vacation.

The Slater Engine Company now employ 15 men at their works.

Mr. and Mrs. George Tarbell are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Miss Myra Warren gave a small party Monday evening in honor of her twentieth birthday.

D. O. Clark has sold a building lot on Burbank avenue to James Nichols, who intends soon to build a house.

Rev. John Austin, brother of Rev. Samuel J. Austin, a former minister of the Congregational church, preached last Sunday.

H. A. Holland's dancing class of last season is making arrangements for a social dance to be held in Brigham's Hall next Tuesday evening.

The registrars will hold their first meeting in the town clerk's office next Thursday from 7 to 9 p. m. They will meet at West Warren at fireman's hall the 26th.

Jerome M. Gould has sold a house lot to Contractor Thomas Nevins on the west side of Washington street adjoining the lot on which Martin Lynch is now building.

The annual inspection of the Warren fire department, and the dedication of the new headquarters, took place last Saturday afternoon. At 1.30 the line of about 115 men formed on West Main street in the following order: Platoon of police, chief marshal B. F. Tourtellotte; Warren cornet band, twenty pieces; board of fire engineers; West Warren steamer No. 2, fifteen men; West Warren hose company, fifteen men; Warren steamer No. 1, fourteen men; Knowles hose company, fifteen men; West Warren hook and ladder No. 2, twelve men; Warren hook and ladder No. 1, twelve men. After a parade through the principal streets the line halted on Depot square, where the machines were tested. Following the tests came the dedication and supper. The building was beautifully decorated inside and out with flags and flowers. Remarks were made by the chairman of the selectmen, William B. Ramsdell, W. E. Patrick, J. W. Tyler, S. A. Brown and others. John J. Lycett of the building committee presented the keys to Chief Engineer Tourtellotte, who responded.

WARE.

A party of Ware people attended the dedication ball at Coldbrook Tuesday evening.

Rev. A. B. Bassett and Harry K. Hyde attended the celebration at Williamstown this week.

The Boston and Maine road ship horses to Ware for the races for half-fare one way for round trip.

J. B. Green & Son have completed the work of putting in the steam apparatus in the Oregon engine house.

There is to be another foot race on the fair grounds next Saturday. Open to all, 100 yards dash, for a purse of $25.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Kines of Washington, D. C., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Coney the past week.

Special Police Officer P. D. Sullivan is on regular duty during the absence of Officer Ramsdell, who is spending a short vacation away.

Chief Engineer T. C. Gleason, Myron Ramsdell and Frank Sherman are at Gloucester, attending the firemen's annual state convention.

Deacon Buffington at Ware Center had an old-fashioned husking Tuesday night. If it was like what we used to go to when a boy they had a good time.

The dedication of the West Ware chapel that was to have been held on Wednesday of this week has been postponed to next Monday. A party of about twenty from here had arranged to go.

There is to be a private night school for instruction in writing opened in the hall over the office of the Otis Co. in about two weeks. J. C. Moody, instructor of penmanship in our public schools, is to have charge.

The hall in Storrs' block formerly occupied by the Ware Cadet Band has been rented by the Democratic town committee for their headquarters during the campaign. They expect soon to put out a flag.

Charles E. Blood was one of a party who left Monday evening to visit the World's Fair. Among the party were Miss Carey of Enfield, Edward Sherman and Miss Kate Douglas of Greenwich and Mrs. Sanborn of Brookline.

L. E. Rivard, pastor of the French Congregational church, was for some time editor of the French Protestant paper in Springfield. He is a well-known musical composer, having published a book of music and words for social service.

At the fair next week on Tuesday evening the entertainment will be tableaux, and on Wednesday evening will be repeated the comic opera that gave such great pleasure this week, "King Jolly Boy or the Enchanted Princess," and on Friday evening the operetta "Fairyland," with its fine singing and beautiful tableaux.

The Springfield Republican of Wednesday has the following notice of the marriage of Henry A. Jordan, formerly of this town: Henry A. Jordan, manager of the D. H. Brigham company's store, and Miss Lena L. English, daughter of Mrs. Lizzie English, were married quietly at the bride's home on Central street by Rev. Dr. Michael Burnham at 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan left last evening for a wedding tour to Montreal. Mr. Jordan has been very successful as a business man here and has many friends in the city, and Miss English has shown quite a talent for painting in water-colors, having given successful exhibitions of her work.

The fair for the benefit of All Saints' church opened Saturday evening, and is open every evening this week. It is being well attended, considering the times. On Wednesday evening the comic opera "King Jolly Boy, or the Enchanted Princess," was given under the direction of P. J. Mulvany and Miss Kathleen Kennedy. Thursday evening the operetta "Fairyland" was given under the direction of Miss Kennedy. Both entertainments were very pleasing. This evening Prof. Turner will give an illustrated lecture on Columbus, Washington, and scenes from the civil war. The other evenings of the week there is music by Thayer's orchestra.

THE CATTLE SHOW AND FAIR.

A Grand Success, With Bright Prospects for the Future.

The cattle show and fair of the Eastern Hampshire Fair Association went off as nicely as though there had been years of experience in getting up this kind of entertainment, and is considered a grand success, both on account of the show and the financial results. Friday was a perfect day, and there were about 2000 paid admissions. The school children were admitted free, and with the passes that were given to the press and others it is estimated that there were fully 4000 people on the grounds the first day. There was a good number of entries in horses, cattle, poultry and swine. The following premiums were awarded the first day:

Horses. Working pairs, Patrick McManus of Ware Center 1st; E. Shumway of Belchertown, 2d; single, George Wesson of Ware 1st, Patrick McManus 2d; single drivers, L. Dennis of Hardwick 1st, F. F. Gilmore of Ware 2d; double carriage pairs, J. W. Chesney of Warren 1st, D. J. Kennedy of Ware 2d.

Time—1.30, 1.30.

With the success of this year in so short a time for preparation, it is expected that by another year the association will have a grand stand to seat the people and a building in which to exhibit flowers, fruits and vegetables, as well as the curious handiwork of our citizens in mechanics and fine arts.

CARD.—I take this method to return my sincere thanks to my friends and neighbors for the prompt and efficient aid they rendered on the occasion of the recent fire on my premises at Palmer Center. H. HAMILTON.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

Every man having a beard should keep it an even and natural color, and if it is not so already, use Buckingham's Dye and appear tidy.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

When the hair begins to come out in combing, it shows a weakness of scalp that calls for immediate attention. The best preparation to arrest further loss of hair and restore the scalp to a healthy condition is Ayer's Hair Vigor.

When catarrh attacks a person of scrofulas diathesis, the disease is almost sure to become chronic. The only efficacious cure, therefore, is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which expels scrofula from the system and the catarrh soon follows suit. Local treatment is only a waste of time.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Treatment of Eczema and Salt Rheum.

These two complaints are so tenacious that the readers of The JOURNAL should know of the success obtained by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

In cases where all other treatments have failed, it has made a complete cure.

Perhaps no more horrible case of Salt Rheum was ever reported than that of William L. Hale of Rondout, N. Y. Several physicians utterly failed to render him any relief whatsoever; it was finally suggested by one of the physicians attending, that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy be tried, and steady improvement followed its use, and a permanent cure resulted.

It is used with similar success in cases of scrofula, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, and in all diseases brought about by bad blood and shattered nerves.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I [illegible] my own work. On my recommendation [illegible] others are taking this valuable remedy." [illegible] Morgan, 509 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

Sold by LEGRO & LYNDE, Palmer.

Offering you a preparation containing the highest order of ingredients, free from all opiates, harmless even to a baby, and a request to return the empty bottles and get the amount paid for the full ones if no cure is effected, is our way of gaining your confidence. If there were any better ingredients we would use them. We cure our patients or get no pay.

Ben Burlap's Barn.

Ben Burlap bragged about his barn with every man he see,
He said it was the finest barn that any barn could be.
Sez he, "The worl' is full er barns; but still I calkerlate
There ain't no barn like Burlap's barn an' hain't been up to date."

An' w en yer saw a wild-eyed man who raised consid'ble rumpus,
An' waved an' flopped his arms about to all parts of the compass,
An' swished his whiskers in the wind an' spun a half-day yarn,
You'd know it wuz Ben Burlap, sure, expounding on his barn.

An' I went down to see his barn, he hung on so like sin,
One day I tol' my wife I guessed I'd go and take it in.
"Twuz jest ez good ez Jim had said, ez fine ez it could be,
It beats all barns I ever see, or ever 'spect to see."

W'en I come out sez I to Jim: "What's that small buildin' there,
That kinder wobbly looking thing, that tumble-down affair?
It looks so rickety an' weak 'tain't fit to hol' a mouse—"
"Oh, yes," sez Jim, "it's full er mice; that ar hut is my house."

SHE BALKED.—In my earlier days we had on the farm a gray mare, full of vim and vigor as a farm-horse, and shapely in carriage trim. She had a sour temperament toward strangers, was balky but faithful. Her balkiness I cured as a boy without whip or severe punishment. The cure was accomplished about as follows:—

One sultry afternoon in summer, as I was returning from the limekiln in a light wagon with only two or three bushels of lime, she took a notion to stop at the end of the lane leading up to the house. After a moment's thought I concluded to please her by letting her have her own way. So I got out and tied her to the fence and went about my work. In the evening I went down and untied her. As she had stood all day without food or water I had no difficulty in convincing her the barn was the best place, and she took her food in a very amiable mood. No doubt she ever afterward supplemented the idea of stopping by this experience, as it broke her from the habit.—American Field.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

MINISTERS TELL IT.

We have our Pastor's Assurance of These Facts.

The Word of Ministers taken as the Strongest Proof.

Persons Believe the Pastor Before Anyone Else in The World.

There are no words so strong as those spoken by the true minister of the gospel. One knows and feels instinctively that such words come from the heart and are prompted only by the earnest purpose of doing good to humanity.

We do not wonder, therefore, at the great influence with the public of the strong and ringing words of praise which the eminent divine, Rev. C. D. R. Meacham, gives that most wonderful of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. When he was run down in health, weak in nerves, prostrated in strength, and with his blood badly impaired, he was restored to sound and vigorous health by this marvelous health renewer.

Here are the exact facts in his own words:

"I am very glad to say in regard to Dr. Greene's great remedy that when my blood was badly impoverished by an old scrofula humor, and my nervous system was greatly impaired, Dr. Greene's medicine gave me wonderful relief.

"At the present time my health is as good as at any time in my life, and my confidence in Dr. Greene's remedy is constantly increasing. REV. C. D. R. MEACHAM.

Pastor Baptist Church, Townshend, Vt."

Doubtless the same heartfelt sympathy and great desire to see the sick made well inspired the Rev. Dr. J. W. Walker, Presiding Elder of the Methodist Church, Fort Dodge, Ia., to also recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to the sick and suffering. He, too, has used it himself; he, too, knows that it cures, that it is sure to make the sick well if they use it.

"I have given Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy a fair test, and am free to say that I consider it rightly named. I have recommended its use to several.

REV. J. W. WALKER.

Presiding Elder, Fort Dodge, Ia.

We have published the testimonials of vast numbers of people who were cured by the use of the great discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, but we take more pleasure in giving to the world Rev. Mr. Meacham's own words and those of Rev. Mr. Walker in regard to the wonderful benefits they received from this valuable remedy, because we realize that the earnest words of a minister will have great weight with sufferers from disease, and everybody who reads their convincing words in regard to the sure and remarkable curative powers of this medicine will lose no time in securing a bottle and thus obtain a cure.

Most people need a medicine to invigorate the blood, strengthen the nerves and start up a healthy action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. Be sure and use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is kept by all druggists at $1.

Its discoverer is the well known Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who gives consultation and advice free to the sick, personally or by letter. The sick should use immediately Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, for it is not only the best remedy ever discovered, but those using it have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene personally or by letter, concerning its effects, their health, etc. This fact alone guarantees the assurance of cure. If you need a medicine do not fail to take this best of all remedies.

A COUNTRY TO RISE IN.

"Good morning, Mr. Finley," said Mr. Culbertson, as he entered the office of his lawyer, one Friday morning, during the early progress of the late war; "I came in to see if you had received the money which was to have been paid on that mortgage this week, for I am very anxious to use it before I leave the city."

"Yes," said the former, "it was paid as I expected, and I will gave you a check for it,"—taking down his bank-book; "but if it is not being too inquisitive, what are you going to do with so large a sum? Not speculate, I hope, in these risky times?"

"No," said the latter, who was a wealthy iron manufacturer from an adjoining state; "but having just come to the city, and seeing advertised a new issue of government bonds, I want to take as many of them as I can afford, to aid in sustaining the country in this terrible struggle."

As the lawyer was not much of a Union man, his countenance changed in a moment.

"Is it possible," he exclaimed, in a tone of mingled ridicule and bitterness, "that you are so foolish as to throw away your money on these bonds? You will lose every cent of it. Besides, I would not waste my means on such a miserable, God-forsaken country as this will be if Lincoln and his satellites succeed."

The eye of Mr. Culbertson flashed, and his lip was compressed, as if to reply with severity as well as decision, but he checked himself and said:

"Listen a moment, Mr. Finley, to the story of my life, while I describe it as it opened before me, and then you will not wonder at what I am doing, or at my motives and feelings in doing it.

"About the first thing I can remember is, that we were in a miserable little room in the crowded tenement part of Jersey City—father, mother, myself and a little sister—all the family. Father was lying on a soiled and scanty bed in the corner of the room, and mother was crying, and she told me he was going to die and go away from us; and though I did not fully understand it all, still I felt it was something very sad and awful; and I cried and sobbed over it till I fell asleep. In the morning when I woke, father was lying very still and cold, and did not move or speak, and mother, weeping bitterly, told me he was dead; and some men came and put him in a large, long box, and carried him away in a wagon; and we followed on foot, with a few others, to a place where they laid him in the ground; and mother sobbed as if her heart would break, and they could hardly tear her away from the grave; but at last we came back to our poor, little, solitary room.

"In a day or two my little sister drooped and died, and mother, from grieving and crying, took to her bed; and the woman that came in from the other part of the house said she was very sick. She called me to her and said she was going away to God, and to father, and my little sister, and told me to be a good boy and God would take care of me when I was left all alone in the world. In a little while she died, as father had, and the same men came and carried her away just as they had father, and I saw her no more. A kind woman in the next room gave me something to eat, and that night put me to bed; and the next day a man came and stood up on a box, and cried out every one of the things in the house, one after another which, as they told me, was selling them at auction, to pay the rent, and the room was left utterly bare and empty—stripped of every thing in it; and another man with a rough voice, came and took the key; and, pushing me out, locked the door, and told me I must go away—I could not stay there any longer—I must go and take care of myself.

"For many sad and weary days I wandered, I know not where, and lived, I know not how. All I remember is, that it was severe and frosty weather, and I was keenly pinched with hunger and bitterly chilled with the cold. One afternoon a light snow had fallen, and, as night came on, I was walking onward, barefoot and shivering, when I saw a bright light beaming through the crack of a slightly opened door. I went toward it, and as I was wistfully gazing through the crevice at the glowing flames a gentleman, passing out, kindly told me to go in and warm myself, which I most gladly did. He came back in a few moments, and after talking with me a little, sent for some food, and gave me permission to sleep for the night in the warmth of what I now know was the furnace of a large rolling-mill. That night was the first one of bodily comfort I had known, and those words the first words of kindness I had heard, since I was driven out from the only place I had ever known as home—made a home, notwithstanding its narrowness and poverty, by a father's kindness and a mother's love—and no language can tell how deeply and tenderly they sank down into my heart.

"In the morning the same kind friend gave me employment in attending the doors and gathering up scraps of iron about the furnace; and in this gratitude made me so attentive and diligent that, step by step, he promoted me, till, after some years, I became foreman of his large and profitable establishment.

"The years rolled on, and the well-known crash of 1857 came, deranging the business of the country, and scattering to the winds the property and hopes of hundreds, if not thousands, who had thought themselves strong in their wealth and beyond all fear of reverses in business. Among the sufferers was my loved and honored patron and friend, the owner of this large establishment. Through the failure of others, and especially by indorsements, he became deeply embarrassed, and his furnace and mill and all his property were taken by his creditors.

"In these years I had carefully saved and invested all my earnings, which had now amounted to a large sum; and my character and credit, and energy as a business man, were so well established and known, that at the sale I was able to purchase the entire works, of which, as you know, I am now the proprietor, and for which in a few more years, I was so prospered as to be able to pay in full. My first act on taking possession, was to give the former owner, how reduced to poverty, the position of superintendent which I had held (and which he preferred) at a liberal salary, and as long as he has health and strength he shall continue to hold it; and when he becomes too old or feeble to attend to business, to the last day of my life and to the last dollar I can share, he shall be supported and cared for as respectfully and tenderly as my own father could have been.

"And now you have heard my story, and you well know how richly I have been prospered, and how abundantly blessed, in my family, in my business, and in all my relations to society and in the state. And now may my right hand perish, and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I fail to sustain, to the utmost, this noble government in its struggle for life and supremacy; for there is not another country on the face of God's earth, in which it is possible for a poor boy without money or influence or friends to rise and succeed and prosper as he may do in this!"

The lawyer was silent. The manufacturer took the money and purchased the bonds; and to-day he rejoices in the government sustained, and in a country so favored from on high, that every one in it, who will, may rise to character and success and prosperity.

Police Official (New England town)—"Any clews to that mysterious murder?" Detective—"Yes, sir. I've arrested all the living members of the family." Official—"Glorious! What evidence have you?" Detective—"When I accused them of the murder, some of 'em turned white and some red. Now all we have to do is to find out which color means guilt."—New York Weekly.

Irate Father—"I'm going to put a check to your extravagance, sir!" Impudent Son—"All right! Give me the check."—New York Herald.

EARLY DOMESTIC EDUCATION.

Let domestic education commence from the cradle, and then you won't hear so much about the uselessness of the girl of this period. Let the little girl not as tall as the table wipe the knives, forks and spoons and dust a few chairs. On baking days let her make actual biscuit and bake them in a real oven. When school days begin, there will be time for domestic employment. It is better to insist upon no study at home, and then the light household tasks will benefit and not injure.

As girls grow older let them be given more important work. Promote them from time to time to the charge of some department. Change works till they have gone the rounds. During the summer vacation trust the whole administration of the household for a time to the young housekeeper. Such an education is within the reach of every family in the land. It is even advised by some to keep daughters at home from school for a term in the year to give them practical training. And it is practical advice, too.

All teachers acknowledge the ruinous effects of trying to "cram" knowledge into the heads of young children. Yet ambitious parents, who wish their daughters to "graduate" at 16 or thereabouts, will extol the teacher who will make it her aim to see that so many books are consumed in so much time. Learn things thoroughly as they come along and do not load down the mind all at once with a mass of unavailable knowledge.—New York Telegram.

A POINT WELL TAKEN.—They were debating on capital versus labor.

"Gentlemen," exclaimed the oratorical member, "if any of you would push a pen or pencil all day as I have done"—

"I rise to a point of order," said the smart man. "The gentleman might have pushed a pen, but everybody knows that a pencil is always lead."

"Mr. President," put in the quiet man in the corner, "both the honorable gentlemen are presuming upon the intelligence of this audience when they declare, the one that 'a pen is pushed' and the other that 'a pencil is lead,' when both are simply 'stationery.'"

The president declared a recess.—Hartford Times.

THE KIND THAT CURES

TWO YEARS OF AGONY.

FIVE Remedies and :: :: FOUR Physicians Failed. :: "DANA'S CURED ME."

DANA SARSAPARILLA CO.,

GENTLEMEN:—I wish to tell you of the wonderful cure DANA'S SARSAPARILLA has done for me. For two years I suffered agony with my back and kidneys, also my stomach, caused by the effects of La Grippe. My stomach would retain no food and I could not lie down for the terrible pain in my back and sides—was reduced in flesh to 92 lbs. My friends despaired of my recovery. One of your papers containing testimonials of the wonderful cures came to my hands. I resolved to try DANA'S. From the first I began to improve. Have taken two bottles and am well, and in two weeks I gained 13 lbs. Pain every minute a few months ago—now perfectly well. Thank the Lord! I know

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

cured me as I had tried five different remedies and four Physicians without any benefit.

Yours respectfully,

MISS GERTIE S. COWLES.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,

THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral

Has no equal for the prompt relief and speedy cure of Colds, Coughs, Croup, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, Preachers' Sore Throat, Asthma, Bronchitis, La Grippe, and other derangements of the throat and lungs. The best known cough cure in the world, it is recommended by eminent physicians, and is the favorite preparation with singers, actors, preachers and teachers. It soothes the inflamed membrane, loosens the phlegm, stops coughing, and induces repose.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral

Taken for consumption, in its early stages, checks further progress of the disease, and even in the latter stages it eases the distressing cough and promotes refreshing sleep. It is agreeable to the taste, needs but small doses, and does not interfere with digestion or any of the regular organic functions. As an emergency medicine, every household should be provided with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Having used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for many years, I can confidently recommend it for all the complaints it is claimed to cure. Its sale is increasing yearly with me, and my customers think this preparation has no equal as a cough cure."—S.W. Parent, Queensbury, N. B.

A Little Feller.

Say, Sunday's lonesome fur a little feller,
With pop and ma'am a-readin' all the while,
An' never sayin' anything to cheer ye,
An' lookin's if they didn't know how to smile;
With hook an' line a-hangin' in the woodshed,
An' lots o' 'orms down by the outside cellar,
An' Brown's creek just over by the milldam—
Say, Sunday's lonesome fur a little feller.

Why, Sunday's lonesome fur a little feller
Right on from sun-up, when the day commences;
Fur little fellers don't have much to think of,
'Cept chasin' grophers 'long the cornfield fences,
Or diggin' after moles down in the woodlot,
Or climbin' after apples what's got meller,
Or fishin' down in Brown's creek an' millpond—
Say, Sunday's lonesome fur a little feller.

But Sunday's never lonesome fur a little feller
When he's stayin' down to Uncle Ora's;
He took his book onct right out in the orchard,
An' told us little chaps just lots o' stories;
All truly true, that happened onct fur honest,
An' one 'bout lions in a sort o' cellar,
An' how some angels came and shut their mouths up,
An' how they never teched that Dan'l feller.

An' Sunday's pleasant down to Aunt Matilda's:
She lets us take some books that some one gin her,
An' takes us down to Sunday school 't the schoolhouse;
An' sometimes she has nice shortcake fur dinner,
An' onct she had a puddin' full o' raisins,
An' onct a frosted cake all white an' yaller;
I think when I stay down to Aunt Matilda's
That Sunday's pleasant fur a little feller.

ALBA.

A swirl of snow from the mountain side blinded the eyes of the convicts, and they wearily begged to be allowed to rest, but were told roughly to push on. Ragged and worn, the poor women, who had left country and home to follow their exiled husbands, hugged puny, crying babes to their chilled bosoms and dragged on resolutely. A pitiful sight, truly! Men and women, many of them reared in luxury, were now forced to march day after day in the most inclement weather, with scant clothing and only the poorest foods—a black bread made from the sweeping of mills. Even pebbles and other refuse formed the greater part of the ingredients. With this bread they were allowed a cupful of water. That was all!

One of the convicts, a lad of 17, whose handsome face was smirched with blood from a wound on his broad forehead, caused by a blow from the fist of one of the guards, leaned wearily on the "varnak" on his left, to whom he was chained. The chain depending from his right hand and attached to his foot seemed unusually heavy, for he was weak from loss of blood, but a kick from the guard nearest him forced him to make a desperate effort to push on. His glossy black black hair fell in matted locks over his brow. Doubtless his rank had induced the authorities to show him some marks of favor, for he was more warmly clad than some of his fellow convicts, and his head had not been shaven. His face gleamed pale in the sun's rays, but it aroused no pity in the hearts of the inhuman guards.

Ivan Smoloff, the youngest convict in this detachment, was a descendant from a royal family of Poland, now under the stern despotism of Russia. He had attempted with a small band of followers to defend his country against the Russian forces, but the courage of his countrymen soon weakened, and after the burning of Warsaw they gave up all hope. The emperor, fearing another outbreak from this fiery young nobleman, ordered his arrest and his exile to Siberia. Hearing of this young Smoloff escaped to Germany, wandering over the continent for eight weary weeks, only to be captured at last and exiled. No farewell word with mother, sisters or sweetheart; no last look at his old home. Hurried off like a common criminal—for defending his country!

"I cannot go farther."

These words forced themselves to his lips, and he sinks down, dragging his comrade with him. The guards swear at him, kick him, and finally ordered him to be stripped and beaten. The women shriek with terror and cover their eyes, but the sounds of the lash ring in their ears, and long after the tortured youth's lips cease to move they can hear his piteous cries. At last the quivering flesh is hastily covered with the coarse clothing, and he was chained again and told to move on.

"You have a knife on your wath chain; sever the veins in your wrist and put an end to your sufferings," whispers the convict on his right.

"I cannot," he answers feebly. "I cannot take my own life."

"Better to be dead than suffer this living death! Give me the knife; I will soon put an end to my misery."

Smoloff detaches the tiny knife and gives it to the half maddened creature, who surreptitiously severs an artery in his wrist and bravely bears up until forced to fall from exhaustion. The order is given to fire, and all is over. Another convict is chained to Smoloff, and they move on.

Ivan Smoloff envied the dead "varnak" and silently prayed for death. It was well nigh impossible to add "if it be thy will." There was no escape but by death. He had thought of many ways. Even if he could elude the vigilance of the guards he dared not hope to get out the country, for the natives were paid 3 rubies a head for every "varnak."

At Tiumen the convicts were crowded into a barge and carried across the Obi. As they neared Tomolsk, Smoloff was suffering excruciating pain, and in a frenzied moment twisted the chain which bound him to the next "varnak" and ran a few paces. The cold air blew his hair from his forehead and sent the young blood coursing through his body. He was free, if only for one moment! Running with all the strength he could command, he strained his ear to catch the order to fire.

"One, two, three—fire!" Six shots rang out on the wintry air. Then three more were dispatched at the prostrate body. One guard went up and kicked the stiffening body outlined on the snow. "Right about! March!" And they were gone.

Night fell, and the stars came out one by one and blinked at the prostrate figure lying so still and cold, with the life-blood crimsoning the snow, and then beckoned the moon to see the pitiful sight.

* * * * * *

Alba Senref, princess of Arnak, was considered proud and cold by strangers, but they little knew the tenderness of the young princess' heart. Pledged from childhood to Ivan Smoloff, only son of the royal house of Poland, she had lavished all her young love on her future lord. When the news of his banishment reached her, she did not faint as his mother did. They were at a brilliant ball. The order was immediately given to drive home. Then with pale lips and white, drawn face Alba sat down beside her fire and tried to devise some means of escape for her lover.

All night long she paced her room thinking, thinking, thinking! She must do something. Six o'clock struck, and still no plan was made by which she could help him. Sinking on her knees she prayed for help. The servant, entering an hour later, found her asleep. She seemed dazed when awakened. Then she said:

"Tell my maid I wish to see her."

When the maid came, she ordered her wraps brought.

"But your ladyship will change your dress?"

No, there was no time to lose. Already much time had been wasted. Hastily slipping the fur mantle over her ball dress which she had not yet removed, Alba filled her purse with money, and bidding the maid to tell no one where she had gone she left the house. Making her way alone to St. Petersburg, regardless of the impudent glances from travelers, she thought only of Ivan, who was going farther from her every moment.

It was a dull, cold morning when she reached the city. Snow was falling in great flakes. The princess drove to the palace, but was refused admission when she told her errand, as they compelled her to do. For hours she wandered aimlessly through the streets, attracting much attention by her rich attire. At last, weary and heartsick, she entered a church to say a prayer for her hapless lover. As she left the edifice she was startled by the tramp of soldiers. It was the emperor's escort. They were passing up the street in the direction of the palace, the emperor bowing right and left to the crowds of people on the sidewalks.

Pushing through the crowd she reached his carriage and implored him to save her lover. He scarcely heard her, and turning to the soldiers demanded the cause of the disturbance. They rudely forced her back, and the carriage moved on slowly. But she was not to be repulsed without another effort, and again making her way to the side of the carriage she repeated her earnest appeal. The emperor requested the soldiers to bring the maiden closer. With downcast eyes and cheeks flushing hotly she told of her love for the exiled nobleman, and again implored his excellency to pardon him.

"Never will I pardon that rash boy. Go to your lover and starve with him in the mines."

The royal party moved on, the soldiers jostling her roughly as they passed. She stood but a moment gazing after them with horror-stricken eyes. Go to him? Yes, she would and stay by his side.

The train seemed to drag along, but at last she reached Moscow. Determined not to leave a stone unturned, she called on the metropolitan of Moscow. As his eminence appeared, attired in a brown moire antique robe glittering with jewels and wearing the white crape hat of a metropolitan, with diamond cross in front, she forgot her rank, and falling on her knees at his feet she kissed the hem of his robe. In passionate tones she begged him to use his influence with the emperor to have her lover pardoned.

"My child, it is utterly impossible. If it were any one but Smoloff, there might be hope, but I can give you none. The emperor will never pardon him."

He could but pity her as she left the room with a dazed look on her sweet face. She must go to her lover. The kind old man procured a passport for her, and she was enabled to cross the border. How slowly the train crept! She sat with pale face pressed against the window, watching the snow-capped mountains.

After crossing the Obi at daybreak she was compelled to walk for miles through the blinding snow, often falling on the rough stones, but bravely trying to keep up her courage for Ivan's sake. Gusts of snow blew in her face, stinging like lashes, and sometimes the wind forced her back, and she stood still. Her clothes were tattered and soiled when she reached Tobolsk. Here she inquired how long it had been since the convicts had passed.

"Three days ago," the station guard answered.

"Was—Ivan Smoloff with them?" she asked.

"No, he died just before he reached here. He was shot."

"Shot!" How the word rang in her ears! How strange everything looked! The gloomy station, the grinning, evil faces of the guards as they leered at her. She noticed even the cut of their whiskers and the dirty bulletin on the wall announcing the number of convicts that had passed there that year. One of the guards attempted to kiss her, but with fiercely gleaming eyes she pushed him roughly aside and bounded like a deer out of the door. She forgot her sufferings. Only to get away from those cruel men, to get beyond reach of their jeers and cruel words. "He is dead," she murmured to herself again and again.

For days she retraced her steps, scarcely knowing where she was going. Sometimes rough men stared at her, but the look of absolute misery in her face served as an armor to protect her, for they only stared and passed on. Once a Tartar man who looked at her with his kindly eyes, thinking she was but a child, picked her up in his arms and carried her a long distance. They are very strong, those Tartars, who inhabit this part of Siberia. She could not understand his language, but knew he was trying to speak kindly to her. His swarthy skin, black hair and high cheek bones contrasted oddly with her pale face and sun kissed hair. He doffed his small embroidered skull cap as he left her at the door of his cabin and shook his head when she slipped some rubles into his hand.

It was night when she reached Tiumen and found shelter in a miserable inn. As she sat near the fire in the smoky room she attracted the attention of an old man, who addressed her in Polish.

"Are you in trouble?" he asked. She was such a child in spite of the care in her face!

"Yes," she replied wearily.

"I am a pardoned exile from Obdorsk. I was sent there for drunkenness. I have suffered too."

His worn, attenuated frame and sunken eyes seemed to echo his words.

"Did you ever see any of the political exiles?" she asked eagerly.

"Yes. I met some at Tobolsk. From there they go to the Trans-Baikal district."

"How long were you there?" She searched his face with restless eyes to see if she could read there any sign of his having seen her lover.

"Five years!" He wondered that she expressed no sorrow. It was a long time to spend in that godforsaken country, but she was saying to herself, "I might have known he had never seen Ivan." Still something prompted her to tell him. Her heart was aching for some one to advise her. Merely telling our troubles sometimes lightens them.

"I had a lover who was exiled. So handsome and brave. But he was shot near Tobolsk."

"Near Tobolsk? How long ago?"

"Six days."

"Was he dark, with eyes like a Tartar?'

"Yes. His eyes were like midnight skies, with twinkling stars shining through." She seems paralyzed from cold and fatigue and wonders vaguely how he knows that Ivan's eyes were dark. Is he sane? What does he mean? He is saying that he has seen Ivan! It was only three days ago! Mother of God, is it true? No, she must be dreaming!

"Your lover is living," he repeats. "I saw him at Berezov three days ago! He was trying to reach the coast, expecting to take a steamer for America."

It is long before he can make her understand, but he tells her again and again. She starts hastily to her feet.

"I will go to him," she whispers, and although he insists that she must wait until morning she shakes her head. He gives her some advice as to the route, and goes many versts with her, in spite of his feebleness. He can scarcely keep up with her. She seems to have acquired new energy and almost runs.

At daybreak they find a boatman, who rows her some distance, the old man leaving her at the river bank. "God speed you!" he said, but she thinks only of reaching Ivan, and scarcely looks at the pathetic figure waving his tattered hat at her from the shore. Her hands were clasped in her lap. Something like a smile hovered round her mouth. Once when they were very near the shore some women came down to the water's edge with some red eyed children. They peered at her curiously, and one of them tossed a piece of bread to her. They thought she was a beggar, her clothes were so ragged, and her golden hair was so rough.

She dared not inquire for Ivan at Berezov, but in silence searches for him. She feels satisfied at last that he has left the village, and finding a boatman to take her to Obdorsk gives him more gold than he has seen for many a day. How her head throbs, and the trees seem to be dancing before her eyes. Strange to say, they are very kind to her at the quiet Obdorsk inn—she seeks the most unpretentious one. They nurse her with rough tenderness for days. She talks incessantly of Ivan, but her language is strange to them, and they do not understand. In her delirium she rises from her bed and wanders along the coast, calling feebly for Ivan, sinking down in the sand at last from weakness. When she awakens, she finds Ivan's arms around her.

"Alba, what are you doing here?"

She tells him how she has searched for him.

"And you did this for me? My darling! How can I love you enough! Off there with the convicts I though of you many times and longed for one love look from your blue eyes, but I never expected to see them again. And lying in the snow, when they left me for dead, I, too, thought for a time that death was very near and I should never again feel your kiss on my lips."

Then he told her how after the train had left him he had revived, as it would seem, by a miracle, and had dragged himself to a hut, where he was nursed until he was able to keep on. Even now his wounds were not entirely healed.

The ships passing looked like great white birds in the distance. One stopped. It was only a freight ship going to Alaska, but they kindly allowed the fugitives to board her, and as they steamed away from the country that they feared and hated they felt a load lifted from their weary, burdened hearts.

It was not until long afterward, in their peaceful American home, that Alba heard the full story of Ivan's terrible sufferings in reaching Obdorsk.—Emma Rebekah Rice in Romance.

THEY KNEW HIS WORTH.

A clergyman relates the experience of a faithful clerk who was tempted, but followed his better promptings. It shows that dishonest men value honesty in every one else but themselves. A young man came to a gentleman one day with a case of conscience. He was corresponding clerk in a flourishing house of business. His employers had begun to direct him to write letters to customers, containing statements, which he and they knew to be false. He had objected and they said:

"We are responsible for these statements; it is nothing to you whether they are true or false."

I said to him, "Did they sign the letters, or ask you to write them in your own name?"

As soon as the question had left my lips I saw that, if there was a difference, both would be wrong, and I hastened to tell him so.

He said, "I have to sign them with my name, pro Messrs. Blank.

I said, "Your case is clear; you must decline to do it."

He said, "Then I shall be dismissed," and after a pause, "I have a wife and family."

I met him some days after. "Well, Mr.——," I said, "how are you getting on?"

He replied, "I am still in my situation; I had an interview with my partners, and told them I could not write letters I knew to be untrue. They were very angry, and I expected to receive notice, but I have not received it yet.

Months passed and he remained in his situation. After a while he called on me, and I saw by his face that something had happened.

"Well, Mr.——," I said, "have you had your dismissal?"

"No," he said, "I have not," and smiled.

"What then?"

"A very confidential post in their service, with a higher salary, has fallen vacant, and they have put me into it."

On second thought these unprincipled men had come to the conclusion that a clerk, who would not deceive a customer would not deceive them, and he was too valuable to be lost.

HELPING MATTERS ALONG.—The young man had been courting the small boy's sister for a long time, but could get no definite answer to his proposals, and the s.b. thought it was high time for matters to come to a climax.

One evening the young man had argued his suit more ardently than ever, and had again been discouraged. The small boy, hidden behind the screen, could stand it no longer, and as the lover asked for the hundredth time, "Mary, dear, will you marry me?" the boy called out in exact imitation of his sister's voice:

"Yes, I will."

The sister started and stared in great perplexity, and—

It was all over. The young man had improved his opportunity, sealed his proposal and Mary could get no chance to object.

A chuckle caused them to turn dismayed, and there stood the small boy enjoying the scene.

"There," said he, "that might have been done long ago," and then he discreetly vanished.

Hon. Hannibal Hamlin in his earlier days was at a certain caucus in Hampden, where the only attendants were himself and a citizen of very large stature. Mr. Hamlin had some resolutions to pass, which began by representing that they were presented to a "large and respectable" gathering of voters. "Hold on," cried the other man, "we can't pass that, for it ain't true! It ain't a large and respectable audience! There's only two of us." "You keep still, brother," commanded the wily Hannibal; "it's all right, for you are large and I am respectable. You just keep still." So the resolutions were passed without further demur.

Excited citizen: "If you'll send a squad of policemen along with me I'll show you where there's a gambling shop in full blast!" Police Inspector: "Havn't any to spare, sir. They've gone to arrest a street preacher."

WOMAN'S CORNER.

BOSTON STYLES.

Millinery.—Hats are much worn. There are a few large hats shown but most of them are medium size. The new feature is turned up brim. The brim is turned up in front or cut to the crown, and one part turned up. There are, indeed, plain hats, sailors and felts with curved brims similar to the shapes of last summer, but they are not "the latest." Felt plaques are to be used as much this winter as the straw plaques were last summer. These are usually made over a small buckram crown and the brims are stylishly folded in fashions most becoming to the individual wearers. The general effect of the trimming is much like that of last year—aigrettes, quills and wings are as much in favor as formerly, but there are not many made feather ornaments. Plumes are more popular than ever, not the long Prince Albert feather, but plumes too large to be called tips. One or more is put on a hat. Jet and beads are used, but much less abundantly than formerly. Fur is also used upon hats and bonnets.

The new color is that peculiar shade of red which is sometimes called magenta and sometimes geranium; it is said to be the color that will supercede eminence purple. One or two rosettes of geranium set into the velvet or at the stems of the plumes of a black hat give a bright effect and look like a real bunch of flowers. This color is very pretty when used sparingly with black, black and white, and colors with which it harmonizes. Black and white obtains this year as it has not before in years; white or cream satin ribbons, laces and feathers are used with black. Black ribbons with white stripes or white figures are displayed and much liked. White is also much used with green, which still holds high favor; scarlet is liked for children and young people, and navy blues and all shades of brown are still in vogue. There are a few bonnets with crowns, "for older women," the artiste says, "but they are all out for young women." The bonnets are little flats, fitting the head and one my be with or without a crimped front. There is a puffing of velvet all around nearly every bonnet, often with lace overlaying the puff. The most artistic milliners design their own shapes, cutting a square or a circle or a diamond-shaped piece of buckram and fitting it to the wearer. These bonnets promise variety and becomingness. Children's hats are generally broad, with round or made velvet crowns.

Dresses.—The winter dress goods are not yet opened and I have seen nothing particularly new this fall in dress materials, and nothing especial in coloring, except that there are black and white combinations in all materials. Some of these black and white goods, especially the silks and satins, and the black wool

PALMER NEWS.

The Opera, "Wanita."

It can be truly said that success has crowned the first attempt of an amateur production of comic opera in this town in the production of "Wanita" at the opera house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Early in July the management entered into negotiations with Mrs. H. E. Huntley to have their opera presented in this place. It was decided to have it given for the benefit of the Young Men's Library Association, and the first rehearsal was held August 15th. The Indian chorus was composed entirely of men from Thorndike and Three Rivers; the Puritan chorus was made up of people from this village. The choruses have been drilled by Mrs. Huntley, to whom much praise is due for the thoroughness of her work. The following is the cast as presented:

Wauregan.....George A. Adams
Osseo, a young chieftain.....Charles H. Clark
Magua, a fool Indian.....Albert E. Brown
Donald, the Puritan leader.....H. W. McGregory
Simeon Lubberly, an Englishman.....
William A. Weld
Obediah Ganute, a psalm singer.....E. B. Taylor
Dorothy Bradford, a Puritan maiden.....
Miss Georgia Packard
Jemimah Skillings, a spinster..Mrs. William Oare
Wanita, the sachem's daughter..Mrs. Rufus Flynt

The parts were played to the satisfaction of the managers, who have said that it is a rare thing to find so good a list of principals and such exceptionally good singers in a town of this size. It is the opinion that the production the first evening was the better, taking everything into consideration. Of the scenes best received by the audience the following may be mentioned: Love scene between Obediah and Jemimah, which was encored both evenings; love scene of Osseo and Wanita; duet of Donald and Dorothy, which received an encore Wednesday evening; quintette, Wauregan, Wanita, Osseo, Dorothy and Donald; plotting scene, Simeon and Magua; painting scene, Simeon, Magua and Obediah. The services of the singers were given gratuitously. The gross receipts of both evenings were very nearly $300. A number of people from out of town were present each evening.

Assault and Attempted Robbery.

Engineer Edward Leach, night watchman at the New London Northern roundhouse on Water street, heard loud cries of "Help! Murder!" late last Friday night. Accompanied by Fireman Clark he went to investigate and found two strangers engaged in a fierce struggle on the street. One was nearly choked to death when discovered. Leach inquired what was the matter, and was informed by the man who was doing the choking that the other party attacked him and he was defending himself. The man who was assaulted was apparently some 28 years old and was well dressed, wearing dark clothes and patent leather shoes. The assailant is described as tall and slim, wearing a light suit and is about 21 years old. The victim told in substance the following story after he had regained his breath: He met his companion early in the evening and they had several drinks together. The man saw he had money in his possession and got him to go to this unfrequented and lonely locality so as to avoid being arrested. Then he demanded the money and not getting it committed the assault. The part of the story about the demand for money is substantiated by two section foremen, who were also within hearing, and hurried to the spot. The man objected to having his assailant arrested as he did not want his own name to be made public, and refused to give it. The stranger was accombanied to the depot, where he took the 1.46 train to Springfield. His assailant disappeared and no traces of him have been found by the officers.

The Representative Conventions.

The representative conventions for the Tenth Hampden district were held at the district court room Tuesday. At noon the Republicans were in session and the result was as follows: The meeting was called to order by F. S. King of Ludlow. Charles F. Grosvenor was chosen chairman and W. W. Leach clerk. The committee on credentials, R. C. Newell of Three Rivers and A. H. Bartlett of Ludlow, reported 14 delegates present, apportioned as follows: Palmer, 9; Ludlow, 3; Hoiland, 2. H. E. W. Clark presented the name of Henry G. Loomis as candidate and the nomination was unanimous. It was voted that the chairmen of the various town committees be the members of the district committee.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Democratic convention was held. The chairman was F. E Cook of Brimfield and T. J. Moran was clerk. C.W. Alden of Ludlow presented the name of George W. Phillips of that town as candidate. The motion was seconded and heartily endorsed by T. W. Kenefick. The nomination was unanimous. It was voted to continue to have a double delegation from all the towns in the district, as has been the custom for several years past.

The semi-annual conference next April will be held in the Second Congregational church in this village.

The Young Men's Democratic Club met in Strong's block Tuesday evening. There were only six members present, and all were officers, so it was thought to be a good time to elect officers for the ensuing year, which was done with the following result: President, James P. Gallcher: vice president, George E. Buck; secretary and treasurer, James P. Gallcher; executive committee, James P. Gallcher, Thomas J. Conroy, John Murphy, Dennis W. Mack, J. S. Barett, F. F. Marcy, George E. Buck and H. C. Strong. The report of the secretary showed the membership of the club to be 74, and there is also a balance of funds in the treasury.

The Republicans of the town held their representative caucus at the town house last Friday evening. The meeting was called to order by Charles H. Clark. Dr. William Holbrook was chosen chairman and Charles H. Clark clerk. It was voted to take an informal ballot to ascertain the opinion of those present regarding the representative candidate. The result was 110 votes for Henry G. Loomis and 67 for Henry P. Holden. It was then voted to make the nomination of Mr. Loomis unanimous. The following delegates were appointed to the convention: C. L. Gardner, Dr. William Holbrook, E. G. Murdock, H. P. Holden, R. C. Newell, C. H. Hobbs, C. E. Getchell, H. E. W. Clark and C. S. Ruggles. There was a larger attendance than is usually seen at a caucus in this town. A special train was run by the two candidates to take their friends to the meeting, and everything passed off very harmoniously.

Look Out for Them.

Editor Journal:—There may be a few as unsuspecting as ourselves, so we say be careful how you part with pictures of yourself or friends which you value, to strangers who come to your houses and profess to "make them life-size, and wish you to place them in your room, all for nothing, so your friends may see the work and give them orders." Soon you begin to receive printed circulars, or another person of the same firm appears, and you see no more of your pictures until the adornments in the way of frames, etc., are in accordance with their superior judgment of your means and the fitness of things. This is our experience with the Crescent Crayon Co. of Chicago, and the Hub Portrait Co., Boston.

Two Losers.

The Evening School Question.

Mr. Editor:—The article in the last issue of the JOURNAL touching on free evening schools seems to hit the nail on the head. This town has the reputation of being a leader in educational and school matters, and now let it retain its good name and see if something cannot be done toward starting evening schools in the different villages. There are many in the mills and workshops of the town who have not had the chance to attend day schools but would gladly attend an evening school. Let this town keep in pace with other towns around us and make a move in this direction, and in years to come the youth of to-day will be benefited a thousand fold, and the town can feel proud of the interest she has taken in her children in giving them every means obtainable in securing at least a fair education.

Magnum Bonum.

District Court.

The following cases in action of contract were entered last Saturday: Jerry Shea vs. Timothy Keefe, both of Palmer; Mark Noble vs. Albert Peterson and trustee, all of Monson.

Herbert Wright of Monson, who was sentenced last Friday to four months in the house of correction, was allowed to settle up by the payment of a fine of $10.——On Saturday the continued case of Michael Smith of Monson for assault upon Joseph Folla of the same town occupied nearly the whole day. Smith was fined $15 and ordered to recognize in $200 bonds to keep the peace. T. W. Kenefick appeared for the defendant and S. S. Taft for the Commonwealth.——The continued case of J. Pinkoffsky for obtaining money under false pretenses came up Tuesday, and was continued to the first Saturday in November.——Yesterday morning John O'Connell of Three Rivers paid a fine of $5 for drunkenness. Matthew Kelliher of this village for a similar offense was given three months in the house of correction.

A New England Autumn.

The lack of severe frosts this season has made possible a development of color in our forests such as has seldom been witnessed before. To one who for the first time has visited New England this autumn the scene has been a revelation never to be forgotten. What I saw from the car window on a recent trip to Vermont was well worth a visit across the continent. There was a constant surprise of effect in color from forest, grove, and hedgerow that transcended the most ambitious efforts of a Titian; indeed it seemed sometimes as if thousands of burning bushes had been transported from the byway to Horeb to add to the marvels of the landscape; and, forsooth, had not the same hand which lighted the bush with fire, which did not consume in Moses' day, transfused through the branches of our forests of to-day a marvelous chemic which has produced a wealth of color unapproachable by the most subtle art, in the richness, delicacy, blending and harmony of effect? The trees have an individuality of color, so that one soon learns to distinguish them anywhere. The hickory looms up in the forest like a pyramid of saffron; the oaks are masses of maroon, magenta or scarlet, as the species differ; the maples surprise you with their wealth of mingled green, lemon, orange and crimson; the sumac stretches out its arms of flaming cardinal along the hedgerows and by the margins of the groves, seeming like torches upheld by unseen hands; the Virginia creeper twines around some sustaining tree and lights up its branches with flames that dazzle the eye with brightness; the white birches please you with a harmony of green and yellow; the aspen, which all summer long has smiled upon you with leaves of green and silver, now nods in the breeze with a richness of yellow which would be an artist's despair; the chestnut is opening its bristly storehouses under the cover of fading green and old gold, to the music of chattering squirrels and the gleeful chirp of autumn birds. To all this add the charm of cloudless skies, a genial sun smiling upon pastures bare and brown, and meadows made verdant by rambling streams, and forest-crowned hills winding with graceful curves away into the distance, with banks of conifers for backgrounds, with all the varied trees native to our clime set in generous array in the foreground, gorgeous with their individual colors, and you have a picture marvelous for beauty and harmony. It is the dying effort of the year, and possesses a glory all its own. It was such a picture which moved Bryant to say:—

"Ay, thou art welcome, heaven's delicious breath!
When woods begin to wear the crimson leaf,
And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief,
And the year smiles as it draws near its death."

A week from Sunday there will be a Sabbath school rally, and an effort is being made to secure Prof. Richardson of Amherst College to deliver his lecture on the Passion Play. Everybody is invited to be present.

The tax payers and citizens of the town do not care to make themselves conspicuous, but would like to know why the electric lights were not lighted on Thursday of last week, while darkness prevailed in this village and perhaps in Bondsville and Three Rivers. Palmer village was lighted as usual. They think it for the interest of the electric light company to use all villages alike in the matter, as the tax payers of these three villages have to pay for the light as well as Palmer.

A party from Three Rivers while on their way home from Dana, where they had been visiting, were thrown from their carriage when opposite Mrs. Danley's on Main street Sunday evening. It seems that the person driving claims that he could not see anything because he was so blinded with the electric light which he was approaching, and as a result ran into a post on the sidewalk and all were thrown out. One woman was quite badly hurt and was taken into Mr. Brosnahan's house and cared for until the arrival of a physician from Three Rivers. The other occupants escaped with a few scratches.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Finley—Casey.

St. Patrick's church was the scene of a very impressive ceremony Tuesday morning, when John F. Casey and Miss Annie Finley were united in marriage. Solemn high nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. J. F. Lee, with Father Madden of Warren as deacon and Father Mullens sub-deacon. The choir was assisted by Mrs. Houlihan of St. Ann's church of Worcester. As the bridal couple entered the church Organist Craig played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride was attired in a gown of blue English serge, with trimmings of silver passementerie and blue silk, and blue felt hat trimmed with pink roses and feathers. She carried a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid, Miss Mamie E. Daly of Warren, wore a slate-colored dress of wool with brown trimmings, and hat to match. The ceremony was followed by a reception and bountiful breakfast at the home of the couple on South Main street Among the many presents were a chamber, dining room and commode sets, velvet couch, plush easy chairs, lamp, two checks of $100 each, silver in abundance and linen. Among those from out of town were Mrs. William Quinn and Miss Rosa McQuillen of Woonsocket. Mr. and Mrs. John Connors of Worcester, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Speight and Daniel Leary of East Longmeadow, Mr. and Mrs. John Casey and Miss Mary Casey of Hampden, Mr. Craig of Springfield and Father Madden of Warren.

Representative Conventions.

The Ninth Hampden Republican representative convention was held in the town hall last Friday afternoon, with twenty delegates in attendance. Wilson Tucker was chosen chairman and C. M. Gage clerk. The name of Jason Butler of Wilbraham was presented to the convention and he was nominated by acclamation. The district committee elected consists of C. M. King of Monson, H. A. McFarland of Wales, W. R. Sessions of Hampden, F. E. Clark of Wilbraham and O. L. Wolcott of Longmeadow.

The Democrats of the 9th Hampden repre, sentative district held their convention in Memorial Hall Saturday afternoon, and made choice of George H. Newton of Monson for chairman and Charles Lawlor of Wilbraham clerk. The nomination being conceded to Wilbraham this year, the delegates from that town presented the name of James Eagan, who was chosen. This district committee was chosen: O. E. Bradway, Monson; O. P. Royce, Wales; C. W. Lawler, Wilbraham; J. W. Casey, Hampden; William Bailey, Longmeadow.

Robert T. McMaster left to-day for West Brookfield, where he will spend Sunday, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Tyler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Orcutt and little daughter of Somersville, Ct., have been the guests of John A. Orcutt during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Bradway of Willimantic, Ct., formerly of Monson, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

The Young Ladies, Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church met with Mrs. Alfred A. Gaonette Sunday afternoon.

Prof. D. M. Dustan and wife have taken letters from the church in this place to the Congregational church in Marion, were they now reside.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will hold its meeting at 6 o'clock next Sunday instead of 7, as is its usual custom.

Rev. Albert L. Squier of West Brookfield, who has been ill at his mother's home on Green street, preached in the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Upwards of fifty men are employed in Reynolds's lower mill turning out the warp in the frames, after which the mill will shut down again indefinitely.

Miss Filer, who taught physical culture to a private class at the academy two years ago, will open a class in dancing in this place next Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Rev. G. H. Krikorian, from the city of Yozgat in Galatia, has promised to visit this town at an early day and give an account of the work of his church in that region.

The harvest supper which was planned for Tuesday evening at the Universalist church was postponed until next Tuesday evening, on account of the numerous other attractions at that time.

At a session of the probate court held at Holyoke Wednesday, administration was granted in the estate of Catherine Moriarty, late of Monson, Margaret A. Moriarty administratrix.

The Congregational church of this town was represented at the Hampden county conference of Congregational churches held at Springfield this week by Deacon A. H. White and James Closson.

The annual inspection of Marcus Keep Relief Corps by Mrs. Abbie J. Lawton of Palmer will take place next Friday afternoon, and the Palmer and Stafford corps have been invited to attend.

The young people of the Universalist church are always busy helping on the church work. They are now preparing to give the play, "Bread upon the Water," to help defray church expenses.

The storm of Saturday occasioned several washouts, the most serious perhaps being on Washington street, where the corner of William Horton's cellar wall gave way and a small piece of the concrete walk was torn up.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Moore started last Thursday for a three-weeks' visit at the Columbian Exposition, and will visit friends in Hartford, Ct., on their return. They go by way of Niagara and the lakes, returning through Washington.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church met with Mrs. Susan E. Thrall Monday evening, and a report of the meeting held at Lynn was read. Miss Agusta E. Fay, president of the Monson auxiliary, was a delegate.

The Monson Lodge of Odd Fellows gave an informal reception to a number of invited guests Tuesday evening, which passed off very pleasantly. After refreshments, consisting of cake, coffee and lemonade, Messrs. Osborne and Beatty favored the company with vocal music.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church held a very enjoyable sociable at the church parlors Tuesday evening under the management of Mrs. Edward D. Cushman. The farce, "The Only Young Man in Town," which was given here some four years ago, was repeated by request. A large number was present.

A number of ladies met with Mrs. Edward D. Cushman Saturday afternoon and formed a whist club of twenty members, which will meet alternate weeks. Mrs. Edward D. Cushman was chosen president, and Miss Louise Morris secretary and treasurer. Its first meeting was held with Mrs. Edward D. Cushman yesterday afternoon.

S. S. Swett, who was ill for many months died last Saturday at the age of 67. The burial took place from the Universalist church Tuesday afternoon. Marcus Keep Post, No. 155, G. A. R., attended in a body. Mr. Swett was a carriage painter by trade, and for many years was with Lorenzo Hutchinson. He was a very genial man, and was well liked. He leaves a widow.

The people of the Congregational church were recently privileged to listen to Rev. O. H. Gulick, missionary to Japan for 23 years. Mr. Gulick comes of a remarkable family, his father, Peter J. Gulick, being one of the second party sent to the Sandwich Islands after they were opened to missions. There are seven children of this family now living, all of whom are missionaries in the service of the A. B. C. F. M., four sons and one daughter being stationed in Japan and two sons in Spain.

The prayer meeting Thursday evening at the Congregational church was one of unusual style and interest, the subject being "Special Blessings to the Aged." Many letters were read from aged members of the church, such as Mrs. Bradford, 99 years old, Rev. James Tufts, who is visiting in Chicago, Rev. M. S. Howard of Wilbraham, who has just finished his 25th year as a pastor in that town, and a very notable letter from Dr. Buckingham of Springfield.

There will be a grand rally of the society of King's Daughters in the Congregational church Sunday at 9 a. m. All King's Daughters are earnestly requested to sit in the center of the house as far as possible. Brief papers will be presented by several members of the organization. Rev. W. H. Marble will address the meeting and the music will be by a select choir of King's Daughters. The meeting will be one of unusual interest to parents and citizens of the town.

One of the most unique entertainments ever given in Monson was recently given by the social committee of the Christian Endeavor society. The literary programme consisted of a selection by a quartette; reading, C. C. Keep; duet, Misses Gertrude Gage and Grace Cushman; solo, Miss Minnie Smith; recitation, F. S. Hatch; selection by the quartette. Then came a display of the carving ability of the young people. For 10 cents each all were permitted to see 36 jack-o'-lanterns all brilliantly lighted. Mr. Hatch offered a dollar for the best one and fifty cents for the most hideous one.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Stebbins of East State street entertained about 100 guests Friday evening, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. Among the out-of-town people present were Mr. and Mrs. George Sherman and two children and Josiah Stebbins of Brimfield; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Moore of Springfield, Miss Abbie Holmes of Brookfield; Mr. Allen, Miss Louise Allen, Charles Dunbar, Miss Wheelan, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Foskit of Belchertown; Mahlon Foskit and Miss Putney of Three Rivers. Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins received a number of presents, including silver, lamps, chairs, a table, linen, glass and money.

Academy Notes.

Prof. A. N. Burke went to Middletown, Ct., Friday afternoon to attend the initiation exercises of the Eclectic Society, one of Wesleyan University's leading fraternities. He spent Saturday and Sunday at his home in Norwich.——Miss N. J. Rice, matron at Hammond Hall, was seized with a violent attack of pleurisy last Saturday. —— The young men of the academy have procured a foot ball and are thinking seriously of organizing a team.——One thing the academy needs is a mixed chorus. All similar institutions have one, and there is plenty of material for one.

WEST WARREN.

Charles Cutler is getting ready to rebuild on the old farm.

Mrs. Caswell of Concord is visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. M. Johnson.

Rev. Putnam Webber was unable to preach Sunday on account of sickness.

Rev. A. L. Squier of West Brookfield had charge of the prayer meeting in the M. E. church Tuesday evening.

WALES.

A. A. Cobbett is moving his goods into the new store in Shaw's block.

Scarlet fever is dying out. No new cases have been reported this week, and none have been very severe.

Miss Anna Burley closed her school Wednesday to attend the Sabbath school convention in Springfield.

Auctioneer McFarland will sell at auction next week Saturday, near the fountain, two wood lots belonging to the estate of the late David B. Needham.

The Republicans will hold a rally in the vestry of the Baptist church Wednesday evening at 7.30. Col. C. L. Young of Springfield and others will give addresses.

Miss Lena Roberts, who was injured in the Chester disaster, has settled her claim for damage against the Boston and Albany Railroad. She is slowly recovering, but will be an invalid for some time, if not for life.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

W. L. Collins is having the front part of the store occupied by C. E. Stacy improved by the needed addition of double doors and large windows.

Rev. N. Vander Pyl and wife and E. W. Wall attended the conference meeting in Springfield this week.

A meeting of the board of registrars for the registration of voters was held Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fletcher were given a surprise party Tuesday evening last at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bell. A purse of money was presented them by Rev. N. Vander Pyl on behalf of their friends and acquaintances, and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served and judging by the manner in which the viands made their disappearance, the culinary departments of the different homes represented are in a high state of perfection.

BRIMFIELD.

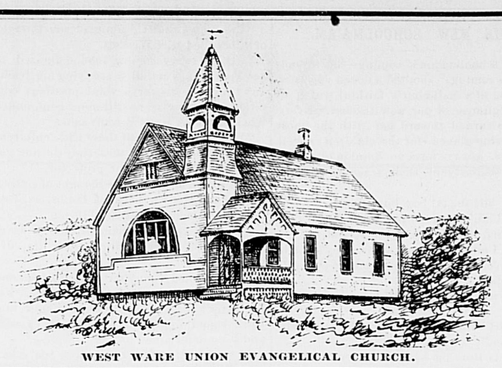
Miss Flora Agard is at the World's Fair.

Ed Allen is home from Amherst college.



WEST WARE UNION EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

WEST WARE CHAPEL.

Dedicated with Appropriate Ceremonies Monday Afternoon.

The event of the week for the town of Ware, and especially the west part of it, was the dedication of the West Ware Union Evangelical church Monday afternoon and evening. The audience room was beautifully trimmed with evergreens, gracefully twined and festooned among the timbers in the upper part of the building, while the front of the pulpit and organ, as well as in the rear, was one mass of cut flowers, ferns and potted plants, arranged with exquisite taste. The singing was by a select choir, and was far superior to what is commonly heard in more pretentious churches.

The exercises commenced promptly at two o'clock with a praise service under the direction of Rev. F. J. Hale of Bondsville, who also read from the Scriptures. W. W. Thomas gave a brief report of the work accomplished in West Ware. In 1885 meetings were held in various houses, but feeling that more might come out if held in some public place an arrangement was made with the owners of the paper mill, and meetings were held there and a Sunday school established, which had a good attendance. Dwight Holland, president of the Union society, gave a report of the meetings that were held and the subscriptions given in the interest of building this chapel, the subscriptions coming from all the surrounding towns, as well as a large sum from Springfield. The chapel was built in 1890 and has cost complete about $1300, which is all paid, so it stands to-day free from debt. Rev. C. H. Smith, pastor of the Congregatinal church in Belchertown, preached the first sermon in the chapel, and the pastors from adjoining towns have preached from time to time. The work of the Ware Christian Workers, who held meetings regularly Sunday evenings for a year and a half, were especially blessed in reviving the work and bringing souls to the Savior. Since last spring Rev. F. F. Thayer, a young man of great enthusiasm, has been the pastor in charge.

During the afternoon there was an address by Rev. W. H. Adams of Enfield; subject, "The True Relation of Christ to Believers." The central thought of the discourse was that Christ is not a Savior of the world as a mass, but of each one that believes. Then followed an address, "The True Relation and Obligation of the Christian Believer to Christ and Each Other," by Rev. J. P. Harvey of Ware Center. Our relation is as kings over a kingdom facing the King of the universe, not as worms of the dust. The brotherhood not alone that Christ is our elder brother, but that we are brothers of Christ. This, our relation to Christ, is not a matter of speculation but a fact. The brotherhood of Christ is more than that with the boy we associated with in the home or with whom we went to school. Prayer was offered by the pastor and the services of the afternoon closed by singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

The evening exercises commenced with an enthusiastic praise service, conducted by W. G. Hamilton, president of the Ware Christian Workers, and 17 different ones took part in less than as many minutes, and the choir rendered the anthem "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden," after which there was Scripture reading by Rev. W. H. Adams, followed by prayer by Rev. W. S. Woolworth of Belchertown. Andrew W. Aldrich gave a report of the work in West Ware, and Mr. Holland the report on building the chapel and cost. The pastor, Rev. F. F. Thayer, gave words of welcome to the different pastors, the Ware Workers and the people.

The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. C. H. Smith of Hartford, the text being taken from Kings 8: 11, "For the glory of the Lord has filled the house of the Lord." The speaker gave a fine description of the building of the temple by the hand of God, and believed that the temples of to-day are no less built by God, working on the hearts of his people. He said "this chapel, with its spire pointing heavenward, shall stand as a witness to the tramp that passes along the highway, to the farmer who goes to market with his produce, to the traveler on the railroad, that this community are worshipers of God. But the duty is not ended in the building of the church, for the followers of Christ should go out and be aggressive in His service, showing the people that the interest is still alive for the glory of God. Education is another province of the church; as one has said the world can only be taken by the capture of the children. The Savior came into the world as a little child to teach the sanctity of childhood." The speaker alluded tenderly to the little one only four weeks old who was present through the afternoon and evening services. In an article like this no justice can be given to such a sermon—it was simply grand and one of the best we have ever listened to. The dedicatory prayer was by Rev. H. G. Alley of Belchertown. The dedication hymn was read by Rev. R. A. Sullivan, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. C. H. Smith.

Tables were tastefully laid in the anteroom, and a bountiful supper was served by the ladies between the afternoon and evening service.

John Warren of Worcester was in town over Sunday.

Mrs. W. A. Janes is visiting friends in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Nathan Goodale of Springfield is the guest of Mrs. Edward Brown.

George M. Hitchcock arrived home from Chicago Saturday evening.

Miss Sadie Moulton has been visiting her cousin, Miss Minnie Peirson.

Charles Tarbell and sister, M. Anna Tarbell, left Tuesday for the Worlds Fair.

Mrs. Charles Stewart of North Brookfield is visiting her mother, Mrs. C. O. Brown.

Miss Anna M. Cutler has presented the public library with forty neatly bound new books.

Edward B. Brown returned Monday from his Western trip, having been away five weeks. He visited the World's Fair, and spent two weeks with friends in Michigan.

Two sociables were held last Friday evening—the ladies of the First church at the home of Mrs. Bemis, and the ladies of the Second church at the house of Mrs. George M. Hitchcock.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill have returned from the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Purdy are visiting in Middletown, N.Y.

B. Butler has received offers from hotels in Boston and the South for the winter, but may decide to remain in town.

Rev. F. F. Thayer, pastor of the Baptist church for the past two years, has resigned, to take effect the last of December.

Tuesday evening about 60 of the friends and neighbors of Theodore W. Chapman met at his home to celebrate his 81st birthday anniversary. Mr. Chapman was presented a sum of money, speeches were made and a collation served.

A $20,000 Fire.

The town was visited by a disastrous fire early Tuesday morning. It was discovered in Snow's block about 2.45 in the morning. The origin was probably from a defective flue. Great difficulty was experienced in giving the alarm, as no one could get into the churches to ring the bells. The fire was making its way toward the Baptist church but was stopped at a barn, which stood in the path, by covering the roof with carpets which were kept wet. Snow's block, and the Grand Army block, the house of F. L. Plaintiff and the blacksmith and carriage shops of W. F. Carter and R. K. Shumway were destroyed. The loss is about $20,000. The insurance carried by the various parties amounted to about one-half the loss. The only fire apparatus in town is a hook and ladder truck purchased by private subscription.

CARD OF THANKS.—I wish to tender my sincere thanks to my friends and neighbors for kindness rendered me during my late husband's illness and death. MRS. GEORGE D. BRAINERD.

Neglect of the hair often destroys its vitality and natural hue, and causes it to fall out. Before it is too late apply Hall's Hair Renewer, a sure remedy.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

If you wish to secure a certain and speedy result, when using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, be careful in observing the rules of health, or the benefit may be retarded. A fair and persistant trial of this medicine never fails, when the directions are followed.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

Don't commit suicide on account of your "incurable" blood disease. The sensible thing for you to do is to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If that fails, why, then—keep on trying, and it will not fail. The trouble, people get discouraged too soon. "Try, try, try again."

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

Regular price 6.00

Left aisle.

The cloak section is full every fair day, as if there was a spectacle to be enjoyed there. There is. We have not only rich coats and capes, but very low-priced ones—hundreds of them. Here are three new styles that were sold to us for so little that we haven't the heart to put a fair price on them.

Fine beaver coat, half-lined, full plaited back, new sleeves and wide reveres.
Well worth $7.50
Price 5.00

Heavy cheviot cape, 40 inches long, handsomely braided.
Certainly worth $7.50
Price 5.00

Beaver coat, lined, with Worth cape and collar, new sleeves; cape, collar, front and sleeves edged with fur.
Well worth $15.00
Price 10.00

North side of rear, second floor.

Chenille portieres, soft and rich and beautiful, never before under $4.50, price $3.88 a pair. Wish we had enough to last a week; but that is impossible at the prices.

Moquette rugs of even skyey softness, for less than panic prices.

18 x 36 inches, $0.95
27 x 64 " 2.25
36 x 72 " 3.25

Second floor, Main street front.

Double damask table linen, white as the virgin snow; four sorts with napkins to match; twenty-five per cent under any other store.

66 inches wide, 75 cents a yard.
Napkins to match $1.75 a dozen.
72 inches wide, $1 a yard.
Napkins to match $2 a dozen.
72 inches wide, $1.25 a yard.
Napkins to match $4 a dozen.
72 inches wide, $1.50 a yard.
Napkins to match $6 a dozen.

Right aisle.

Thirty patterns of black chantilly and bourdon laces, 4½ to 10 inches wide, all at one price, 29 cents a yard; some of them are worth 50 cents, some 75, and some even a dollar.

Take left aisle at main entrance.

200 trimmed hats will come from our work rooms this week to be sold for $2.50 apiece. They are such as usually bring from $4 to $7.50.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, wind in stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying cut. The little white lines are the nerves which convey the nerve force from the nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system is wonderful, as the thousands of unsolicited testimonials in possession of the company manufacturing the remedy amply prove.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

A TRIP TO CHICAGO.

WHAT M. J. SISK AND F. U. WETMORE SAW AND HEARD.

Yes! I say gone. And would you believe it? the bottom of that pocket was also gone, just as though a swordfish had struck it. But how could it be? The only fish that we saw alive were safely caged and those at the hotel appeared to have been dead for years, or months at least. Still we have been judging too harshly. A careful examination showed that the guilty party was none other than the tailor. Again the necessity of a person to look after our pockets was realized, for it certainly would not be so unexpected to lose money through the top of the pocket. But what could we do? Inquiry showed us that a similar ticket would cost $30. Would we discontinue our journey and return home? No! We had started for the World's Columbian Exposition, and health permitting we were determined to reach the goal for which we had started. But we decided to remain in Washington another day and strive to recover the lost property. The brokers were first informed of our loss and then the following notice was sent to the Washington Post:

$5 reward for the return of B. and O. R. R. ticket No. 239 or 241, Order 5643. Sold at Springfield July 24th. F. U. WETMORE, Mount Vernon Hotel.

You will see that we had selected new quarters, and that night retired with feelings which may be better imagined than described. After a good night's rest we arose with the sun, having entirely become reconciled to the slight misfortune, and feeling that not in the least respect would we let it mar the pleasure of our trip.

It did not take us long to reach the celebrated Washington monument, which is 555 feet 5⅛ inches in height, and when we stood on the floor 500 feet from the ground a finer view could not possibly be obtained. The elevator was just eight minutes in making the trip each way.

The capitol building next took our attention, and well repaid is the stranger who enters its portals.

Returning to the hotel we were informed that a gentleman had called with the lost ticket. We soon sought him, and found his office was in the post office building where the ticket was lost. Again we were in possession of a passport and left Washington at 6.15 by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

For the first two or three hundred miles the only point of interest was Harper's Ferry, where the scenery is truly more beautiful than pen can describe. The country for some distance further on was hilly and showed that the natives had to wrestle with many difficulties in filling the position of husbandman. Later we came to fine fields of corn and wheat, far greater in extent than any we had ever seen.

At 9.35 Friday evening we arrived in Chicago and went direct to St. Lawrence Hotel. Next morning we wended our way to the World's Columbian Exposition.

"Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered in the heart of man to conceive the glories that are laid up for him," seemed to be the words most appropriate to express our feelings. Every building was a standing monument of the great skill of its architect. The grounds were dressed in a rich robe of green, with many ornamental trees, rare flowers and plants so artistically and perfect in growth that the most experienced could scarcely find a defect. Wooded Island, with its many approaches by elegant bridges and the tiny palatial steamers plying round its shores seemed almost to have been the gift of nature for this particular occasion.

Only a short distance beyond Lake Michigan was wafting its refreshing breeze over this wonderful city. For truly it is a great city in itself, and how were we ever to find our way to the building which Massachusetts had prepared for the reception and comfort of all its representatives. "There is an officer, ask him," was the only echo that responded. Nothing daunted by the notice of a sword carried by this manly form, we approached him, and by following the course he so carefully designated soon reached the wished-for place.

Mr. Dustan, formerly principal of Monson Academy, was the first New England friend to greet us. Several letters from friends at home were awaiting our arrival.

After signing our names in the visitors' book we started and visited the following buildings: Ceylon, France, Norway, Canada, Great Britain, Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts. Now we had arrived at the North Pier where the naval exhibit was to be seen. The battle ship Illinois and the Norwegian ship Viking were objects of special interest. By this time our legs were weary, darkness had set in, and we started for our hotel where we arrived at 9.30. Shall we confess that it was 10.30 Sunday morning when we donned our daily attire and were again ready to travel. But this day our minds were not bent on the Fair. A more suitable thought suggested itself. The much-talked of Lincoln Park seemed to say to us that here we could spend an afternoon profitably. The elevated railroad took us to the Van Buren street pier, and after a trip of eight miles on the steamer Ivanhoe over the waters of Lake Michigan, we were landed almost at the center of the Park.

Thousands of people were already there, and they continued to come during the whole afternoon. Hundreds of elegant carriages and coaches could be seen conveying their occupants from place to place. But the menagerie took most of our attention. Deers, goats, foxes, buffaloes, wolves of all kinds and descriptions glanced wistfully at the passer by as though envying them their freedom. The badger and bear could be seen not far from where the bumble bee was hovering over a sweet scented flower, and the elephant kept his trunk busy beating away the ant which seemed determined to push him out of his apparently permanent position. The lion, leopard, tiger, puma and wild wild cat did not seem satisfied with their iron cage.

After watching these animals for some time we passed along and came to where the rarest lilies were being cultivated. The most important of these was the Amazon lily, which has a leaf five feet in diameter, almost perfectly round, with the edges slightly turned upward. Eight of these leaves belong to one plant.

We next seated ourselves beneath the shade of some trees in front of which about an acre of ground was devoted to the cultivation of flowers, arranged in beds emblematic of various important events. Several fountains were sending streams of water high in the air, and the scenery was so grand that the sun was fast disappearing behind the horizon before we started for home.

Monday morning we entered the Fair grounds at the head of the Midway Plaisance. Passing through this thoroughfare many interesting features presented themselves, and we purchased several articles from the natives of foreign countries that we could scarcely hope to ever be able to visit. The Chinese and Algerian theaters were very much in contrast with the modern palaces of our own land. Donegal and Blarney castles clearly represented the ancient style of architecture.

(To be continued next week.)

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

HIS AFFIDAVIT.

It Will Make People Believe His Wonderful Story.

Subscribed to by one of New York's Most Prominent Justices.

Here is the Whole Matter Exactly as it Happened.

State of New York, County of Washington. } ss.

Lucien Rodd of Whitehall, N. Y., being by me duly sworn, deposes and says that some years ago he suffered very greatly with insomnia, nervous prostration and his body was covered with sores, causing him great pain and annoyance. That his head was so covered with sores that he was hardly able to comb or even brush his hair, so great was the pain it occasioned.

That he consulted the local physicians without successful result; that he took quantities of medicine with no benefit whatever; that physicians told him his disease was incurable and he had come to the same conclusion himself and had made up his mind to go to a hospital and await death.

That just about this time he learned about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which he began to use. That this remedy entirely relieved and cured him, healed and dried up his sores, enabled him to sleep soundly and comfortably, and restored him to his ordinary vigor and vitality, in short made a sound and well man of him so that he was fully able to work at his occupation, and has done so since that time.

That he attributes his recovery to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as it restored him when everybody and everything else had failed and he had been given over to go to the hospital and die.

Mr. Rodd makes this statement voluntarily and cheerfully out of sincere gratitude for what the remedy has wrought for him.

LUCIEN RODD.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of January, A. D. 1893, and I certify the affiant to be a creditable and reliable person whose statements may be accepted with confidence and implicity relied upon, having known him personally for the last twenty-five years, and that I have no interest direct or indirect, immediate or remote in this matter. HON. WILLIAM H. TREFFT.

SEAL } Notary Public in and for said County and State, residing at Whitehall, where this deposition was taken and executed.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is purely vegetable and is sold by druggists for $1.00. As is proven by the wonderful cure of Mr. Rodd, it is the very best medicine possible to take for the blood, nerves, liver, kidneys, etc. It is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

THE NEW SCHOOLMA'AM.

"The schoolma'am's coming—the schoolma'am's coming!" shouted a dozen voices at the close of a half-hour's faithful watch to catch a glimpse of our new teacher. Every eye was turned toward her with the most scrutinizing glance—for the children as well as others, always form an opinion of a person particularly of their teacher, at first sight.

"How tall she is!" exclaimed one.

"Ho, I ain't afraid of her, nor a dozen like her," cried the big boy of the school.

"Nor I either," cried the big boy's little ally, "I could lick her easy enough; couldn't you, Tom?"

"Yes, and I will, too, if she goes to touch me."

"Hush!" cried one of the girls, "she will hear you."

By this time she had nearly reached the door, round which we clustered, and every eye was fixed upon her face with an eager yet bashful gaze, uncertain, as yet, what verdict to pass upon her.

"Good morning, children," she said, in the kindest voice in the world, while her face was lighted by the sweetest smile imaginable. "This is a beautiful morning to commence school, is it not?"

"I know I shall love her," whispered a little pet in my ear.

We all followed her into the schoolroom except Tom Jones and his ally, who watched untill the rest were seated, and then came in with a swaggering, noisy gate, and a sort of dare-devil saucy look.

Miss Wescott looked at them kindly but appeared not to notice them further. After a short prayer, and reading a chapter in the Bible, she passed round the room and made some inquiry of each one in regard to themselves and their studies.

"And what is your name?" she asked laying her hand upon Tom's head while he sat with his hands in his pockets swinging his body forwards and backwards.

"Tom Jones," shouted he, at the top of his voice.

"How old are you, Thomas?" she asked.

"Just as old agin as haif," answered Tom, with a saucy laugh.

"What do you study, Thomas?"

"Nothing."

"What books have you?"

"None."

Without appearing to be at all disturbed by his replies, Miss Wescott said, "I am glad that I am to have one or two large boys in my school; you can be of great assistance to me, Thomas. If you will stop a few moments this afternoon, we will talk over a little plan I have formed."

This was a mystery to all, and particularly to Tom, who could not comprehend how he could be useful to anybody, and for the first time in his life he felt as if he was of some importance in the world. He had always been called the "bad boy" at school, and he took a sort of pride in being feared by the children, and dreaded by the teacher.

Miss Wescott at once comprehended his whole character, and began to shape her plans accordingly. She maintained that a boy, who at twelve years of age made himself feared among his school fellows was capable of being made something of. Heretofore all influence had conspired to make him bad, and perhaps a desperate character; she had determined to transform his character by bringing an opposite influence to work upon him; and to effect this, she must first gain his confidence, which could not be done in a better way than by letting him feel that she placed confidence in him.

When school was out, more than half the scholars lingered about the door, wondering what Miss Wescott had to say to Tom Jones. He had often been bidden to remain after school, but it was always to receive punishment or a severe lecture, and nine times out of ten he would jump out of the window before half the school were out of the room; but it was evidently for a different purpose that he was to remain now, and no one wondered what it could be more than Tom Jones.

"Don't you think, Thomas, that our schoolroom would be a great deal pleasanter if we had some evergreens to hang around it; something to make it cheerful?" inquired Miss Wescott.

"Yes'm, and I know where I can get plenty of them."

"Well, Thomas, if you will have some here by eight o'clock to-morrow morning, I will be here to help you put them up, and we will give the children a pleasant surprise. Here are some books I will give you, Thomas; you may put them in your drawer; they are what I want you to study."

"But I can't study geography and history" exclaimed Tom, confused, "I never did."

"That is the reason why you think you cannot," replied Miss Wescott. "I am sure you can, and you will love them I know."

"Nobody ever cared whether I learned anything or not before," said Tom, with some emotion.

"Well, I care," said Miss Wescott, with earnestness; "you are capable of becoming a great, good man; you are now forming your character for life, and it depends upon yourself what you become. The poorest boy in the country has an equal chance with the wealthiest, and his circumstances are more favorable for becoming eminent for he learns to depend upon himself. I will assist you all I can in your studies, Thomas, and I know you will succeed; remember that I am your friend, and come to me in every difficulty."

Tom Jones had not been brought up; he had come up, because he had been born into the world and could not help it; but as for any mental or moral training, he was as ignorant of it as a wild bramble of a pruning knife. His father was an intemperate, bad man, and his mother a totally inefficient woman. At home he received nothing but blows, and abroad nothing but abuse. His bad passions were therefore all excited and fostered, and his good ones were never called out. He always expected that his teachers would hate him, so he aroused anew his combative powers to oppose them, and he made up his mind to "turn the new schoolma'am out of doors."

When, therefore, Miss Wescott said she was glad to have him in her school, he was amazed; and that she should manifest such an interest for him and give him a set of books was perfectly incomprehensible to him. Miss Wescott understood his position and character, and determined to modify them. She felt that he was equally capable of good and bad actions, though the bad now predominated. She knew that his active mind must be busy; one might as well think of chaining the lightning as bending down by force that wild spirit to books. She would give him employment; but such as would give him employment; but such as would call out a new train of ideas and thoughts. He must feel that he was doing good for others' sake, and he was not guided along by his own wayward will, and yet there must be no appearance of restraint upon him; he must choose to do good.

Tom Jones went home that night with a new feeling in his breast; for the first time in his life that he was capable of rising above his present condition, and becoming somewhat greater and better than he was. His mind became inundated with new and strange emotions, and like a mighty river his energies from that hour sought a new direction.

The next morning he was up with the dawn, and when Miss Wescott arrived at the school house, she found Tom Jones there with his evergreens.

"Good morning, Thomas," she said kindly, "so you are here before me; you must have risen early, and I see you have found some beautiful evergreens. Now, if you will help me hang them, we will have the room all arranged by 9 o'clock."

"I have brought a hammer and some nails," said Tom, "I thought we should need some."

"Yes, so we shall; I am glad you thought of it," replied Miss Wescott.

That day every scholar looked amazed to see Tom Jones actually studying his book, and hear him answer several questions correctly; and they were still more confounded when at recess Miss Wescott said:

"You will take care of these little children, will you not, and see that they do not get hurt? You must be their protector."

One would as soon have thought of setting a wolf to guard a flock of lambs, as Tom Jones to take care of little children.

"Well," exclaimed Sam Evans, "I never saw such a schoolma'am in all my life; did you Tom?

"No," replied Tom, "but I wish I had, and I would have been a different boy from what I am now; but I am going to study now, and learn something. Miss Wescott says I can, and I am determined to try."

It was astonishing to observe the effect Miss Wescott's treatment of Tom had upon the scholars. They began to consider him of some importance, and to feel a sort of respect for him which they manifested, first by dropping the nickname Tom, and substituting Tommy, which certainly revealed a more kindly feeling toward him.

In less than a week Miss Wescott had the school completely under her control, yet it was by love and respect that she governed, and not by any iron rule; she moved among her scholars a very queen, and yet so gained their confidence and esteem that it did not seem to them submissive to another's will, but the promptings of their own desire to please. One glance of her dark eye would have quelled an insurrection, and one smile made them happy for a day.

Julia Wescott understood human nature. She made it a study, as every teacher ought to do. She rooted out error and prejudice from the minds of her pupils, showed them the evil of sin and beauty of virtue, the advantages of education; taught them their own capabilities, and responsibilities, and she adapted her instructions to capacities and necessities. And thus she went on year after year, scattering good seed into good ground, and she reaped an abundant harvest. From many a happy home and high place came a blessing upon her; and there is no one that breathes her name with greater reverence, or remembers her with more grateful affection, than Tom Jones, who has filled with ability one of the highest judicial offices in the Union, and freely acknowledges that he owes his present character and position, under God's providence, to her treatment and instructions.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AND Rheumatism Cured!!

Read the following wonderful statement from David K. Hill, Newburyport, Mass.

"I was taken with 'La Grippe' one year ago last February, and had been sick about two weeks when I began using and in four days after I began I had a good appetite and commenced gaining in flesh. In three months I increased in weight from 160 to 204 pounds. I was also troubled with Rheumatism affecting my hips so that I would be unable to get out of bed at times, and I am happy to say, gentlemen, that I am entirely cured of the effects of 'La Grippe', Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism by the use of DANA'S SARSAPARILLA."

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Would You Own a Bicycle?

If you cannot afford the latest and most improved article in wheels, and still want a bicycle of high grade, a machine to be proud of, a machine that is the equal in construction and finish of any bicycle in the world, and superior in every way to the 1893 patterns of most builders, we will make you a proposition. We have about 200 of our model 27 for men, and model 28 for ladies, which we want to sell. They are grand wheels, we never made better ones for wear or for work. Thousands and thousands of them are used to-day by delighted riders who paid $150 for them a year ago, and got full value for every cent of it. We have sold hundreds of them this year for cash at the price at which they are listed, although in pushing our 1893 wheels into publicity we have neglected to advertise them. Now it is getting late in the season and we want to close them out. To approved parties who cannot pay cash, we will sell the balance on easy terms of payment. You may have them on the instalment plan, at a very slight advance from the listed price. Here are the wheels:

1892 COLUMBIAS,

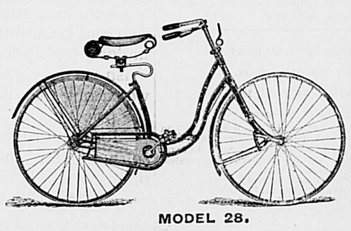
MODEL 27.



MODEL 28.

BEAUTIES, AREN'T THEY?

u can have them with cushion tires at $110 each, or with pneumatic tires at $115 and $125 each, cash, according to the quality of the tires.

The tire on the $125 machine is our best Columbia pneumatic, the best and most expensive tire to manufacture ever used on a bicycle, fully guaranteed against puncture for the year; moreover, we guarantee the whole machine from rim to hub, from handle bar to pedal.

HOW TO GET ONE.

Go to our nearest agent. If you don't know who or where he is, write to us and we will tell you, satisfy him of your honorable intentions and ability to pay, pay $25 in cash and arrange to pay the balance within one year. This is an easy way to possess a bicycle worth two or three of the fourth grade machines which are hawked about in auction rooms. If you wish to take advantage of this offer you should attend to the matter at once, as we have but a few of them.

You are welcome to our catalogue, it is a beautiful little book, beautifully illustrated. Call on our agents for free copy, or send us two two-cent stamps for postage and we will mail it.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine HONDURAS sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is

THE Superior Medicine

Because it is always the same in appearance flavor, and effect, and, being highly concentrated, only small doses are needed. It is, therefore, the most economical blood purifier in existence. It makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It searches out all impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly by the natural channels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives elasticity to the step, and imparts to the aged and infirm renewed health, strength and vitality.

My Foe.

Not from my foes without, but those within
I pray to be protected hour by hour.
For that aggressive self that leads to sin
And lures to pleasure with seductive power,
Stands ever by the portal of desire,
And mocks my spirit when it would aspire.

From that most subtle foe, disguised as friend,
I need be ever on my guard, and when
I cease for one brief moment to defend
The castle of my soul, he seeks me then
In some unlooked-for way, with mien so fair
And voice so sweet, the while he sets his snare.

With honeyed words, and sophistries, and lies,
He argues on the pleasures of the sense.
He pictures Duty in a hideous guise
And laughs at Labor's paltry recompense.
"Let dullards toil," he cries, "thine is the right
To gather all life's blossoms of delight!"

Again, in mask of teacher he appears,
And cries, "Why seek to lift another's load?
Each soul that journeys down the vale of tears
Must carry his own burden o'er the road;
Accept thine own, but let all others go."
Despite his mask, I know him as my foe.

My base foe, self which envious of the goal
It cannot reach, since formed of dying clay,
Would hinder and oppose my striving soul
That longs and labors for the better way.
And with this foe mylspirit must contend
By prayer and vigil, even to the end.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in the Independent.

RED ROSES ON GREEN GROUND.

The old missionary known familiarly as "Priest Packard" lived in a rough border community, where religion was so highly disapproved of by the leading spirits that to profess it was to become in most instances a target for abuse. He was a giant in size and strength, and his prowess and bravery had won admiration for himself, and, as a personal compliment, some slighting toleration for the doctrine he taught in his earnest, unlettered fashion.

His great age left his muscular Christianity simply a matter of tradition, and now he and his daughters were kept from starving chiefly by a yearly pittance sent them from a humane society in the East.

Within a large, cheerless room, which was the principal one in the barn-like house they occupied, sat the pair of elderly women, inaptly called by their father "the girls." Idle moments were rare with them, but some engrossing matter had made one turn from dandelion greens she was washing, and impelled the other to drop the shoe to which she was attaching a clumsy patch.

"It seems a p'int of duty for us to write to brother Nathan's child," Lucinda, the elder sister was saying.

"There ain't been ink enough in the house to drown a fly, sense father took the shaking palsy," was Minerva's answer; "an' ef there was, neither of us could write a letter fit to go into a public post office."

"I don't see," said the other sister fretfully, "what answer we could give, anyway."

"Well, settlin' on the answer don't b'long to us; it's for father to say," said Minerva, nodding her head sidewise toward a wooden rocking-chair where "Priest Packard" sat, with a pillow at his shoulders, a pathetic figure, with his long attenuated frame and poor, worn-out clothes, which, an immaculate cleanness and profuse decoration of darns and patches, testified to his daughters' care. The soft June wind, coming in flower-scented from a window beside him, waved the white locks lying on his thin temples. One shaking hand lay helpless on the arm-chair; the other held loose grasp of a remotely dated religious weekly. His blue eyes, clear and bright, in spite of their crape-like setting of wrinkles, were absently turned to the cloudless sky. His ears, only open to loud sounds, were closed to the women's low talk, and he was saying softly to himself, again and again, the line, "Must I be kerried to the skies on flowery beds of ease?"

"No, no," he ejaculated at last, in louder tones, turning toward the "girls."

"'Tain't fittin' fur a private like me to hanker fur better things than th' great Cap'n hed when he was on airth."

"What is it now, father?"

"Oh, the same old story. When I'd oughter be praisin' God fur his goodness, my mind wanders off to that carpet."

"Lor, father, can't you quit yearnin' fur a carpet?"

"Yes," contritely. "A body would think that arter livin' twenty year on stomped airth floors, an' then gittin' so fine as to hev reg'lar-built plankin' floor fur twenty year, I might furget there ever wuz a carpet."

"I'm sure I've forgot ever seein' any that b'longed to any o' my folks," said Minerva.

"You was too little ter take notice, but we always hed 'em 'fore we moved out this way. I often think of what yer ma gev up to merry a poor circuit preacher. An' when the call come fur missioners to carry on the work here, when twuz wuss even than 'tis now, 'cause our lives warn't scursely safe, she jes rose an' obeyed the call, an' lef' her father's comfortable farmhouse in Vermont, where we'd gone on livin' arter we wuz merried, en where you en your brother was born. Every floor in that house was carpeted, an' the best parlor, where we wuz merried, had one on it thet wuz jes alive with big red roses as large round as a bar'l head, an' a ground greener'n grass. No, your ma never spent her time complainin', but I guess she re'ly broke her heart in a dumb kine er way over her oldest, our only boy, that we left with his gran'ma."

"An' she never seen him again?" said Lucinda, leading up to some news she wished to impart.

"No," shaking his head sadly; "we never see our first-born again, though he lived to be a man growed up and merried, 'fore he wuz swep' away to jine his mother."

"Brother Nathan left a widder en child, you know," pursued his daughter, getting nearer the subject.

"Yes; we got the news in a letter. Poor Nathan he—"

"Well, pa, there's another letter come, an' there's more news; the widder's dead!"

The old man looked surprised; hardly grief-stricken, for he had never seen his son's wife. "All gone," he said softly, "them strong young folks, an' I'm left cum'brin' the ground."

"They ain't all gone," said Minerva; "there's a child left."

"Nathan's boy!" exclaimed her father joyfully. "But who's to look after him now?"

"Tain't a boy; it's a girl; and there's been some mismanagement of the property, an' she's left without a cent, an' she wants to come here to us. The doctor that tended her mother, free of charge, is goin' to pay her way ef we'll take her."

"Of course we'll take her, an' be glad," said her father. "But she'll find it kine er roughish here. I wish we could 'a' made out to get a carpet 'fore she come."

"I don't see how we're goin' to take care of her, anyway," said Minerva sorrowfully. "There's times when it seems like we'd starve ourselves, en I don't know how we're goin' to fill another mouth. Even with the Christmas bar'l comin' every year from that church in the East, we hev a turrible squeeze gettin' along with the 'lowance from the 'Superannuated Ministers' Fund.' Ef twarn't fer Cindy's garden, we'd die in our tracks."

"But we couldn't refuse to take the child in—our own flesh an' blood," said her father pleadingly.

They could not indeed refuse, poor though they were, the women agreed, and four weeks later Hetty Packard knocked at her grandfather's door, after the long journey which the novelty of traveling had made very enjoyable.

Her welcome from the old man was touchingly tender, but the aunts were too greatly appalled to be decently cordial at first. They had half expected a child, but here was a tall, beautiful young woman, whose cheap but stylish dress and hat seemed to their untrained eyes like royal apparel, in contrast with the indigo prints, coarse faded blanket shawls and dreary slat sun-bonnets that composed their own open-air costumes.

It was truly a rough home for Hetty, used as she had been to the comfortable civilization of New England country life, but she took her lot heroically, and after a day or two of very natural depression, which she managed to keep to herself, she fitted herself into her place as if she had always lived there. She had the charming faculty of drawing out the best of every one, and soon the shy aunts were won to a worshipful admiration of her, that formed the excitement of their colorless lives. The old grandfather awoke to a new interest in life, and the two were soon as devoted friends as if a gulf of threescore years had not stretched between them.

The enchantment of her presence extended even to the bleak old house. Wild vines were planted at its door, and home-made brackets and shelves, a shade for the hideous lamp, and other simple devices for tempering its dreariness crept in and softened the asperities of the big, barren "living-room." In Hetty's zeal for improvement she had broached the question of papering the unplastered walls, but her proposal was met by a frank statement of their meagre resources from her aunts, which filled her with dismay.

"You never should have let me come," she cried, "to add to your burdens; but now I am here, I must work for you, and not let it cost you anything to keep me. I can sew nicely, and I am sure I can earn a good deal at that. Perhaps I can even earn enough to make you more comfortable than before I came."

It was hard to make her realize that their far-apart neighbors were either too poor or too indifferent to appearance to hire sewing done.

"But, at any rate, somebody shall give me work," said the pretty, determined creature, not cast down by this statement of facts. "If I cannot get it here, I will write to the Woman's Exchange in some great city, and ask them to send me some embroidery to do. If no express comes so far into the wilderness, Uncle Sam will bring me the things in his mailbags."

She carried out her plan successfully, and many small comforts found their way into the straitened household as a result of her earnings.

But with all the briightness and cheer she brought into other lives, Hetty had her own secret sorrow; and one day Aunt Cin surprised her hiding away in the loft, with her lovely little face all downcast and tear-stained. The woe and sympathy in the good woman's troubled eyes won her confidence; and with her flushed face turned resolutely away, she told her story. There had been a fair and lawn party at their church in Vermont last September, where she was one of the attendants at a flower-temple. A party of summer boarders had driven over from the springs, twenty miles away, and one of them had devoted himself to Hetty so assiduously that Mrs. Bliss, the doctor's wife, and first directress of the sewing society, and the possessor of certain prejudices against city young men, was very angry. But it was not the devotion of a day only, for Allen Dunscombe took daily rides over to Hetty's home as long as his vacation lasted.

It was only to "break a country heart for pastime ere he went back to town," Mrs. Bliss said, still unbelieving in his good intentions; and the injustice to her lover wounded Hetty so deeply, that when, on Allen's last day he won her promise to be his wife, she proudly kept their engagement a secret.

No word or sign had come from him during the long, sad winter that followed the bright, glad autumn; and poor Hetty lived through the bitter misery of her mother's sickness and death, and the loneliness and poverty which followed, with the heavy underlying burden at her heart that Allen's silence gave.

"Now," she said, her eyes dry, and as bright as stars, "you must stop crying Aunt Cin. I can't keep up if you don't stop."

"But how can any man be false to a dear, trusting baby like you?" sobbed Aunt Cin.

"Allen has not been false," said Hetty impressively. "I think he must be dead, and some day I shall hear all about it. I should die if I could not believe in him. Now tell Aunt Min, if you like, but never, never speak to me about it again."

Nearly all of Hetty's embroidering was done by the side of her grandfather; and as he grew daily more childish, he prattled to her constantly of his old home, where he walked on carpeted floors.

"The Lord knows, child," he would say, "that I don't grudge him the work that I've done fur the cause, nor the hardship me an' your gran'ma went through with when we was houseless an' homeless, chased hether an' yon by roughs an' raiders; but I jes wish I could be quit er hearin' folks stompin' on bare boards, en set my ole feet on to a carpet wonst more."

Hetty sympathized with him, and saved to the utmost, small sums from her scant earnings toward the purchase of a carpet, but every time the savings reached a slightly encouraging figure, some stringent need arose in the family, and she could not withhold her store.

Then the winter came, and the old man, rapidly growing feeble, was quite shut in, and deprived of even the soft carpet of grass, which his shuffling feet preferred to the objectional planks. In every other way he was a marvel of patience, but his lamentations over the want of a carpet nearly drove the women mad with pity.

"I was a-dreamin' of my own funeral, child," he said to Hetty, as he roused himself from a long nap. "I don't feel to have much dread of it in general, but I seemed to hear the trompin' of the men's feet on the boards as they kerried me out, an' it hurt my very heart, Hetty, re'ly it did."

Hetty was desperate. "He shall have a carpet," she said, imperatively; and writing an account of the old man's fancy that was touching, from its simple truth, she begged for an advance sufficient to buy a cheap carpet, pledging herself to pay for it in work.

Then the women, not telling what had been attempted, for fear of disappointment, watched for a letter long before there was a possibility of getting an answer. At last the teamster, whose weekly trip to the far-away railroad station and post-office was the wide neighborhood's only communication with the outside world, brought Hetty a thick package, from which fell out fell out a number of letters, all directed to herself in Vermont. The explanation was in a letter enclosed with them, from the man she had refused to believe false to her, and the unopened letters were his vindication.

On reaching home, after the autumn vacation when he met her, he had been dispatched at an hour's notice, to Japan by the firm who employed him. It was a mission of great responsibility, an opportunity not to be refused, but the time allowed was all required to master the details, and there was not a moment for writing to Hetty. The first letter he had the opportunity of sending was so many months in reaching Vermont that Mrs. Bliss, who considered herself a model of wordly wisdom, decided that Hetty had better not hear from one who, she felt certain meant no good. She took the responsibility of suppressing it, as well as the many which followed, till at last they ceased to come.

On Allen's return from Japan he wrote immediately, hoping to obtain an explanation of unanswered letters, and Mrs. Bliss, being somewhat pricked by her conscience, returned all the letters to the business address printed on the last, but refused to furnish him with Hetty's address.

"I should have found you some way, dear," he wrote, "but accident helded me. My cousin is one of the book-keepers at the Women's Exchange, and to-night I found her crying over a letter that had been given her to answer. It was yours, Hetty, and I am not ashamed to tell you that I cried too—with joy that I had found you, and sorrow that you were in trouble. You can be sure that I started for a carpet store at once, but they were all shut up, so I flew home to write this to you.

"The poor old duffer (excuse me, I mean clergyman) shall have his carpet as fast as steam can carry it him, and it shall be the style you want, if one with yard-wide roses on a bright green ground is still an article of commerce in these aesthetic days. And, my darling, I hope to get to you as soon as the carpet, for I will trust no more to letters. Another night shall find me speeding toward my little girl, who shall never escape me again, for if I cannot persuade you to leave that wild place, my pearl of pearls, my long-lost jewel that I am flying to claim, I shall give up the tempting prospect of a junior partnership in 'our firm' and turn cowboy and stay with you there."

The sick man's happiness was pathetic. He rejoiced in Hetty's innocent joy at having her lover's truth proved, but his enfeebled mind dwelt most on the prospect of having his dearest wish gratified.

The lover arrived before the carpet, which he assured them was speedily to follow. It would have accompanied him, but a little time was required to pack and ship it, and he was too impatient to wait.

The old man's eyes kindled with almost youthful fire when, replying to his eager questions, Allen described the glories of the new carpet. He had grown too weak to sit up, but, as he piteously explained, "He'd feel more like getting about when he had a carpet to walk on. An' roses on to it, too," he whispered to Hetty, as she gave him a drink, "like them big posies, mebbe, thet me an' her stood upon to get merried. I wus too shamefaced to look the minister in the eye 'fore all her folks, so I stared down at the big red roses, an' thought how glad I'd be ter give her posies to walk on all her day."

The sun was setting when the grinding of heavy wheels and the teamster's loud whoas to his horses, as they brought the loaded wagon to the door, broke the awed silence that the approach of death imposes upon even the most thoughtless.

The sounds wakened the old man, who had lain for hours in a half stupor. "It has come!" he exclaimed joyfully. "The carpet's come! I—I—am 'feared I ain't got strength to walk on it much, but anyhow 'twill be here for the funeral, an' there won't be no trompin' an' stompin' on bare boards."

They ran to the door to hurry the treasure in, and with eager hands cut the cord and tore the coarse wrapping from the roll, hastening to throw a length on the floor before the bed where the dying man lay with his face turned outward.

There it was, resplendent in the glories of its big, old-fashioned roses. But the spirit that had longed for it so fervently had taken its silent flight beyond the sun, to the golden city where the roses of paradise bloom fadeless forever.—Harper's Bazar.

THEY SAW THE FAIR.

"Been to the World's Fair?" asked the man who had not been shaved for six months.

"Saw it by moonlight—me and Jerry Raggles," replied he of the vermilion nose. "Me and Jerry was out in Denver for our health. Jerry's left lung was off bad. 'Let's git to Chicago,' says Jerry one night when he was laying off on a truck in Wazee street. 'All right,' says I, fo' I was anxious to be in society once more. The next night we jumped a freight fo' as far as Omaha without gettin' turned down once. It got warm then, and we changed for an empty cattle car on account of the ventilation. It was on a Sunday morning when we first struck Chicago. 'Let's lay off and recuperate after the trip, Jerry,' says I, 'and we'll take a sneak on to the fair grounds at night.' 'All right,' says he, but we kept a talking until it was almost dark about what we'd do when we got in the grounds.

"'Well,' as I was sayin' when I woke up the car was jogggin' along kinder slow-like. I looked out through the open slats. We was passing the fair; let's jump!' We both made for the door. I got there first. 'Open it,' says Jerry. 'I can't; it's locked.' 'Let's take it in through the slats,' he says. And we looked for all we was worth. In 10 minutes we was past."

"How did you get out?"

"Get out? We didn't get out until we got to Buffalo. We would 'a' starved if Jerry hadn't had a loaf of bread in his hat."—New York Herald.

TEACHING CHILDREN POLITENESS.

Children are too often left totally uninstructed in those small courtesies of everyday life which go so far to make our domestic and social relations harmonious. They should be taught, almost from infancy, to be polite, to enter and leave a room properly, to respect their elders, to remove their hats when they enter a house, to seat themselves quietly instead of throwing themselves boisterously upon chairs and lounges, to close doors gently and to do many other things naturally and politely which they now do awkwardly and rudely, simply because they have never been instructed otherwise.

A little time devoted each day to this gloriously good work will surely bring an ample return in the end—will, in fact, bear good fruit from the very beginning, since a child who is being taught to be polite is at the same time learning consideration for others and is so cultivating of unselfishness of character. In the same way a child who is encouraged to be orderly, to do little offices for itself, such as folding up its clothes or putting a hat or toy in its proper place, is not only mastering one of the most valuable of lessons, but is also saving the mother many weary steps in the present and heart-aches in after years.—Housekeeper.

The monotonous response of the speaker to an overwhelming viva voce vote, "The ayes seem to have it. The ayes have it," recalls the episode of Flaherty's hat. Flaherty wore his new four-dollar silk hat to the Finnerty wake and put it in the chair beside him. One-eyed Widow Riley came in and put fourteen stone of beef, blood and bone square atop of it. "Misther Flaherty, I believe I've sot on your hat." "Belave it? You know dom well ye have!"—Washington Post.

Sister Jones's Confession.

I thought the deacon liked me, yit
I warn't adjackly shore of it,
Fer, mind ye, time and time ag'in
When jiners 'ud be comin' in
I'd see him shakin' hands as free
With all the sistern as with me!
But jurin' last revival, where
He called on me to lead in prayer
An' kneeled there with me side by side,
A-whisper'n' 'the felt sanctified
Jes' techin' of my gyarment's hem,"
That settled things as fur as them
Thare other wimmin was concerned!
And—well, I know I must 'a' turned
A dozen colors! Flurried? La!
No mortal sinner never saw
A gladder widder than the one
A-kneelin' there and wonderin
Who'd pray! So glad, upon my word,
I railly couldn't thank the Lord!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

A TRIP TO CHICAGO.

WHAT M. J. SISK AND F. U. WETMORE SAW AND HEARD.

We next came to the celebrated Ferris wheel, in which we had the privilege of spending some 40 minutes while we were carried twice over its course.

The Illinois state building deserves more than an ordinary glance. It would almost seem impossible that such artistic pictures of farming and farm life could be made from the different grains of the state.

The California Women's and Children's buildings were equally interesting. In the latter the gymnasium took our attention for some time.

We would gladly have accepted conveyance from one building to another in either ex-President Polk's or Daniel Webster's carriage, which we saw at the Transportation building. The model of H. M. S. Victoria recalled memories of when that most important ship of the British navy was sunk in the Mediterranean and 400 lives lost. The boat which Grace Darling used on the morning of Sept. 7th, 1838, when assisting her father in the rescue of nine people from the steamer Forfashire, when off Longstone on the Farne Islands, was there as a living monument to the heroism and great feat accomplished by this girl when only 22 years of age. Locomotives from the most ancient to the most modern makes occupied a large area.

Taking an elevator we were landed on the floor of the bicycle exhibit. Wheels of almost every make were to be found. The first bicycle, or Dandy Horse as it was then called, was used by the Duke of Marlborough in 1800. It was propelled by the feet when on a level surface and when going down hill was used similar to a handsled, as there was no brake by which the speed could be regulated.

In the Administration building a model 18 feet long by 9 feet wide of the United States Treasury Department, made of Columbian half-dollars, appeared to be a good indication of the wealth of the country. Passing along we came to the Shoe and Leather building, where we saw an axe used by Gladstone in felling a tree on his Awarden estate. The Antripological building, in which the different charitable institutions of the country are represented, was no less interesting to us. In the evening we admired the great display in the electrical building.

Tuesday morning our main object was the United States building, where the most curious could be well entertained. As we passed along the main entrance we were confronted by representatives of the United States army, showing the great advancement since the first important war from 1775 to 1783. A portion of a large tree from California gave us an idea of the great size that some of the trees attain in the Western regions. This tree was 26 feet in diameter and 81½ feet in circumference. It had to be hauled 60 miles over a very rough mountain road. For this purpose it was divided into sections and hauled by teams of 16 mules each. This section was divided into 46 smaller sections, some weighing four tons each, and it took eleven cars to transport them from Monson, Cal., to Chicago. The cost of cutting, shipping and installing as it then stood was $10,475.87. This part of the tree was hollowed out and the interior was being used as a picture gallery. Winding stairs in the center led to the top. A small United States flag, carried by the Greeley expedition and which has been farther north than any other flag, attracted considerable attention.

Although not having seen all the exhibits, we felt that the most important were well impressed on our minds and we would start for home at 3.30 p. m by the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad. At Battle Creek we had supper, and it was 11 a. m. Wednesday when we reached Niagara. The New York Central Hotel gave us breakfast, after which we started for the Falls. As the mighty current rushes over the fearful abyss, it makes a spectacle greater in magnificence than nature ever before produced. Standing on the rocks 160 feet above the level of the fall, the spray came dashing in our faces, ever reminding us of how great must be the tumult of the angry waters beneath our feet. It was nearing the middle of the afternoon when we again resumed our journey and when at Richland we sat down to supper, our appetites were well prepared for the rich repast that had been provided.

At 11 o'clock we reached Norwood, where we remained until 7.30 Thursday morning. Our next stop was at Essex Junction, where we took a train at Vergennes to visit the Vermont State Reform School. A pleasant location of the school, a genial superintendent and a handsome pair of chestnut steeds and double-seated carriage made our stay at this place most enjoyable.

Next day a considerable of our course lay through the verdant hills and valleys of Vermont, and when we arrived in Springfield at 7.30, feelings of pleasure and regret were strangely intermingled. We could not hope for a more successful trip than it had been our privilege to have, and could we refrain from expressing a regret that it was so near ended? Still a few days more were at our disposal and why not

PALMER NEWS.

BUT HE NEVER CAME BACK.

A Son Discovers his Father, Who Left Home and Family Thirty Years Ago.

Before the war there lived in Palmer the family of one Charles Holcomb. In 1863 Holcomb bade farewell to family and friends and along with the many others took up arms in defense of his country. When the war was over he did not return to his family, so was given up as dead. Mrs. Holcomb remained in town and for some years labored for the support of herself and child. Finally she accepted a position as housekeeper for Captain Dwight Johnson, who owned a fish market in Fiskdale, but who formerly was proprietor of the stage line between Palmer and Southbridge.

As no word was ever received from the husband and father Mrs. Holcomb and Capt. Johnson thought it perfectly proper to unite their fortunes for better or for worse. This occurred about the year 1873. After a while they moved to Palmer, living on a place in Tenneyville. All went well until the Captain took to indulging in the wine cup, which caused a family separation. Johnson died some few years ago. Since his death Mrs. Johnson has lived in a house on School street, where she died May 29th.

A few months ago the son, George Holcomb, by an accident found out that his father was living. He was in Coleraine and by some means saw a letter in the post office addressed to Charles Holcomb. As that was his father's name his curiosity was aroused and upon making inquiries found that the Charles Holcomb was the owner of a farm some little distance from the village. George at once went to the farm and found its owner to be no one else but his long-lost father, who had been mourned as dead. He had a long talk with his father about things that happened since he left home. During the conversation the son mentioned the death of his mother. The father said he would like to have seen Mrs. Johnson and had a talk with her before she died.

It was found that after the war Holcomb, the elder, returned to Massachusetts, but did not go home to his family. For this negligence he offered no explanation. Instead he went to the vicinity where he is now located and carried on a farm. He was soon married, and now has several children. He is the owner of a good farm and draws a pension.

George Holcomb is at present employed as night watchman at the depot in West Brookfield and upon being questioned said he had known of his father's whereabouts for four or five months. His mother died without any knowledge of the fact that her first husband was among the living.

In the second marriage of both parties there arises peculiar complications. When Mrs. Johnson died the son, George, appeared as the sole heir and all her property went to him. Now that her first husband is found, from whom she was never divorced, it would appear that he could hold his share of the property. But in consideration of the fact that he had married a second wife it is probable that he will not trouble the son for any part of it and run the risk of being brought up to answer for the second marriage.

While at Washington last week Mrs. William Merriam attended a reception to the president. Before leaving home she said she would speak to the president if the opportunity presented itself. When the time came for handshaking with Mr. Cleveland, Mrs. Merriam was in the line with the rest. Being filled with the enthusiasm inspired by the Universalist convention, to which she had been a delegate, as her turn came to grasp the president's hand she exclaimed, "The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." The president was a little surprised, but gave her a hearty hand shake.

The people of Thorndike and the other villages have been criticising the Palmer and Monson Electric Co. because the electric lights have not been running in all the villages every night when they have been burning in this village. During the scarcity of water a few weeks ago it was impossible to get power to run the arc lights except as they were needed until 9.30 by the depot. Four or five other lights in addition to those in the depot have been run each night during the light of the moon, during which time the contract does not call for lights, to prevent damage to the machine because of a small load.

It has been the custom in years gone by for the Royal Arcanum to hold a hunt each fall. The hunt did not materialize last year. Efforts have been made this year and a hunt is promised. There have already been 69 names subscribed to the list. The captains of the two sides will be Silas Keith and Fred Adams. The sides will be chosen Monday evening and the hunt takes place Thursday. The side which gets the least game will settle for a supper for all at the Converse House the following Tuesday evening, the 7th of November. After the supper a dance will be held in the opera house. The committee to settle which is the winning side will consist of C. W. Johnson, E. R. Pierce and Henry Holden.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society Monday evening it was voted to hold the meetings of the society on the first Monday evening of each month during the winter. The next meeting will be held Nov. 6th. The society will also hold several socials the coming winter. Several new additions of stuffed birds have been made to the collection of the society. O. P. Allen and the other members have made up a collection of over 400 varieties of plants found in Palmer the past summer, which have been pressed and mounted. A collection of leaves of the various trees in town is being made. The following vote of thanks was passed:

VOTED:—That the thanks of the Palmer Natural History Society be tendered to Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Willis for their generous donation of a valuable collection of birds' eggs with case. Also that a copy of this vote be published in both local newspapers.

District Court.

The following civil cases, all in action of contract, were entered last Saturday: L. E. Ferry of Willimantic against George E. Reynolds of Holland; Israel Pecor against Thomas and Lucy Watkins; Leander Fountaine against Thomas and Lucy Watkins; William Holbrook against Joseph Kerigan, et al, administrator; Henry G. Rogers of Monson against Alexander Gordon.

On Wednesday morning Benjamin Burr for drunkenness was assessed $5, which he paid. George White of Boston, for vagrancy, was given one year on the state farm at Bridgewater. Tuesday morning White took exceptions to breaking stone in payment for the accommodations furnished by Landlord Allen the night before. He worked a few minutes and when the keeper's back was turned improved the opportunity by going over the fence to the railroad and taking to his heels. An officer started after him and he was captured near North Wilbraham. In the trial White thought a year was considerable time to get for evading the stone heap, but the court did not see it that way. He was allowed to make an appeal. The officers are of the opinion that he is a crook and may be trying to keep out of the way. His record will be inquired into. Patrick Hartnett of Warren paid $10 for committing an assault on Oliver Fortune.

A rather amusing incidence transpired one evening this week, when a rambling cow belonging to Dan Lane got herself into trouble at the parsonage. It seems that the animal was foraging for refuse matter, and dived her head into the recesses of a barrel, but after she had devoured the contents and attempted to withdraw her head the barrel was fastened to her horns, which hobbling circumstances provoked her into antics decidedly ludicrous. Finally, after she had maneuvred for a considerble time, her movements were accellerated by a neighboring embankment and her head extricated by the dissolution of the barrel.

William Gordon of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting his mother, Mrs. Welcome Converse.

Asa Jourdan, a former resident, but now of Mansfield, is the guest of Alexander Murphy.

David B. Needham and Cyrus Patrell took a bicycle trip to Granby the first part of the week.

Robert H. Cushman has returned from the World's Fair. As has also Miss Mabelle Flynt.

Miss Esther Holmes and Miss Mabelle Anderson spent Thursday with friends in Stafford.

Whist is being revived again in town, Miss Kate Cantwell entertaining a party Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Lyman Miller is at Fitzwilliam, N. H., attending the funeral of her sister, Mrs. John Burbank.

Miss Jennie L. Smith, who has been visiting for several weeks in Detroit, Mich., has returned.

Mrs. Nancy Woodbridge of West Brookfield is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Charles McMaster.

M. A. Harvey, who has been spending his vacation with his parents, has returned to Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Trask of Springfield are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Squier.

Thompson Bros. are putting in a curbing in front of Daniel Leonard's South Main street property.

Miss Nellie Gordon of Maine has returned to Monson for the straw season, and boards at Lewis Rogers's.

Rev. J. P. Hawley of New Braintree is spending a few days with his son-in-law, George L. Keeney.

A spark from a locomotive started a brush fire on Norcross Hill this morning, but it was soon under control.

Harry Trask of Springfield called on numerous friends the first part of the week, making the trip on his wheel.

Mrs. Juliette Needham, who has been spending the summer at Stafford, Groton and Burnside, has returned home.

Mr. Hodge, a former resident of Wilbraham, will occupy the new house owned by Chester Blanchard on Bridge street.

Marcus Keep Post has extended an invitation to Col. Titus of Orange to give the Memorial address, and he has accepted.

Cady Blanchard arrived home from the World's Fair Monday, having spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Bardwell, at Tylerville, Ct.

Mrs. David B. Needham was called to Huntington Thursday on account of the extreme illness of her brother, who has since died.

Eden D. Shaw and wife of Wales stopped over for a few hours Saturday in town on their way west on an extended carriage drive.

The Methodist church was very tastefully decorated last Sunday and the Sunday school concert in the evening was very largely attended.

Supt. Wood, always active for the interest of our schools, will attend a meeting of school superintendents in Boston Thursday, Nov. 2d.

The Ladies' Whist Club met with Mrs. Gilbert W. Farrington Tuesday afternoon and will meet with Mrs. George C. Flynt next Thursday.

The building owned by Mrs. Miller and formerly occupied by Charles Orcutt as a laundry, is being remodelled and put in shape to rent.

The harvest supper at the Universalist church Tuesday evening was excellent, and the entertainment which followed was much enjoyed.

Another addition to the professional directory of the town is Miss Mary McDonald, an experienced nurse, who has hired rooms on Hampden avenue.

Richard Ritter, formerly of Monson, now a member of a theatrical company, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ritter.

The Congregational parsonage is to be wired for electricity, and the Dorcas society is contemplating the lighting of the church by the same power.

Miss Musgrave of Morristown, N. J., and Miss Caroline Graham of Ridgefield, Ct., have been enjoying a pleasant visit to Monson as the guests of Mrs. S. F. Cushman, Jr.

The last to leave for the World's Fair left Saturday evening and comprised C. M. Gage, C. M. King and S. Fred Cushman. They are doubtless the last that will go before its closure.

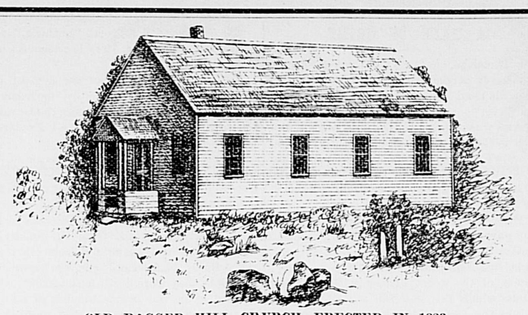
Alvin A. Gage, Ralph Clifford, Dr. George E. Fuller, R. Fred Bradway, Nelson Bugbee, George A. Harvey and Frank Bills attended the dedication of the Masonic Temple in Springfield Tuesday.

The twelfth annual convention of the high school teachers' association of Western Massachusetts will be held at Springfield to-morrow, in the high school building, and Prof. A. N. Burke and the teachers will attend.

Prospects for the winter seem a little brighter for the south part of the town, as the employes of D. W. Ellis & Co. have been informed that their mill will start on full time and they are very thankful for the news.

Charles A. Couch, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. A. H. Tanner, left last week for Montreal on a business trip. Mr. Couch has just returned from England, where he was successful in selling the right to manufacture his damper invention in that country.

The Democrats of the town will hold the first rally of the campaign in Memorial Hall this evening, at which Salem D. Charles of Boston and A. M. Copeland of Springfield will expound Democratic principals and exhort the audience to vote for them. The gallery will be reserved for ladies and escorts.



OLD RAGGED HILL CHURCH, ERECTED IN 1823.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL JUBILEE

Of the Ware Methodist Episcopal Church. Services Continued Through the Week.

The exercises of the Semi-Centennial Jubilee of the Ware Methodist Episcopal church were commenced Sunday morning, after a love feast in the vestry led by Rev. David Sherman, D.D., by a historical sermon by the pastor, Rev. A. M. Osgood, from Leviticus xxv: 10, "And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof; it shall be a jubilee unto you." He spoke of the church edifice in which we are worshiping as being dedicated to Almighty God in the autumn of 1843, having been built at a cost of $1375, during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Sherman, who was present at this anniversary and added much to the occasion by the interest he manifested. The first sermon delivered in Ware by a Methodist preacher was by Rev. Elijah Bachelder in 1798, in the house of Daniel Leonard, near the northeast part of the town, and near the Ragged Hill district in the northwest part of West Brookfield, and here followed an interesting account of the establishing of the church that was really mother of this one in Ware and the builder of the little church edifice that was the home of early Methodism in this part of the country. The sketch we present of this church gives a perfect representation of it, as it is from an ambrotype made by C. W. Eddy 34 years ago. The church was built in 1823, at a cost of $600, and much labor was donated. From this church have gone out some of the pioneers of Methodism and who accomplished much good. Among them were Rev. Asa Kent, Rev. Joshua Crowell, Rev. Loranus Crowell, Rev. Isaac Binney, Rev. David Crowell, Rev. Lovel Lambertin and Rev. Jefferson Hamilton. In this humble sanctuary preached such men as Bishop Hedding, George Pickering, Orange Scott and Wilbur Fisk, historic names.

In the year 1848 the so-called Ragged Hill society was merged into the society at Ware village, under the pastorate of Rev. C. L. Eastman, and the old church removed in 1864 and made into a barn for Joseph Eaton. Coming back more particularly to Methodism in Ware, in 1809 or 1810 Rev. Joshua Crowell preached in a house in Ware Center. In 1815 Rev. Van Rensselaer Osborn preached at his home and meetings were held at Mr. Crowell's until 1825 or 1826, when the growing manufacturing interests attracted attention to Ware village, and Mr. Crowell preached in the house of Mr. Brainerd, corner Church and Pleasant streets, as early as 1820. The first class was formed here in 1826, and Luther Paine was the first leader, with eight members. In 1832 it was deemed advisable to ask a preacher from conference a part of the time. The permanent Sunday school was organized 50 years ago under the pastorate of Dr. Sherman. In 1837 there was a remarkable revival and 70 were hopefully converted, and the whole number of members was about 100. In 1837-38 this place was made a station, and Rev. Thomas Marcy was appointed pastor, although since that time there have been several years that Ware has had to share her Methodist pastor with other towns. In 1848, during the pastorate of Rev. C. L. Eastman, the vestries were built under the church at a cost of $1500. In closing the speaker said "The church celebrates to-day her golden wedding, and extends loving greetings to her many children at home and abroad. There have been conversions, souls born into the Kindgom, every year of the half century of her wedded life, and her children have gone forth to bless the world."

At the close of the sermon Dr. Sherman, in his pleasing way, held his audience for some time longer while he expressed something of the great pleasure he had in living in this past 50 years, and the marvelous advance that had been made. He spoke tenderly of the little church at Ragged Hill, and gave some interesting incidents in the lives of the pastors who had started in their Christian life there. He also spoke of the marvelous growth of Methodism in the past 50 years.

A handsome souvenir programme was prepared for use during the week containing a reproduction of the present church that is expected to be removed in the spring; also a sketch of the Ragged hill church.

W. N. Flynt is laying a four-inch pipe from his newly-made reservoir at the north end of the town, down High street, through Morris street, to North Main street, and has already contracted to supply many families with pure spring water. With his springs and those of Dr. G. E. Fuller, Monson is fortunately blessed with water.

The ladies of the sewing circle held their annual meeting for the election of officers last week Thursday and the following were chosen: President, Mrs. Marvin Bradway; vice president, Mrs. William J. Ricketts; secretary, Mrs. Harlow Chapin; treasurer, Mrs. A. A. Babbitt; directors, Mrs. L. W. Rood, Mrs. E. M. Hatch, Mrs. F. I. Ball.

Yozgat is the center of nine counties in Galatia and Cappadocia. The Christian church in that town is interested in a boys' high school, a girls' school, a school for peasant boys and a kindergarten. Rev. G. H. Krikorian, in whom these institutions head up and who seems to be a kind of Asiatic Dr. Ely, will speak in the Congregational church Sunday evening at 6 o'clock.

The following, taken from the New Bedford Evening Standard, will be of local interest:

Rev. M. C. Julien and Mrs. Julien gave an informal reception last evening in this city to Mr. D. M. Dustan, the new principal of Tabor academy, and his wife. A select circle of ladies and gentlemen connected with or interested in public schools and educational matters was present to meet the guests of the evening and to discuss sociably and unconventionally educational questions of the period. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Dustan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. E. Mosher, Mr. and Mr. Thomas H. Eckfeldt, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ingraham, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac B. Tomkins, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederic A. Washburn, Rev. Mr. Goodspeed of Amherst, Rev. S. C. Bushnell, Mr. William E. Hatch, superintendent of public schools; Mrs. R. G. Toby of Boston, Miss C. Quint and Miss Bessie C. Reed of Tabor academy, and Miss Clara B. Watson.

The meeting of the King's Daughters at the Congregational church Sunday evening was well attended. Miss Mattie Collis read a paper on the work which had been done by the South Circle branch, Miss Pease read an essay on the spiritual work, Prof. Arthur N. Burke gave a short talk on what the King's Daughters could do for the young people, and Rev. W. H. Marble gave a very interesting address. Mrs. Susan E. Thrall read the following report:

The sum received for the general object, that is a four-years' course of schooling for Miss Neal, is $470.42; $348.62 received by the dinners that many of you have so kindly patronized, and $121.80 given by the South Circle. I have paid Miss Neal $335, leaving in the treasury $135 42, enough to finish the four-years' course. This money was received July 1st, 1892, and since then nothing has been done by this circle. There has been a small sum raised for current expenses, just the amount I am unable to give. For this purpose we have in the treasury $1.37, and as there are one or two bills to be paid our treasury will be empty. Sum received by the South Circle $284.95; given for the general object $121.80, leaving $163.95 for home use. Of this sum $148.43 has been expended in various ways, which leaves a balance in the treasury of $14.52 with no outstanding debts.

Academy Notes.

Two of the students narrowly escaped severe injuries last Tuesday afternoon at the close of the school session. While Orcutt and Flint of '94 were out driving their horse started to run, and opposite the Cushman Hotel one of the carriage wheels broke, letting the carriage down and badly damaging it.

The literary societies held their regular meeting last Friday evening and in the case of Lino society the largest number were present that have been this year. Good interest was manifested in the programme. The debate, "Resolved, that poverty develops character more than riches," contested warmly by President McCarty, and H. W. Cristy, was decided in favor of the affirmative. Philo was decidedly musical in its nature, many pleasing selections being rendered by the members.

The prudential committee has changed the programme of Lino society from what has heretofore been given, and at the meeting, which will take place next Friday at 3.45 p. m., the following programme will be presented: Topics of interest for the week ending Oct. 30th, G. L. Phillips; news items of interest for the week ending Nov. 3d, F. A. Morris; debate, "Resolved, that ambition is a vice, not a virtue," affirmative, H. L. Beebe, negative, L. A. Prouty; recitation, L. H. Austin; essay, W. C. Nelson.

The winning of the athletic banner is appreciated by all the students and we trust to many of the town's people, and its appearance hanging over the desk in the chapel is an inspiration to all, telling us that we lead the W. M. I. A. A. In view of all this here is a chance for everyone to help win it next year, for if it is won it will always remain as a trophy of the institution. The committee of the athletic association has planed a very fine entertainment, to be given next Friday evening, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, club swinging, and exhibition of heavy lifting by the celebrated Sault brothers of Monson. Tickets will be on sale at Keeny's drug store on and after to-day, and by students. Tickets 25 cents; reserved seats, 35 cents; gallery, 35 cents. The proceeds are to to used for defraying the expenses of the association at the field meet at Amherst next spring. Give the boys a full house and thus make the winning of the banner doubly sure.

BRIMFIELD.

John Haley of Dunhamtown is doing duty as juryman at the civil session of the superior court at Springfield this week.

WEST WARREN.

The evening school, which will commence next Wednesday, will be held in the brick schoolhouse Monday Wednesday and Friday evenings.

GLENDALE.

The town loses one of its best citizens in the death of A. D. Seaver, who died at his home last Sunday. He was one of the leading members of the church, and had been superintendent of the Sunday school for a number of years. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

HAMPDEN.

Moses Warren has gone to the World's Fair.

Will Hunt is clapboarding and painting his house.

It is rumored that Dr. Warner has leased the Allen House for his son-in-law, and that it will be opened soon.

Brighter times are expected here, as it is thought that the mill will start up in the near future. Already it is receiving stock.

WEST BRIMFIELD.

Mrs. W. H. Allen is visiting relatives in Boston.

Mrs. Jennie Powers is visiting friends in Springfield.

Haskell Allen has gone to Shelburne Falls for a short stay.

J. W. Lawrence, Jr., returned from the World's Fair Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Damon of Brentwood, N. H., are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Peter Prue.

E. H. Clark and J. B. Rohan of Springfield spent a few days hunting in town last week.

Marcy & Gardner have closed their brickyard for the season, and the help left for Canada Wednesday.

A swarm of bees found in the old Chamberlain house recently netted the finder about fifteen pounds of honey.

WALES.

Rev. H. P. Smith has sold his Pratt place to George W. Dimmick.

Voters should remember that next Wednesday is the last day they can get registered.

The Stafford baker left his horse unhitched yesterday, when it ran off a bank and demolished his wagon somewhat.

The Republican rally Wednesday evening was a grand success, 300 turning out, and the close attention given showed they were interested. H. A. McFarland was chairman and in a few remarks introduced the speakers, Col. S. C. Warriner and Col. C. L. Young of Springfield. Col. Warriner spoke for 45 minutes in an earnest and interesting manner, giving many solid facts, which told on the minds of the voters, and he was heartily applauded at his close. Col. Young came out in his usual strong voice and held the audience nearly an hour, indulging in an occational story. The Colonel was in a lively mood and gave a rousing speech, which was endorsed by all thoughtful voters.

WARREN.

Miss Alice Buck will entertain a number of her friends on Hallowe'en at her home on Southbridge street.

The ladies of Clara Barton Relief corps gave one of their fifteen-cent suppers in Grand Army hall Wednesday evening.

The evening school will begin next Wednesday evening at the high school building and continue Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

A petition has been circulated among the Masons and their wives, sisters and daughters, for the purpose of organizing a chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star in town.

The selectmen have appointed these election officers: Warden, J. N. F. Quinlan; deputy warden, Frank Tomlinson; clerk, Frank L. Harwood; inspectors, Charles S. Hitchcock, Nathan R. Moore; deputy inspectors, George E. Tarbell, Haschal Underwood. The West Warren officers are: Warden, Milton Dickson; deputy warden, George H. Crossman; clerk, Frank Bemis; inspectors, Joseph H. Davis, Timothy Collins, Jr.; deputy inspectors, Albert H. Converse, Dennis J. Haley.

BELCHERTOWN.

William Clough has bought of Melvin Bardwell his place in the Holyoke district.

E. Presco has the contract to build a house for J. J. Garvey, to replace the one burned last spring.

The Epworth League "festival of days" has been postponed to next week Tuesday and Wednesday.

C. R. Dunbar has sold his market business to F. E. Burnett, who will take possession next Wednesday.

Mrs. L. W. Dillon and daughters, who have been on a visit to Rhode Island, returned yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Hopkins, who have spent the summer in Canada, will start for home next Monday.

There will be an administrator's sale of household goods on the premises of the late Charlotte Kenfield to-morrow.

Rev. E. F. Thayer, pastor of the Baptist church, has been attending the meeting of the state Baptist convention at Cambridge this week.

Albert D. Shumway and Emma A. Randall were married at the Methodist parsonage Tuesday evening by Rev. H. G. Alley. They will make their home in Worcester.

Arrangements have been made so that a key to the Congregational church can be found at A. D. Randall's, at the north end of the common, in case any one wishes to ring an alarm.

F. L. Plantiff, whose place of business was burned in the recent fire, has secured quarters in J. R. Gould's storehouse, having fitted up a barber's shop there. He commenced business Friday morning.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Moseley, who has been spending the past few weeks at Waterbury, Ct., has returned to her home on Maple street.

Dr. Carl and Mrs. Schofield of Boston who have been the guests of Mrs. C. Scofield and Miss Stebbins the past two weeks, left Tuesday for the World's Fair.

Mr. Fenton, who has been spending the past summer at Rome, N. Y., is home for a few days. Mr. Fenton and daughter are intending to spend the winter in Springfield.

Rev. W. R. Newhall went to Belmont, N. H., Monday to perform the marriage ceremony of Rev. William A. Love of the Dakota conference and Miss Fannie M. Wells, who was preceptress at the academy last year.

Rev. Franklin Fisk and daughter, Miss Fannie, left last Thursday for Natick to stop a few weeks, before leaving for Evanstown, Ill., where they will spend the winter with friends, and later will visit his daughter, Mrs. Strong, of Colorado.

Among the grangers who have been at the World's Fair the past two weeks are F. E. Clark, C. C. Beebe, Miss Fannie Merrick, and Mrs. William Sessions. Miss Merrick will visit Judge and Mrs. Hodges of Detroit and Miss J. Firman of Finlay, Ohio, on her way home.

The 25th anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. M. S. Howard in the first Congregational church will be celebrated next Sunday and Monday. H. M. Bliss, Henry Clark, C. E. Peck and A. A. Phelps have been chosen a committee of arrangements. On Sunday Mr. Howard will preach a historical sermon, and among the other speakers will be Rev. L. H. Cone and Rev. Dr. M. Burnham of Springfield, Rev. F. Nichols of Wilbraham, Rev. N. Vanderpyl of North Wilbraham, and Rev. W. R. Newhall of Wesleyan Academy. Monday evening there will be a reception and banquet at the church parlors.

WARE.

Bishop Lawrence paid an official visit to the Trinity Episcopal church Tuesday evening.

Sandford Converse recently shot a dog at Ware Center that he found worrying his sheep.

The drama, "Irish Justice," was given by the Ware Minstrels at the fair last Friday evening.

Southworth Brothers, of the Ware Lumber Company, have both been cut by circular saws the past week, but not seriously in either case.

Andrew Merritt accidently discharged a shot gun in Fallon's barber shop Wednesday. Not much damage was done, but it was a narrow escape for the clock.

The free evening drawing school was organized last evening by William L. Judkins, teacher of drawing in the public schools, with a class of 25 and more expecting to come in.

Much sympathy is felt in the community for Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Billings, formerly of this town in the loss of their son, a telegram having been received Wednesday evening to that effect.

Alva Canterbury cut his foot quite badly, severing an artery, with an axe while chopping wood a few days ago. The wound was dressed by Dr. Miner, and it is hoped it will not be a lasting injury.

The Ware Drum Corps was out on Wednesday evening to attract attention to the grand Democratic rally. There was so much of an attraction in some way that a big crowd was in attendance.

The first Republican rally is to be held at the town hall this evening. Hon. Joseph H. Walker of Worcester and Henry H. Bosworth Esq., of Springfield, will be the speaker. Hon. Lewis N. Gilbert will preside.

The last meeting of the board of registrars of voters before election will be held next Wednesday at the court room from 12 m. to 10 p. m. If you wish to vote, see that your name is on the list, for this is the last chance.

The fair for the benefit of All Saints' church closed Tuesday evening, having been quite as successful financially as could be expected for the times. The entertainments were all of a high order and greatly pleased the people.

Catherine, 46, wife of T. W. Reilly, overseer in C. A. Stevens & Co's mill, died Tuesday morning after many years of suffering. The funeral was largely attended on Wednesday morning, she having many friends both in Ware and Gilbertville.

The confirmation service at Trinity church Tuesday evening was largely attended. Bishop Lawrence was here on his first official visit, and confirmed a class of 16. His sermon is highly spoken of, and his next coming to Ware will be looked for with great interest.

A most enjoyable occasion was the surprise party at the residence of Edwin E. Richardson Tuesday evening by members of J. W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., he having been adjutant of that organization for many years. They presented him with an elegant oak sideboard and other articles of value.

Henry C. Davis was surprised on Monday evening by a delegation of friends, it being his 50th Birthday. They presented him with a handsome banquet lamp as a reminder of the high esteem his many friends have for him. Frank M. Sibley was master of ceremonies, and we may be sure there was an enjoyable time.

The Woman's Relief Corps gave a reception Wednesday evening to neighboring corps. There were over 100 present, including 20 from Palmer, 21 from Warren, 17 from Brookfield and 14 from West Brookfield. Mrs. Clark, department president, of Northampton made a very pleasant speech, and there were remarks by others and a supper.

A. M. Canavan, the tailor, is away this week on a pleasant errand, no less than to take to himself a wife. The bride is Miss Marcella E. Mooney of Dalton, and the marriage took place Thursday afternoon, Rev. D. Cronin performing the ceremony. Mr. Canavan has been in town but a few months, but by his genial ways has won for himself many friends and an extensive business.

There is to be a grand concert and social Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ware High School Athletic Club. There will be piano and vocal duets, dramatic reading and violin and cornet solos. Ice cream and other refreshments will be offered for sale during the evening. The proceeds are to go towards furnishing and equipping the gymnasium in the new high school building.

A profitable and enjoyable occasion was the Sunday school teachers' meeting and social at the chapel Wednesday evening. Reports were given by Mrs. Sturtevant, Mrs. A. E. Davis, Miss Anna Fenn and Frank G. Fox, delegates to the state Sunday school convention at Springfield last week. The following topics were discussed: How to study the lesson; how to teach; how to keep young men in Sunday school; Sunday school singing; relation of Sunday school to the church. There were about 60 present, and a fine collation was served.

The attendance at the races last week Friday and Saturday was not as well patronized as the managers had hoped, but the races are reported as very satisfactory, and the judge, John W. Knibbs of Worcester, is spoken of as one who thoroughly understands his business. There were three races the first day and two the second. In the free-for-all Saturday F. E. Clark's "Linden" established a pacing record for the track of 2.18½. The 100-yards dash, in which there were eight starters, was won by Malone of Springfield, with Sullivan Second.

A CARD OF THANKS.—In behalf of the Young Men's Library Association and of the numerous patrons of the library, sincere thanks are returned to the ladies and gentlemen who so ably assisted in the presentation of the opera "Wanita," both for the pleasure which their performance afforded, and for the generous sum turned over for the benefit of the library. It is hoped that they all may find in the perusal of the added volumes some slight return for their generous efforts, and that the memory of these kind deeds performed for so deserving a purpose at this time may ever act as a stimulus for the doing of noble acts through their future lives.

W. H. STOWE, Pres. Y. M. L. A.
O. P. ALLEN, Librarian.

If the care of the hair were made a part of a lady's education, we should not see so many gray heads, and the use of Hall's Hair Renewer would be unnecessary.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar-coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

When a doctor considers it necessary to prescribe sarsaparilla, he simply orders a bottle of Ayer's, knowing full well that he will obtain thereby a surer and purer preparation than any other which the drug store can furnish. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the Superior Medicine.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

It's quite a long time since we have said a word about the Comfort boots for women, which have no seams on the side to hurt one's feet, and which sell for $3.00 with the assurance that they will cure corns as well as prevent more coming. This make of boot is found at Broadhurst Bros., the shoe dealers, 376 Main street, Springfield.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., October, 1893.

We are going to move shortly into our new building. That move will have some effect on our stocks. We shall try and start in the new place with the fewest possible odds and ends; and so must sell them at once.

The items are too many to give a full list of; but we are going over our whole stock, such a going over as always makes quick work of selling.

For example:

Imported dress patterns, no two alike, worth all the way from $7.50 up to $20, all at the same price—$5 each.
Florentine silks, suitable for fancy work, sofa pillows, scarfs, sash curtains, etc.; eighteen figured effects, such as water lilies, wild roses, passion flowers, thistles, etc. Never before under 75 cents; price 49.
6-4 chenille covers, worth $1 and $1.50; price 55 and 98 cents.
Turkey-red damask, regular 37½ cent quality, price 25 cents.
Wool flannel, worth 20 and 25 cents, price 13 and 21.
White blankets, worth $4.50, price $3.50.
Odd lots of corsets, worth all the way up to $2, price 50 cents.
Odd lots of women's vests and pants, such as natural wool goods, camel's hair, scarlet, white, etc.; worth all the way up to $1.50, price 59 cents.
Women's combination suits, white or natural, worth $1.50 and $1.75, price 79 cents and $1.19.
Wool and fur felt hats, 82 different styles such as ought to bring from 50 cents to $2.50 each price 11 and 50 cents.
Black and colored ostrich tips, usually 50 cents to $1.25, price 25 cents for bunch of three.
Cheviot coats made in the newest style with high, sloping shoulders, some with Worth capes, $3.50, $5 and $7.50; worth a good deal more.
The Dore illustrated books (Purgatory and Paradise, Bible Gallery, and Romance of the Crusaders) published at $5, price 50 cents each.
Books in sets at such prices as never before.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Mud Cakes.

A LITTLE GIRL'S RECIPE.

I don t see why the big folks all
Need to go to cooking school,
For it's easy enough to make a cake,
If you make it by this rule:

First, you must have an apron
That you're not afraid to hurt,
For in this recipe we use,
For flour, sifted dirt.

Then dig with an iron spoon
A hole in the cool, dark ground,
And put in dirt and water,
Stirring it round and round.

And then a handful of pebbles
You'd best put into the dough.
What are these for? In this recipe,
Pebbles are raisins, you know.

And when you get it all thick enough
You make it into a cake,
Then put it on a nice, clean board
And set it in the sun to bake.

Dear me! I'd most forgot to say
You must sprinkle with sugar (or sand),
And when they're done, no better cakes
Will be found in Babyland.

That's all. You see, to learn to cook
You don't need to make a fuss.
Though mamma says, when she comes to the door,
"Why, Bessie, child! What a muss!"

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

Everybody Knows Him

A Prominent Member of the Maine Legislature.

What He Says Will Ring Over the Whole Land,

As the Trumpet Tongued Utterances of One of Our Great Men.

The word of Hon. John R. Prescott, formerly a prominent member of the Maine legislature is all powerful.

Mr. Prescott lives at Rome, Me. Everybody knows him, everybody respects him and everybody believes what he says.

And it is an interesting story which he tells and an elegant tribute which he pays.

"Thirty-two years ago," he says, "I was attacked with neuralgia in my face and head, mostly confined to the right side. There was not often a day or an hour that I was not suffering with that terrible severe pain, so severe a great many times that for several days and nights I could not sleep or take any food except a little gruel.

"My nerves were terribly affected and I grew weak and feeble, as my many friends in the state of Maine, and more particularly in Kennebec County, will certify to.

About five years ago I was taken with what the physicians claim to be a liver and kidney trouble, a soreness over the right kidney; so much so that I could not bear to be rubbed.

"My bowels were very much constipated, could not urinate freely, and suffered severe pain at such times.

"My troubles increased very much, and for the past six months I could not get up from my bed in the morning and dress me before I would be in pain in my back and bowels.

"I would often be forced to drop down and rest me and many times be in such pain that I would cry like a child and ask why I could not die.

"I have used for neuralgia all the liniments I have ever seen advertised for the cure of that disease, and for my nerves and kidney and liver trouble I have taken so many remedies that they are too numerous to mention.

"I have been treated by the leading physicians of Maine, have also been to Massachusetts to be treated by physicians in Boston, and from all I have received very little benefit. One eminent physician said that I could not be cured, and many physicians examined me and refused to treat me.

"I had given up taking medicine.

HON. JOHN R. PRESCOTT, OF MAINE.

"About the middle of December, 1892, my wife had been reading some of the testimonials of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She told me she wanted me to try one bottle of the Nervura.

"I said to her I had taken all the medicine I should. She sent to A. P. Cram, the druggist at Mt. Vernon, and bought one bottle of the Nervura, and said she wanted me to give it a fair trial.

"I commenced taking it about the 25th day of December. When I had taken it about two weeks the pain left me entirely from my back and bowels, and I can urinate freely without pain and the neuralgia troubles me but very little.

"I gained in weight in the month of January twelve and one-half pounds. I am 67 years old and can work now every day, while before taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy I could not do any labor excepting a few chores.

"I hope that anyone who is suffering from any trouble with the nerves or liver or kidneys will give Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy a fair trial. I know that they will get relief.

"I can truly say that I thank God that such a medicine as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was created, and I still thank Him that I was induced to take this wonderful medicine.

"I write this without any solicitation."

The cure of so prominent and widely known a man as the Hon. John R. Prescott has created an immense stir throughout the entire state of Maine. His friends and acquaintances are surprised, nay, amazed, at his cure, for they had long looked upon his recovery as hopeless. People are calling on him from New Sharon, Mercer, Belgrade, Mt. Vernon and Rome, and people are writing him from all over the country, inquiring about the remarkable facts of this wonderful health-giver, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

It is purely vegetable and harmless and all druggists sell it for $1. We would add also that it is the discovery and prescription of a well-known physician, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

A TALE OF CRIME.

M. Theodore, chef de surete, sat in his cabinet deeply perplexed, his two elbows on his desk, his head on his hands. He was musing.

"And was it going to last, this, which had been going on for so long awhile? And these two assassins, were they going to end by beating him? Were they going to compel him by adverse public opinion to send in his resignation?

"Parblen! It looked so, and as if they did it on purpose, passing the word from one to another to force him to get out of their way. Eight assassinations, one after another! Crimes of the worst caliber, with startling details which peopled alike with horrifying visions the sleep of the bureaucrat and the concierge. And not an assassin, for all their skillful work, had they been able to lay their hands upon. They had fled, every man of them. They had disappeared, vanished—piff, like a puff of air. Celerity, dispatch, their motto, and to go without leaving an address behind them! Frankly, it had begun to pass the bounds of all reason.

"And now to top off these eight other crimes there was still another, a ninth one—a murder like the others, accomplished the evening before under similar conditions."

The chef de surete pulled himself together, threw back his head like a warhorse sniffing battle, and—the door opened.

It was his secretary who presented himself, bearing a card in his fingers.

"A gentleman, monsieur, who insists upon seeing you. He declares," and the secretary smiled a little at the absurdity of the idea—"he declares himself in a position to furnish you with definite particulars regarding the crime of yesterday."

"Ah, the crime of yesterday!" The chief turned quickly. "Then bid him enter," said he, and while the secretary regained the anteroom to do his bidding M. Theodore cast his eye upon the card before him.

"Frederick Bouscal," he read in a half voice. "Bouscal, Bouscal. It seems to me that name—that I've heard it somewhere."

He scrawled a line upon a scrap of paper and handed it to the secretary, who returned it, at the moment ushering in the visitor who had asked to see him, dismissed him with a word and was ready for the matter in hand.

M. Theodore raised his eyes. Before him was a man simply but neatly clothed, and with a frank and honest countenance, though veiled as by a cloud with sadness.

"You have particulars to give me, have you not?" questioned the chef de surete. "Particulars of the crime of yesterday?

"I hope so, monsieur," simply responded the visitor.

"Ah, hope so! You are not sure then?"

"It rests with you, M. le Chef, whether I am or not. All depends, in fact, upon an operation, the means of which you alone are able to furnish me."

"Explain, if you please."

"Certainly, and at once, though doubtless you have heard it spoken of, M. le Chef—a certain scientific procedure which permits, under certain conditions better even than description can do it, a reproduction of the portrait of an assassin. Briefly, behold my meaning. You know, of course," he continued, "that in the phenomenon called vision the object which we see throws, or forms, upon a screen in the eyeball itself—in plain words, upon the retina of the eye—an image which remains there until displaced by another. It has been proved also that this image continues even after death."

The door of the cabinet opened anew, and the secretary of M. Theodore re-entered holding in his hand a roll of papers, which he laid before his chief, then turned and was gone again as quickly as he had come. M. Theodore lifted it up and run his eye over the contents.

"You are named Frederick Bouscal, are you not, monsieur?" he demanded presently, addressing his visitor.

"Yes, M. le Chef, Frederick Bouscal."

"Your age?"

"Fifty-eight years, M. le Chef."

"Hum-m-m!" M. Theodore rapidly twirled the sheets beside him. "Twenty-seven years," he murmured, as if thinking aloud. "So it was you then who was imprisoned two years ago and condemned for contumacy and the theft of 1000 florins?"

A sudden flush empurpled the countenance of the visitor.

"No, monsieur," he responded with an effort, in a dull voice. "No, it was not I—it was—my son!"

"An employee of the Credit Agricole, was he not? And—you are ignorant of what has become of him."

"Absolutely. It is fifteen months that his mother and I have been without news of him."

"Pardon me, monsieur," said the chef de surete. "I have reopened a painful wound, but I listen to you—you were saying—"

The man passed his hand across his brow and eyes to clear his vision, then resumed:—

"I was saying, M. le Chef, that in the case which occupies us now the reproduction of the assassin's portrait should be entirely possible. It is probable, if not sure, that the eye of the corpse now lying upon the slab of the morgue contains the exact reproduction of the features of the one you seek. With your permission I will draw it from them?"

"Draw it, but how?"

"By photography—it is my business, M. le Chef. And this matter, this subject I speak of, I have studied it long and almost with passion, for I hold it to be, in case of success, one of the most useful and beautiful applications of modern science. I know it can be done, I have myself experimented, and in one instance have reproduced the lineaments of the physician who had leaned above the bed of the dying."

The man spoke with animation, and while speaking his voice vibrated, his eyes burned, his whole countenance was illuminated, irradiated with the light of a legitimate pride.

"Then so be it, monsieur," agreed the chef de surete. "Take your instruments to the morgue to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock. I will see that the clerk is instructed. Later on I shall myself be there. I have the honor, monsieur, to wish you good morning."

In the obscure nook at the morgue where he had inclosed himself, in accordance with the arrangements made at the office of the surete, Frederick Bouscal, his body bent, his face drawn, watched anxiously the result of his last washing. The plate was there before him in its bath of quicksilver, into which he had dropped it awhile ago with such fear and infinite precaution.

Sensitized? Vitalized? At least it should be, and if the conditions of the crime were such as he supposed them, and the victim before dying had really seen her murderer's face, the portrait of the assassin would be there under that bed of gelatine en traine to melt away.

His throat closed as by a grip of iron, the operator held himself immovable, hearing only with painful distinctness the gurgle of the water as it dripped upon the faces of the dead in the adjoining chamber, the plunge of his blood as it throbbed and hammered through the arteries of his heart.

And at last the moment came—the moment that was to reveal to him all or nothing. He rose—that poor trembling photographer rose, I say, took it carefully by its dripping edges, that plate upon which his fate was hanging, half closed his eyes, held it to the single ray of light that filtered through the yellow pane, to stagger back with a groan of anguish, to let it crash into a thousand pieces. His son! Good heavens! The face of the murderer, the face of the son!

Five minutes later when Frederick Bouscal the photographer, came from his nook, and the chef de surete, awaiting him with impatience, hurried to meet him, he saw immediately by the pallor of his face, by his somber eyes that he had nothing good to announce to him.

"Well," said he, "nothing?"

"No," responded Bouscal, "nothing."

"Allons! no matter. Try it a second time. Do it again."

"Impossible! The transparency of the cornea is destroyed. I wished to wash it, and I burned it through mistake in the vials. I salute you, M. le Chef!" And Frederick Bouscal turned away.

The next morning the commissaire of the quarter of Ternes, forwarding to the prefecture his regular report, headed it with the following item:

"To-day at 10 o'clock a summons to 109 Rue Laugiere. A call from the concierge, suspicions of charcoal fumes from the room of the Bouscals, man and wife, his locataires. Too late—they were dead, both of them, side by side upon the bed, a brazier of lighted charcoal plainly indicating the manner of their death. A double suicide—poverty the cause."

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Gentleman Jim.

In the Diamond Shaft worked Gentleman Jim,
Handsome of face and stout of limb,
Coarse in dress; but something in him,
Whether down in the coal mines, soiled and grim,
Or wandering alone in holiday time,
Won the love and respect of all in that clime.

He had no sweetheart, he had no wife,
Some mighty sorrow had dimmed his life—
His earnings, hardly won and small,
Were aye at the orphan's and widow's call—
Of those who had perished in shaft or winze,
He was the friend of all living things,
And moving along in those tol'some ways,
He wore the demeanor of gentler days.

In April last when the mine fell in,
Beneath the timbers stood Gentleman Jim;
With a giant grasp he flung two of the boys
Clear of the danger—with deafening noise
The shaft gave way on every side;
The boys were safe, but Jim—he died;
Died as men die, and will die again,
Giving their lives for their fellow-men.

When rooks and timbers were cleared away,
And Jim borne up to the light of day,
They took from his bosom, stained with blood,
Two withered leaves of a withered bud
Pinned on a card. "Toute a toi—Marie."
Was writtan beneath them; beneath it he,
On this relic his heart for years had worn,
Had written. "All withered except the thorn."

What life romance, what story of wrong,
This man had locked up in his soul so long,
None who loved him may ever know.
But the tale of his glorious chivalrous deed
Shall not perish as long as men hold this creed—
That the hero whose blood for his kind is shed
Wins a deathless fame and an honored bed;
A monument grander than sculptor e'er gave,
In the glory that hallows the martyr's grave.

MISS HAMMOND'S FRENCH MAID.

Miss Hammond sat in her pretty boudoir looking over the morning mail. There were invitations to two teas and a reception, but the missive which she held in her hand was of a different nature from these. "Oh, dear!" she sighed as she dropped it at length on the table with the others, "if there were only eight days in the week I might join this new literary circle, but there is already the Browning club, the whist club, the mission circle, and the Sisters of the Needy, and, really, I don't know how many more, beside the afternoons in physical culture. No, positively, I must give this up, my head aches now at the thought of it, and papa says I'm never at home as it is. Come!"

This last word was spoken in response to a light knock at the door which opened a moment later, and a trim, white-capped girl appeared.

"If you please," she began, "there's a—a young person wishing to see you."

"A young person," repeated Miss Hammond doubtfully.

"Yes'm. She might be a lady's maid, perhaps." This accompanied by a glance of slight injury.

"Oh, yes," the other returned. "Very well, Pauline, say I'll be down in a few moments."

And the girl went out.

Miss Hammond had, for the last few weeks, been wanting to obtain the services of a maid, and had quite set her heart upon one who was French, and perhaps considering the many and varied social duties and pleasures devolving upon the head of this lady, it was not to be wondered at that she felt the need of reducing to a minimum the time and thought given to her own personal requirements. So, not finding a maid to meet her unqualified approval otherwise, she had, a day or two since, caused a "Wanted" to be inserted in the columns of one of the daily papers, and now she went down stairs hoping to find there that paragon of French virtues which her fancy had pictured.

But when she crossed the threshold and faced the person waiting for her she paused in admiring surprise, not unmixed with incredulity. "I fear she is much too pretty!" was her first thought, and her second, "I wonder if she is French!"

And, indeed, the girlish figure which arose as she entered the room was a pretty one, and the blue suit in which it was clad, becoming, and in good taste. Bright, long-lashed, dark blue eyes, glossy black hair, and a complexion which, for brilliancy and beauty, quite surpassed Miss Hammond's own, notwithstanding her powders and cosmetics.

Recovering from her momentary surprise the lady said, "I am Miss Hammond; you wished to see me I believe."

"Yes'm. I seen your advertisement on the paper for a lady's maid, and I called to see would I suit you."

Any illusion to her nationality was dispelled by this remark, and Miss Hammond, who had been felicitating herself that this might be a perfect gem of a maid, felt her spirits sink, but she asked, "Have you recommendations?"

"Indade, yis, ma'am," with a smile that displayed a dazzling row of white teeth.

"And what is your name?"

"Marie Quinn."

Miss Hammond talked with her for several minutes; the girl was apparently well qualified for the position of lady's maid, and her recommendations were all that could be desired, but Miss Hammond felt only too confident that she had been christened Mary, and not Marie, so, at length she said:

"What I especially wanted was a French maid."

"Yis'm, Oui. I seen that was what you wanted. That's why I came."

"But you are not French."

"Not French! me?" exclaimed the girl, her blue eyes wide open in amazement. Then as evidently her feelings were too intense for words, she relapsed into silence.

"No, certainly not," the other went on; "you neither look nor speak like the French."

"Oh!" returned the girl with a light laugh calculated to produce the belief that she was more amused than politeness would allow her to show, "the lady does not recognize me Frinch accint! Now!"

"No, I certainly do not. I know something of the French language myself."

"Oui?" and Marie looked up the picture of innocence.

Miss Hammond bit her lip to repress a smile, but a moment later, "Parlez vous Francais?" she asked gravely.

The girl, nothing embarrassed that her own vocabulary was composed of the two words, yes and no, returned naively:

"Really, now, if you belave it, Miss Hammond, it's so much English I've been sp'aking for the last two or three years, I'm afraid it's little Frinch I have left but me accint! but it's Frinch I am to the very backbone o' me!"

Miss Hammond did not in the least intend to engage the girl's services; she might do all very well as far as her duties went, but to take a girl, who, contrary to all reason or sense declared herself to be what she was not! It was simply out of the question. Yet there was something about her that made the lady reluctant to dismiss her, and it came about, Miss Hammond could never quite tell how, that at length she found herself arranging for the girl to come on trial.

"But on one condition, Marie," she stipulated, "and that is that you make no pretense of being French, but are satisfied to pass for just what you are, a simple Irish girl."

But now it was injured innocence that confronted her.

"Indade, Miss Hammond," she began in a grieved tone, "I can't see why ye should be objecting to me being Frinch when it was that ye wanted. Me, Irish! think o' that, now!" she added with more spirit, and with a flash and twinkle in her eyes which, for the first time, led Miss Hammond to believe that the girl herself appreciated the absurdity of the situation, firmly as she adhered to it.

"No doubt I shall like you just as well as if you were French," the lady said, smiling. "So long as I am well served, that is the principal thing."

"I don't know now," began the girl as if willing to concede as much as possible. "I can't be saying but what me god-mother may have been of Irish descint; but, sure, Miss Hammond," looking up artlessly into the lady's face, "sure you wouldn't be blaming a poor Frinch girl for that!"

And if the twinkle came again in her eyes it was hidden by the long-lashed lids as her glance fell modestly to the floor.

That evening Marie came to take up her abode as a member of the Hammond household. At the end of a week Miss Hammond had decided to keep her; at the end of a month she wondered how she had ever lived comfortably without her. She seemed to possess an intuitive knowledge of her mistress' tastes and requirements, was always a pleasant object to look at, and responded readily and with the utmost good nature whenever called upon. She dressed Miss Hammond's hair in new and becoming styles, while buttons straying from boots, gloves, or other articles, found themselves back in their places again as if by magic, and with one exception, her word, so far as was known, could always be depended upon. This one subject was as to her nationality, for, with the most absurd insistence in the face of every indication to the contrary, she continued to declare herself "Frinch to the backbone." On more than one occasion her mistress caught the ludicrous twinkle in the blue depths of her eyes, and would think that now, most certainly, she was about to acknowledge the fallacy of her reiterated assertion; but no, the girl remained true to her first principles.

As a whole, Miss Hammond was so well pleased with her maid that for the first few weeks, as she confided to one of her friends, she lived under the constant dread of discovering some glaring fault; but that gradually died away, and time moved uneventfully on till six months had passed, and then—

But this was how it happened: Marie had been having an evening out. She was later than usual about returning, but as she had a key to the side door no one need be the wiser for her little dissipation; so, unlocking the door, she entered the hall between the dining-room and kitchen. She made as little noise as possible, for it was no matter if Maggie and Pauline didn't know just what time she came in. But as as she stood a moment in the hallway, she saw a bar of light suddenly fall upon the floor. It came from the dining-room, the door of which was ajar, and still noiselessly the girl approached the door and applied one eye to the crack.

"Heavenly Betsey!" she murmured under her breath, for there in the room was a man who was certainly no member of the household. A dark lantern was in his hand and this flashed over the various articles of the room, particularly about the table and sideboard, and caused the light Marie had seen. He wore a mask, and seemed to be selecting and packing up the different articles of silverware in a business-like manner bespeaking long familiarity with such a proceeding.

A few moments the girl stood there motionless, then she opened the door and walked into the room.

"Whist now, Pat, an' is it yesilf?" she asked in a gay whisper.

The man turned suddenly, with a muttered imprecation and flashed the light over Marie's pink cheeks and laughing blue eyes, as she remarked:

"Faith! an' if I hadn't been expecting ye, I'd niver been after knowing ye at all for me own third cousin, what wid ye ma'kquerading up in such foine style, an' it's the wig ye hiv on ye head, sure an' ye hair's niver that color, Pat, me boy!"

The man turned back with something very like a suppressed whistle, while the girl whispered on:

"But hoo is it that ye come a good two hours before I looked fur ye? an' me only jist home from the party, an' 'twas an iligant toime intirely. I wish't ye'd been there, Pat. None o' thim spoons is plated," she observed, as the man looked at a pair of heavy tablespoons. "We don't use plated spoons in our family, an' I mind noo ye ain't looked in the little drawer just above there—souvenirs, ye know, an' all thim trash. I seen Pauline when she be putting thim away. Here's the key—there noo!"

For the man, obedient to her suggestion, opened the drawer with the key she gave him, and took out two or three boxes containing the souvenirs.

"Faith, an' I'd had thim all ready for ye if I knew ye'd be coming so soon. Hoo are ye getting along?"

"I'm doin' fine," the man whispered, without stopping to look at her.

"'Twas an' iligant party, sure," the girl resumed musingly; "but to think o' me own third cousin getting here before me! Faith, Pat, an' ye come so airly loike, I was thinking was it somebody ilse, an' not yesilf, an' I stood looking at ye an' not daring to spake till I be sure, ye's rigged up so foine. But it's the hurry ye are in, sure. Will—I must be gitting to me bid; if anybody found me here, there would be a foine time; so I'll be getting ye the little parcel o' jeweldry we was spaking about. It's here in the closet. I pit it back in the corner where nobody'd run across it but mesilf."

And Marie stepped back into the hall and opened a door leading to a closet under the stairs. A deep shelf run back under these just above her head. The girl stood on tiptoe and reached up to the shelf.

"Sure, Pat," she said a moment later, bringing her heels down to the floor with a long breath, "I pit it so far back out o' the reach o' other people, I can't be reaching it all mesilf. Ye'll hiv to come an' git it, sure."

The man turned towards her, paused a moment and flashed the light again into the girl's face.

"Sure, an' ye'll blind me for loife, Pat!" she exclaimed, laughing.

"You ain't foolin' me?" the man exclaimed suddenly, grasping the girl's arm.

"If you are—"

"Me foolin' ye, Pat!" she returned reproachfully; "an after what I done fur ye at me last place! Off wid ye, thin, ye nadent be hiv'n' the jeweldry. I'll kape it all mesilf, so I will, and not be dividen wid ye at all. Off wid ye."

Her brogue increased with her earnestness and she turned as if to go into the dining-room again, but the man detained her and in a conciliating tone declared, just above a whisper:

"I's only jokin'! Where's the jewelry?"

"That's me own third cousin, sure. Ye can be r'aching it aisy, an' fath, when ye eye lights on thim things ye'll niver be saying it was foolin' ye I was!"

Then the man took a step or two forward and reached up to the shelf.

"Way back; don't ye be r'achin' it!" the girl said. "Deeper in—I must have hid it well, sure."

The next moment the door closed, and just as the man with a start placed his hand on the knob, the key turned and he was a prisoner. A few moments later she stood at the telephone, and leaving that ran upstairs to Mr. Hammond's door.

"If you please, sir, there's a burglar down stairs, and I've got him in the closet." This she repeated a second time before it was comprehended; then hardly more than half awake the man asked.

"Who—what—who is it?"

"I dunno who 'tis," the girl answered, "but I've got him!" Then as the situation was briefly explained, she added: "If you'll please to speak to Tom, sir, I'll go down and see that this man doesn't pick the lock. I've sent for the police," she concluded as she hurried away to her prisoner.

"Come quick," she called upstairs, "he'll be breaking the door down!"

Hearing her voice the man spoke.

"You'd better let me out of this," he growled; "you'll be sorry if you don't, but if you will," here the voice took on a persuasive accent, "I'll give you som'n, more'n you'll make in a pretty spell."

"Ye may as well save ye breath," the girl returned; "ye'll be needing it at ye trial!"

The captive's next move was to throw himself against the door.

"Stop that now," the girl called out sharply, or I'll shoot ye as I would a dog with the revolver here in me hands."

Whether the man believed her or not, this produced a momentary silence, while Marie, who would have been terrified at the idea of shooting any kind of a dog, laughed softly to herself.

Mr. Hammond and Tom, the coachman, came down a few minutes later, and hearing their voices the man in the closet evidently decided that there was little chance of escape, and nothing more was heard from him till the arrival of the two police officers who came in response to Marie's call by telephone. Then the door of his prison was opened, and as the man was brought to view one officer exclaimed:

"Ah, my fine fellow, we've seen you before!"

The man submitted sullenly as the handcuffs were fastened upon him, but with a threatening glance now and then at Marie.

"'Tis rather tough to be outwitted by a woman at last," one of the officers remarked after hearing something of how it had been brought about, "and a mighty plucky little one she is," he added with a glance of admiration out to where the girl had stood.

But of this she was unconscious, for true to her feminine nature, now that the danger and need of action was over, poor Marie had quietly fainted away.

The man proved to be an old offender, and in the account of his capture which appeared in the papers the following day, Marie was made out quite a heroine. Indeed, she received so much praise from various sources that Pauline and Maggie, who at first had felt quite proud of having the affair happen where they were living, came at length to declare that "The fuss some folks made over that girl was enough to disgust a body! What she did was no more'n anybody else could have done if they'd thought of it, and dared to!"

And as for Marie herself it was really quite a wonder that her head was not completely turned, what with her sudden notoriety and the handsome present from Mr. Hammond. But wherever the subject was spoken of in her presence she invariably turned it off with some laughing remark.

On one occasion when alone with her mistress the lady referred to her bravery. The old twinkle came into the girl's eyes for a moment, then with a little laugh she said deprecatingly, "Sure, Miss Hammond, an' don't ye think 'twas all owing to me Frinch accint?"—Ella M. Bangs, in Portland Transcript.

HE RODE THE BRONCHO.

Some one at the hotel told the fat man, who had a week's holiday, that horseback riding was the finest exercise in the world for reducing the flesh, so the gentleman with the surplus tissue rented a horse for a week—a tough, wiry buckskin broncho—and started in.

Every morning at 9 o'clock precisely he mounted his steed in front of the hotel, but no one ever saw him come back. He was never at midday dinner, but he appeared at the supper table, always looking worn out and dejected.

"How are you making out?" asked his adviser one night.

"Oh, pretty fair. Lost 20 pounds."

"That's good. Keep it up and you'll have a shape like the Apollo Belvidere."

"Can't keep it up. That's the trouble. I never was much at walking, or running either, for that matter."

"Walking? You don't need to walk when you go riding."

Then the storm burst.

"Walking! I guess you never rode a broncho, did you? Well, you want to try that one, and you'll learn something. The first day I went out on him he carried me as far as the bridge in the woods. Then he dumped me off in the mud. I chased him two miles, then I gave it up and walked home. The next day he took me half a mile further before he set me down. I went to the stable and kicked about it. The man asked me if I went riding for my health. I told him yes. He said that was just the horse I wanted and that he kept him specially for that purpose. Seventeen fat men had offered to buy him, but he wanted to be generous and give every one a chance.

He leaned his head on his hand wearily.

"I'll have to give it up, I guess. Here I've been crawling in the back door of this hotel for four days. It cost me $1 a day to have my clothes cleaned, and it'll take me a year to recuperate. It's no use. I'm willing to stay fat if them blisters on my feet will only let up. Come inside and let me spend my last night in wild hilarity.—New York Herald.

At a reception last night in Unity church to the visiting delegates to the parliament of religions, the Rev. Robert Collyer told a story which runs as follows:

"A farmer met a parson and said to him: 'I remember a sermon you preached twenty years ago.' 'Indeed,' replied the parson, 'and what was the text?' 'I don't remember the text, but the sermon remains in my mind.' 'And pray what then was the substance of the sermon?' 'Well, I can scarcely word it properly, but it amounted to this—that theology is not religion by a —— sight.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Little Dick—"Did you have a good time in the country?"

Little Johnny—"No; mos' died. We boarded at a farm house."

"Wasn't it nice?"

"Yes, nice 'nough; but on the train an old lady gave me a cent, and when we got to the farm I found out there wasn't a store within twenty miles."

Save the small paper bags carefully which groceries come in; they are useful in many ways. Slip the hand in one when you black the stove, and you will not soil it. When flies abound slip them over the clean lamp chimneys during the day. After fruit is canned draw them over the can and label them plainly; the action of the light causes more fruit to spoil than any other one thing.

My Joe and I.

We met as other men have met
My Joe and I—
'Twas all by chance, or luck, and yet,
I can't say why,
But somehow when I think it out
There seems to be no room for doubt,
That fate decreed we should be friends—
My Joe and I.

No sooner had we clasped each hand—
My Joe and I—
Than something I can't understand,
Nor question why,
Told me his heart was stanch and true,
Though I might search it through and through
I found no one could come between
My Joe and I.

And that is why we strive together—
My Joe and I—
In dark, or rain, or bitter weather,
To pass it by,
To make the crooked way seem straight,
And thank our lucky stars and fate
That brought and kept us side by side—
My Joe and I.

—Albert H. Hardy.

A PRAIRIE VALENTINE.

Spring came early on the Kansas prairie, and although February was not half gone, Bertha wore no wraps, and kicked her shoes gayly through the brown grasses as she returned from the little schoolhouse to her equally small home.

"The teacher is awful good to me," she thought; and she looked back to see if the schoolhouse was still in sight.

The leader of the school, Annie Marsh, was "good" to all her pupils, but particularly to Bertha, whose wistful eyes and eagerness to learn had won her heart. Annie, like her favorite, was comparatively a stranger there. She had taken up a government claim, and was teaching school while she lived out the prescribed time of residence.

"Oh, Bertha, hurry!" It was the mother standing beside the settler's cabin, waving a yellow envelope.

"It's a telegram!" she excitedly cried as the daughter drew near. "The boy said it was important, but he had twenty miles back to go, and didn't stay to find Miss Marsh. You'll have to take it to her; it's from her folks somewhere."

Quickly the willing feet returned over the path, leading to the little cabin of the schoolmistress.

Annie read the message with a hard, white face, and then she said, "It's from home. My mother is very ill, and I must go."

"Shall I send father over with a team?"

"No, I'll go home with you."

She did, and two hours later Bertha's father was driving the teacher to the station, a score of miles away.

There was a neighborhood festival at the church on the prairie a week later, but Bertha would not go. She would not tell why, but declared she did not wish to go, and with a light heart watched father, mother, and brother Clive drive away.

When they were a moving speck on the level plain, she went to the barn to see if the horses were all right, and then going to the cabin prepared for a day of unalloyed happiness. It was so warm that she needed no fire, and she took from a hiding-place a green-covered book, and propped herself up in the big rocking-chair to read. It was "David Copperfield," one of a little armful of volumes the teacher had loaned her, and hour after hour she lived the life of the famed struggler against fate.

At last, when the sun had fallen half way down in the west, she began to get things mixed. Was the sound that hummed in her ears the blowing of the prairie winds, or the rolling of the waters where Steerforth was preparing for his fatal plunge? She pondered over it a while, and nodded—nodded—nodded.

Suddenly voices just outside aroused her. Peeping through the thin muslin curtains, she saw two wide-hatted men on horseback just dismounting at the well to water their ponies.

"Of course it's a mighty good one hundred and sixty acres of land," drawled one, as if in answer to something his companion had said.

"And also mighty easy to get."

"But the girl has lived on it long enough to take it with a government title, hasn't she?"

"Yes, lived there long enough; but she ain't plowed enough land. There must be forty acres broke, and she ain't got more than thirty-seven. The plow broke down or something, and the job was never finished."

"So the girl ain't there?"

"No, she's closed school and gone to her folks somewhere."

Bertha's heart gave a quick leap.

"Then the claim is ours. The time for the plowing expires to-day. We'll be on hand early in the morning and finish the job for her, eh?"

The man gave his long whip a crack, and the horses started on a canter, rapidly taking the two conspirators away.

The stout-hearted listener's cheek burned with indignation. She knew the men meant the teacher's claim. How could she save it?

A sudden determination came to her. Putting on her heavy cloak, she ran to the barn. The big horses were eating quietly in their stalls. Although midwinter, the sulky plow was standing by, many of the farmers, including her father, having been plowing during the past few days. She knew how to manage the implement, having often filled the driver's seat for her father.

She led out the horses, and mounting an overturned barrel, lifted the heavy harness to their backs, and in a moment was driving them on a slow trot across the thick-sodded prairie toward the teacher's claim. It was only mid-afternoon, and as she set the plow into the soft earth she felt sure she could accomplish her task before sunset.

Three acres! A quick calculation told her that it meant but sixteen feet across the long field reaching from side to side of the farm. The government does not require very careful plowing, and she set the plow at its widest limit, touched the eager horses with the whip, and was off.

Back and forth, to and fro, they went; the dark chocolate-colored furrow rolled like a ribbon from the ploughshare, and as the work went on the intrepid driver felt an honest pride in her accomplishment, as well as pleasure in being able to save her teacher's claim. It was sunset, and there was one more furrow necessary. Bravely she set out on it, and the now sweaty horses made the sulky plow fairly whiz on its way across the plain. As they turned at the lower end of the claim and started back the driver saw shadowy forms gathering near the starting-place. For a moment she was frightened. Alone on the prairie, she feared it might be the men whose conversation she had overheard. Then she noticed that there was a wagon—yes and a buggy, and she pushed on faster than ever. A good farmer would hardly have indorsed the plowing she did on that trip, but there was no disposition to criticize it.

As she came nearer the end of the furrow she saw that only were there two vehicles, but a half-dozen, and her father was waiting to lift her down from her seat.

"Well, little girl," said he, with a puzzled look, "what does this mean?"

"I was just finishing my work. That makes the forty acres, and the teacher's claim is hers."

"I don't understand."

Rapidly she told him the events of the afternoon, and pointed with a little pride at the freshly plowed earth.

"Bravo!" called one of the crowd of settlers that had gathered about. "That's what I call grit!"

"Tell you what," the sturdy young settler went on, "let's fix up a paper certifying to the number of acres and all sign it, so that the teacher can get her deed without any bother."

No quicker said than done, and in a moment the men and women were affixing their rude signatures to the few lines of writing.

"Do you know what this day is?" asked the settler again. "It's the 14th of February—it's Valentine's Day. If the te

FRIDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 3, 1893.

GOV. RUSSELL has been such a trump card for the Democrats in the last three campaigns that they are hoping the magic of the name will bring them many votes this year.

EASTERN HAMPDEN may safely be counted on to roll up a good big vote for Mr. Brainerd for county commissioner, and the rest of the county ought to follow suit. Mr. Brainerd is a surveyor, has served his town as selectman for several years, is now deputy sheriff and special commissioner, and has acted as full commissioner since the death of Mr. Root. "He's all right," and he will do good work if elected, as we look to see him.

IT is urged in some quarters that Massachusetts ought to testify to her appreciation of President Cleveland's firm stand for unconditional repeal of the silver purchase law by electing the Democratic ticket next week. But the repeal bill had more Republican than Democratic votes in the Senate, and could not have passed that body but for them. It would seem, therefore, that their patriotic action should be ratified by a rousing Republican victory in the Old Bay State.

THE Democrats are hoping that the farmers will give their candidate for governor quite a lift next week because he is well known to them as a former secretary of the board of agriculture and is interested in them. But the farmers' interests are not likely to suffer at the governor's hands, whoever he may be. It is to the Legislature that the farmers must look for legislation, and it is to the election of the right sort of legislators that the farmers need to give their particular attention.

THERE is a good chance for the farmers to put in some solid work for the Republican candidate for councilor in the 8th district, Alvan Barrus of Goshen. Here is one of their own number, a strong and capable man, nominated for a responsible office, and if the grangers want a hand in the government here is their chance, and they should not throw it away by voting for the Democratic candidate, a bright Chicopee lawyer, who expects to draw many Republican votes because of his popularity.

THE state campaign closes this week, and politicians and people will have a little breathing spell before going to the polls next Tuesday to cast their ballots. The campaign has been short, for which we are all thankful, and not very exciting. state affairs being wholly ignored in view of the overshadowing interest in the national issues of the day. The Republicans are quite confident that victory will perch upon their banners, and the Democrats realize that the prevailing depression in business weighs them down almost beyond hope.

FOR representative to the General Court the Republicans of the 10th district have nominated a candidate who should command the full party support, and more too. Mr. Loomis of Palmer is very well known in the district, having been in business here for many years. He is one of our substantial citizens, quiet and unobtrusive, but conversant with public affairs and possessed of a mind of his own. He has done good service as selectman of the town for several terms, and is well qualified for equally good service under the gilded dome at Boston. The vote in this district is often close, but there should be no question about his election by a good substantial plurality.

THE fact that James R. Wells, the Republican nominee for register of deeds for Hampden county, has been in the office for twenty years, giving faithful and acceptable service, ought to assure his election beyond question. For the past five years he has practically had charge of the office, and when the late register, James E. Russell, died, he was appointed by the county commissioners to fill out the balance of the term. Mr. Russell was a Democrat, but nobody ever thought of his politics. It has long been the rule to continue these county officers in office as long as they discharged their duties acceptably, and Mr. Wells is in all fairness entitled to an election to the office he has served in so long and so well.

THE World's Fair is over, having been officially closed on Monday. It was designed to make the last day a festal occasion, but the shooting of Mayor Carter Harrison of Chicago Saturday evening by a lunatic named Patrick Eugene Pendergast turned the occasion into one of mourning, and all the proposed ceremonies were abandoned. The Fair has been a wonderful success, and it will pass into history as the most complete, beautiful and marvelous exhibition ever known. The exposition company has paid out over $30,000,00 since its organization, but after every debt is paid there will remain at least $1,000,000 for distribution among the stockholders. There have been 21,477,212 paid admissions to the Fair, and 2,052,188 admissions on passes.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S purpose in calling Congress together has been accomplished at last, and the government has stopped its purchase of silver. It has taken three months to bring it about, and it had begun to look as though the Senate would let the matter drift along till doomsday without coming to a vote. But even that august body could not forever withstand the growing pressure of public opinion, and the Voorhees substitute for the House repeal bill was passed Monday afternoon by a vote of 43 to 32. On Wednesday the House concurred in the Senate substitute in short order, and the bill was taken to the White House and promptly signed by the president. The silver men are very sore over the repeal, but everybody else rejoices that the threatened danger of bringing the country to a silver basis is averted, and the folly of the government's buying and storing away vast quantities of silver in its vaults simply to enrich the silver mine owners has come to an end.

PALMER NEWS.

OUR NEW INDUSTRY.

Work Commenced this Week at the Factory of the Rogers Osgood Hat Co.

At 12 o'clock Wednesday noon the ears of the residents of Palmer were greeted by the welcome sound of the steam gong upon the factory of the Rogers Osgood Hat Co., manufacturers of straw goods. It betokened the addition of another industry to our village.

Last fall a movement was started to add, if possible, to the business of the village. It was ascertained that Rogers & Osgood Co. of Barre were willing to transfer their straw hat works to this place. A stock company was organized with a capital of $20,000. The officers of the company are as follows: President, J. Andrew Rogers; vice president, W. H. Osgood; treasurer, C. B. Fiske; superintendent, Jesse A. Rogers; directors, J. Andrew Rogers, W. H. Osgood, Jesse A. Rogers, James B. Shaw and Dr. G. H. Wilkins. Palmer capital to the amount of about $5000 was invested in the new concern. With this latter sum the property on Commercial street, so long known as the Goddard hat shop, was purchased. The Rogers & Osgood Co. took upon themselves the necessary repairs and erection of new buildings, which cost about $5000 more.

The plant as it now stands is thought to be one of the best equipped straw goods factories in the state, being compact and convenient. It is situated on the west side of Commercial street just beyond the tracks of the Boston & Albany and New London Northern roads. A switch track from the latter road is laid to the packing room door, making as fine shipping facilities as are found anywhere.

The main building is built of brick, 70 x 40 feet, three stories, with a two-story wing on the south side, 20 by 30 feet. Entering the door the machine shop is found on the lower floor of the first-mentioned wing. This is furnished with lathes, planers. and all the equipments of a first-class machine shop. In the second story of the same wing is found the office. The interior fittings are of hard pine. Commodious desk room is furnished and the office is lighted by electricity. On the first floor of the main part is the press room, on the second is the trimming room and on the third the sewing hall.

To the west of the brick building and connected by means of bridges is a wooden building 120 by 60 feet, three stories. The first floor of this is used entirely for storage purposes, the second is divided between a sizing and dry room, 24 by 60 feet, and storage rooms, the third has a 60 by 65 foot store room for the finished goods, a packing room 60 by 40 feet, and a brimming room, 60 by 25 feet. Built out from the lower floor of this building is a bleachery and dye house, 30 by 48 feet, and a smoke house 15 by 60 feet. In the yard close by the smoke house are built racks for the purpose of airing and drying the braid while in the process of bleaching.

The box shop is situated 65 feet from the main buidling. It is 24 by 40 feet, two stories. The lower floor is devoted to the preparation of the box lumber and the upper floor is the nailing room. The power is brought from the factory by means of a wire rope. The upper floor is connected with the packing room by a bridge over which the boxes are carried.

The boiler house and engine room is 30 by 24 feet, built of brick and attached to the main building. It contains an 80 horse power boiler. The power for the factory is furnished by two engines, one of 25 horse and the other eight horse power. A Knowles steam pump furnishes water for use in case of fire. The water is supplied from the mains of the Palmer Water Co.

The goods made by the company are of the middle and lower grades of straw goods for men, boys, misses and children. Quite a number of orders are already on hand, and work was commenced this week upon regular orders. The selling agents for the company are Connett, Read & Co., 17 to 23 Waverly place New York, who handle the entire output of the factory.

In the hiring of the help preference will be given to Palmer people. Only a few of the former employes of the factory at Barre are employed, and those have moved to this place.

The president of the company, J. Andrew Rogers, commenced in the straw goods business in Barre in the year 1842 in the firm of Desper, Rogers & Co. Jesse A. Rogers entered the firm in 1878. Mr. Desper's interest was purchased by W. H. Osgood in 1888.

The buildings were originally built by S. N. Davis in 1869 and were used for a straw hat factory under the name of the Hampden hat mill. In 1872 the business was purchased by R. L. Goddard, who conducted it successfully for a number of years. The buildings have since then been occupied a part of the time by the Betts Wire Fencing Co. and the Massasoit WorstedCo.

SAFE CRACKERS AT WORK.

W. E. Stone's Store Entered and the Safe Blown Open.

The general store of W. E. Stone in Lawrence block was entered by burglars early Wednesday morning and the safe was blown open. What money there was in the safe, which fortunately was only about $12 in silver, was taken. Entrance to the store was effected by prying open the front door, evidently with a chisel. The burglars were heard from the time they entered the store by Miss Canfield, the hair dresser, who has rooms on the floor above in the same block and who is the only person who sleeps in the building. She says they came in about 12 o'clock. The safe, which stands in a corner behind a counter and a desk, is of the ordinary pattern with a combination lock. Three holes were drilled in the front plate of the door. The first hole was made below and to the right of the knob, and was planned to strike the open space back of the combination. It proved to be a little too low so another was drilled about an inch higher. The third hole was made above the knob. Powder was then put in and the explosion blew off the door. Miss Canfield was too badly frightened to attempt to give an alarm while the men were in the store, but after the explosion, which was about 1.15 a. m., she went out and notified William Merriam, who called other officers, and a search was made. The birds had flown and no clue could be discovered. The force of the explosion blew out three large panes of glass in the front windows and cracked another. Only one pane was broken in a window about five feet from the safe, but the window sill was blackened by the exploding powder and splintered where it was struck by the heavy door after the explosion. The burglars were evidently professionals, but they received poor compensation for their labors. No goods have been missed from the store, and the safe is practically ruined. A monkey wrench, three chisels and a bit brace are missing from the shop of William Brooks in the building with Tuthill's blacksmith shop. The bit brace and two of the chisels were found in the store. A loaded revolver, which lay in one of the compartments of the safe, was found lying on the floor near the safe, where it had evidently been placed by the burglars. A man, who looked and acted suspiciousiy, was seen in the store the day before. He made some small purchase and went out. A man who lives a little way out of the village said the next morning that he passed three men in a team the night before who kept driving back and forth on the stretch of road beyond the cider mill. He tried to pick up a race with them, but they would not pay any attention to him. He saw them between 10.30 and 11 o'clock and he thinks they may be the burglars.

The Hunt.

The much talked of hunt occured yesterday. The weather was all that could be desired by the hunters, and the enterprising members of each side started out the night before in quest of 'coons and several were brought in. The score of the winning side, captained by Fred Adams, was 10,425 points, and that of the other side, Silas Keith captain, was 6205, leaving Adams the winner by 4220 points. The largest individual score was made by H. C. Norcross of Monson, 2514; second by C. L. Holden of Bondsville, 1020; third by Charles E. Fuller of Palmer 900. Following is a list of the members and a list of points scored by the various kinds of game:

CAPTAIN, FRED ADAMS.—H. C. Norcross, Mr. Booth, C. L. Holden, F. Allen of Brimfield, W. Holland, R. Crossman, L. Parkhurst, P. Shearer, F. Fenton, W. Blodgett, H. L. Holden, G. Holden, E. S. Bryant, M. Hopkins, E. Richards, C. A. LeGro, F. A. Cotton, F. Hovey, G. Shaw, C. D. Holbrook, L. Conant, C. H. Banister, E. B. Taylor, E. S. Brooks, A. E. Fitch, H. W. McGregory, B. F. Morse, J. F. Fenton, J. Barrett, M. S. French, E. Shaw, W. Shaw, R. B. Francis, R. J. Henry, H. N. Sedgwick, L. H. Washburn, J. E. Kempton, J. W. French, J. Smith, C. Burns, J. Dawson, C. E. Fuller.

CAPTAIN, SILAS KEITH.—F. O. Munger, W. J. Keith, H. Thompson, E. Gibson, R. Bond, H. P. Holden, F. Gunn, G. W. Lyman, W. H. Brainerd, C. Brainerd, J. H. Holbrook, G. A. Bills, F. U. Wetmore, W. G. Fay, T. Blanchard, H. A. Northrop, F. N. Carpenter, E. Hastings, C. E. Fish, W. A. Barnes, W. Richardson, J. Lyman, C. Robinson, D. H. Brown, E. E. Brooks, W. W. Leach, D. Buskey, E. R. Pierce, D. F. Holden, E. S. Rollins, C. W. Johnson, C. Keith, C. K. Gamwell, A. J. Northrop, W. H. Stowe, F. J. Wassum, F. Harrison, C. Gardner, Chester Cross, J. H. Dewey, F. E. Cady, P. C. Wellman, W. H. Bennett, H. H. Eayrs, M. Handy.

SCHEDULE OF POINTS.—Gray squirrel 15, red squirrel 25, chipmunk 35, fox 200, rabbit 20, otter 200, woodchuck 100, weasel 100, raccoon 200, hare 25, partridge 5, eagle 300, hawk 200, duck 35, blackbird 5, kingfisher 100, heron 50, snipe 25, mud hen 10, wild pigeon 25, loon 100, woodcock 5, meadow lark 35, crow 200, bluejay 50, red-headed woodpecker 25, wakeup 5, crane 100, wild geese 200, owl 150, sap sucker 5, English sparrow 5.

GAME COMMITTEE.—G. A. Bills, E. B. Taylor, C. E. Fuller, W. Keith, Silas Keith and Fred Adams.

The supper will be held at the Converse House next Tuesday evening, and a dance at the opera house will follow. Any who were not members of the hunt can have supper by paying 50 cents. Dancing tickets will be sold to outsiders for $1. Music will be furnished by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Springfield, with Messrs. Wright and Deitz as prompters.

County Commissioner Complications.

Complications of interest to our local candidate may arise from the fact that Holyoke is the residing place of candidates for both the offices of commissioner and special commissioner. The law says that not more than one of the county commissioners or special commissioners shall be chosen from the same city or town. The Democratic nominee for commissioner is J. M. Clark of Holyoke and one Republican nominee for special commissioner is E. A. Ellsworth of the same city. The Springfield Republican has the possible results figured out as follows:

If on the face of the returns both Mr. Clark and Mr. Ellsworth are elected, their vote must be compared with each other, and the one having the smaller is disqualified. So it is possible for Mr. Clark to receive more votes than his opponent, H. Brainerd of Palmer, and still be dropped in favor of the latter. This will have to be done if Ellsworth receives more votes than Daniel Dunn of Chicopee Falls, Democratic candidate for special commissioner, and also more than Mr. Clark, Clark beating Brainerd. Supposing, for instance, Mr. Clark receives one more vote in the county than Mr. Brainerd, and Mr. Ellsworth not only defeats Dunn, but receives one more vote than Clark, then Clark is dropped and Brainerd declared elected. Another combination possible is that Clark may beat Brainerd, and Ellsworth beat Dunn, and yet Dunn be declared elected over Ellsworth. This will be the result in case Clark's vote is greater than Ellsworth's.

The Democratic Rally.

The first and only rally of the campaign so far was held by the Democrats in the opera house last evening. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the orators of the evening. Many ladies occupied seats in the gallery. The meeting was presided over by T. W. Kenefick, who introduced as the first speaker William W. McClench of Chicopee, councilor in the eighth district. The speaker devoted his time to praises of the local candidates of the party. Next came Louis Blumenthal of New York, who dealt with the national issues. Then Frank K. Foster of Boston took a turn at the wheel. His remarks were about Mr. Greenhalge and state topics. The last speaker of the evening was A. M. Copeland of Springfield, Democratic candidate for senator in the first Hampden district. The Columbian Band of Thorndike discoursed music, and received many compliments for the able manner in which it executed several difficult selections. A special train brought down a good number of the Thorndike constituency. Quite a number also were present from Monson.

Trouble with Italy.

The customary peace and quiet of this village was marred Tuesday afternoon by a fracas between a man from Bondsville and the proprietor of the fruit stand near the Nassowanno House. The man from Bondsville made a small purchase at the stand, for which he was charged five cents by the party in charge. The proprietor came up and demanded ten cents in payment of the bill. This change in the scale of prices aroused the ire of the buyer and a quarrel ensued. Soon the Bondsville man saw a good opportunity to get in a telling blow on the eye of the fruit dealer, which he did to a very good advantage. The combatants were separated by the bystanders. Soon the Italian appeared on the scene again, this time armed with a knife. He at once started after some Bondsville gore, chasing the other man up the street. The man who was being chased picked up a large stone and the Italian gave in. Then the man went to buy ammunition for a revolver he had, but an officer thought it would be safer in his possession, so he gave it up.

Fourth Attempt at Train Wrecking.

Another obstruction was found on the track of the New London Northern road by a north bound freight last night. It was near where the three other attempts at wrecking were made. It puzzles the officials of the road to tell whether this obstruction, which was only an old, rotten fence post, was put on the track with intent to damage a train or out of pure devilry with intent to bother the employes. All the other obstructions have been placed on the track after dark, but this was put on between the time of the 5 o'clock passenger train and the freight which came in about 5.40. The crew of the latter reported what they had struck and officers were at once sent to the place. No clue was found to the perpetrators of the deed.

Hotel Guests Robbed.

A burglar, probably a hotel sneak thief, took a look through the Converse House Wednesday morning. As the result of his investigations two of the boarders are mourning the loss of three gold watches and chains worth between $300 and $400. There is no definite clue to the thief, but suspicion points to a person who stopped at the hotel late Tuesday night and went away Wednesday. In the morning after the men who were robbed had gone out he had a good chance to go through the rooms.

Revere Chapter, Eastern Star, was officially visited Wednesday evening by District Deputy Grand Matron Barrett of Springfield and Grand Matron Ewing of the grand chapter of Masssachusetts.

Several Masons from this town, who are members of the Springfield Commandery, Knights Templar, attended the special dedicatory exercises held by the commandery at the new Masonic temple Monday evening.

A shipment of 175 barrels of apples was made from the Boston and Albany freight depot Wednesday to Chicago parties. There have been in all nearly 1000 barrels shipped from here, the majority going to Worcester.

Some of our merchants, who wish to guard against a possible attempt to blow open their safes, are leaving them unlocked at night with a notice on the door to that effect, or write out the combination and place that on the door.

Some miscreants threw several stones through the windows of J. M. Converse's residence last week Thursday night. The occupants of the house did not hear the breaking of the glass, but found the stones on the floor next morning.

A complete list of all the candidates to be voted for in the county of Hampden at the election next Tuesday, together with the proposed amendment to the constitution to be submitted to vote at the same time, will be found in our advertising columns.

At the Baptist church Sabbath morning the pastor will preach upon the "Resurrection of the Dead." At 6 o'clock there will be a meeting for men only. The subject of the evening service at 7 o'clock will be "The Resurrection, a Motive for Repentance."

The Woronoco Club met with Miss Mabel Smith on Thorndike street Tuesday evening. Whist was played until about 10 o'clock, after which the evening was spent in singing and Hallowe'en games. The party broke up about 1 o'clock, after all had spent a very pleasant evening.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church held a social Wednesday afternoon and evening in the church parlors. Tea was served by the following ladies: Mrs. C. M. Brainerd, Mrs. L. E. Child, Mrs. E. Hastings, Mrs. William Holbrook, Mrs. J. King and Mrs. J. H. Tuthill. The attendance was good and all present had a very enjoyable time.

George Dimmick, the driver of the Wales and Palmer stage line, commenced running on the winter schedule Wednesday, which is as follows: Leave Wales at 7 a. m., Brimfield at 8 a. m., except Monday morning, when he leaves Wales at 5.30 a. m., and Brimfield at 6.30 a. m. Returning leaves Palmer at 4.30 p. m., except Saturday nights, when he leaves at 5.30 p. m.

J. C. Moody, who is to open an evening school in Eager's block the 14th, has on exhibition in the window of E. A. Buck & Co's store several specimens of penmanship showing marked improvement by scholars under his instruction. He also will teach book keeping, etc. All who desire to unite with the school should meet Mr. Moody at Eager's block next Tuesday or Thursday evening.

A train on the Boston and Albany road leaving Springfield about 11 o'clock in the evening would be very much appreciated by the people along the line, certainly as far as Brookfield. As the trains are run at present if there is anything in Springfield that our people wish to attend they have to remain in the city over night, as no means of returning is afforded. Such a train, if put on, would doubtless receive a good patronage.

The Tuesday evening Bible class of St. Paul's Universalist church will discuss the following questions at the meeting next Tuesday evening: "If men are totally depraved by nature, must not children be so likewise?" "If children be totally depraved, is it true that 'of such are the kingdom of heaven'?" Mark x:14. "Men are to be washed from their sins. If they are totally depraved, what is there to wash?"

Silas Collis, the veteran 'coon hunter of Bondsville, is authority for the statement that this is a good season for 'coons. In support of the statement he shows eight 'coons that were captured by Byron Thayer and himself as the result of hunting Tuesday and Wednesday nights. In six nights they have captured 19 'coons. If any of the members of the Arcanum hunt can show a better record than this Mr. Collis is willing to try once more to hold up his end of the record.

Rev. Herbert F. Moulton, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, will begin next week a short series of Thursday evening talks on "Hindrances to religious progress, especially among the unchurched." Among the special subjects for these services will be the following: "Christian discourtesy—a union not a union." "Denominational bigotry." "Religious profession not possession." Much interest is show in these services, as the unusual good attendance signifies.

The following business of interest to people in this vicinity was transacted at the probate court in Springfield yesterday: Administration granted in the estate of John C. Root, late of Hampden, Sumner Smith administrator. Will of Mary W. Wheeler, late of Brimfield, Jane C. Rathburn and Caroline S. Townsend executrices, was approved. An affidavit of notice of appointment in the estate of Sullivan U. Stanton, late of Hampden. Account was filed in the estate of Ann M. Underwood, late of Monson.

District Attorney Gardner had a very unceremonious visit from two men Monday evening, who were quite under the influence of the ardent. Mrs. Gardner, who was alone in the parlor at the time when they entered, was badly frightened. She summoned help and the men were put out. They were too drunk to attempt any violence to the inmates of the house, and also were unable to explain why they came in or what they wanted. Later Officer Alexander found them and they were arrested and put in the care of Landlord Allen. The next morning their heads were clear enough so they could tell their names, which were Fielder and Robert Whitehouse of Ashford, Ct. They received sentences for drunkenness before the court.

The following statement of the receipts and expenditures of the presentation of the comic opera "Wanita," for the benefit of the Young Men's Library Association, is published by request of the local manager, Mrs. H. E. Huntley:

|---|---|
| For sale of tickets | $290.05 |
| One-half of gross receipts to Messrs. Baldwin | $145.02 |
| Rent of opera house | 50.00 |
| Tickets | 2.00 |
| Checks | 1.50 |
| Tuning piano | 3.75 |
| Mr. Taylor, posting bills | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Weld, services as pianist | 10.00 |
| H. H. Paine, selling tickets | 1.00 |
| S. H. Brown, moving piano | 3.00 |
| Hire of teams from Three Rivers | 9.00 |
| B. F. Emory, for team | 3.00 |
| J. F. Loftus, for team | 3.25 |
| G. D. Moores, for team | 8.75 |
| Mrs. Rufus Flynt, for services | 15.00 |
| T. J. Clifford, rent of hall for rehearsals | 3.00 |
| Cash on hand to balance | 50.81 |
| | $290.05 |

From the above balance there will have to be deducted about $10 for the use of books, which will leave some $40 which will be turned over to the Young Men's Library Association for the purchase of new books.

State Primary School Notes.

The autumn vacation of one week begins to-night.

Mr and Mrs. E. G. Ward have returned from their vacation.

Dr. Prentiss, deputy inspector of institutions, visited the school Wednesday.

Rev. G. H. Krikorian of Galatia addressed the children last Sunday morning.

Dr. Charles P. Worcester, a member of the board of trustees, spent Tuesday night at the school.

Miss Porter has resigned, and left Tuesday for Haverhill, where she has been engaged to teach sewing in the public schools.

Yesterday, from early morn until the sun had disappeared behind the horizon, we were surrounded by a continuous cannonading of the light artillery used by the participants in the Royal Arcanum hunt. At times it seemed as if a real bombardment had been begun on the outskirts of the place, and at sunset when the fire appeared on Mount Bunyan it seemed to be in honor of our preservation and the quietness that once more reigned supreme.

District Court.

On Tuesday Fielder and Robert Whitehouse of Ashford, Ct., for drunkenness were each given three months in the house of correction. Thomas Beveridge and James Mahoney pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and were given a year at the state farm at Bridgewater. Not being satisfied to be supported by the state for the coming year they took an appeal to the superior court, and were taken to Springfield jail. After they found they would have to stay in jail until the December term of the court, and then would probably receive the same sentence, they wanted to withdraw the appeal, so were brought back to this court Wednesday morning. With them came George White, who took an appeal from a like sentence the 25th ult. Wednesday morning John Carroll of California was given a year on the state farm at Bridgewater for vagrancy.——This morning Jerry Kelliher of New Braintree was charged with drunkenness and disturbing the peace in Thorndike. He was fined $10 for drunkenness and $5 for disturbing the peace. Papers were issued against George Austin of Three Rivers for larceny and the case will be heard Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Mary Bradley is entertaining relatives from New York.

Thomas Lines is to build a new shed on land adjoining his dwelling house.

Mrs. Charles Clark of Springfield was in town Wednesday, visiting friends.

Hallowe'en parties were held at several places in the village Tuesday evening.

The mills are to add another eight hours to their schedule, making a total of 40 hours per week.

The Democratic rally at Palmer on Thursday evening attracted a large number from this place.

Mr. and Mrs. James Staples of Holyoke, formerly of this place, were in town Sunday, visiting friends.

The registrars added ten new names to the voters' list here last week, seven of whom are said to be for Russell and Carroll.

The recent rains have made plenty of water, and the rivers and brooks which have been nearly dry are now all filled to overflowing.

A party, consisting of T. J. Clifford, J. F. Loftus, J. J. Kelley and Wm. Moran, attended the joint debate between Williams and Walker at Worcester Tuesday night.

All the voters in this precinct will vote in Union Hall next Tuesday and not at the town house. Some went to the latter place last year, only to return after the polls had been closed.

Tickets are now on sale for the concert to be given by the band Thanksgiving eve, and can be had of any of the members. The band is fast increasing in membership, having now about twenty-three.

Rev. C. H. Hanks, formerly pastor of the Congregational church here, and later of Springfield, preached his farewell sermon in that city Sunday and left for Janesville, O., where he has accepted a call.

All Saints' day was observed in the usual manner at the Catholic church, masses being celebrated at 6 and 8 a. m. Wednesday. Thursday being All Souls' day, a high requiem mass was celebrated for deceased souls at 8 o'clock, and was largely attended.

THREE RIVERS.

Frank Allen spent Sunday with his family here.

Ed Shaw attended the hunt held by the Arcanum at Palmer yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Talbert spent Sunday at Hazardville, Ct., visiting friends.

Miss Hattie Williams of Lynn spent a part of this week with her mother, Mrs. Allen.

About eleven members of the A. O. U. W. attended the banquet at Springfield Tuesday evening.

Some special music will be given at the Sunday school exercises in the Union church next Sunday.

Mrs. Jene Sikes, who has been seriously ill for several months, has recovered sufficiently to be out once more.

Mrs. F. A. Ruggles has recently sold nearly 100 pinks, for which she received from 15 to 25 cents per plant.

It is said that Charles Bogue, who was formerly station agent here for the New London Northern road, has taken charge of the station at Barre.

A Hallowe'en party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Harper Tuesday evening. Palatable refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening spent by every one present. Miss Mary E. Cole was the fortunate one who found the ring.

Miss Lizzie B. Carrier, who was a teacher in the first intermediate department in the school here, has recently died in the general hospital at Boston, where she had been serving as nurse during the last two years. Her decease has caused keen sorrow to the many warm friends which she made during the years she spent in this place.

Two of the local teachers who had planned to attend the teachers' institute at Springfield last Saturday were sorely disappointed. It seems that they allowed themselves a rather short space of time to walk to the station from their respective places of abode, and as they reached the Palmer mill office the train whistled for the station, upon which signal the young ladies showed an intention to sprint; but although they failed to get the train, every one who saw the race frankly admits that at least two of our lady teachers would do credit to "Asahel's" lineage.

BONDSVILLE.

Thomas Moynahan, who has been quite sick, is improving.

Miss Nellie Shea of Westfield is visiting her sister, Mrs. P. Brown.

Miss Ora Parent of Smith College spent Sunday with her parents.

Miss Bertha Canterbury has been visiting her aunt in Monson this week.

The W. C. T. U. had their meeting at Mrs. Richard Russell's Thursday afternoon.

Ed Sharrett has gone to housekeeping in the tenement vacated by John Mansfield.

Miss Lottie Bray spent part of last week here visiting her friend, Miss Edith Hobson.

Mrs. Blake of Ware was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hobson a few days last week.

Harry Ryther holds the reins over a nice little French driving pony that he has just purchased.

Miss Jessie Ryther of Springfield, who was visiting her parents last week, has returned to that city.

Misses Nellie and Katie Kirk have moved their dressmaking rooms from the Landers block to their home.

The Ladies' Aid Society had a supper in the vestry of the M. E. church Wednesday night and netted about $9.50.

Sergeant Boyle and Private John Caven of Fort Hamilton were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Sullivan last week.

A. L. Squier of Monson, who has just recovered from a six-weeks' siege of sickness, was the guest of Mrs. E E. Ryther last week.

The teams of O. A. Parent and Dan Sullivan collided yesterday morning, smashing the wagon and harness of both, and scratching the horses some.

The Boston Duck Company's mills started Wednesday morning on full time, beginning work at 7 a. m. and running till 6 p. m. On Saturday they run till 4 o'clock. Every one seems happy to get work again on full time.

Dr. Henry M. Auger leaves soon to take a course at the New York City Post Graduate Medical College, and will return to town in the spring. Mrs. Auger will live in Palmer during the doctor's absence, conducting her piano classes as usual.

Union Temperance Meeting.

A very successful union temperance meeting was held at the M. E. church Monday evening. Five of the Protestant clergymen of the town were present. The remaining two, while in hearty sympathy with the movement, were unavoidably absent. The subject of the meeting was: "How may we best advance the cause of Temperance." Mr. Hale of Bondsville spoke of the necessity of union. He said "Though temperance people have differences of opinion, politically and otherwise, we should seek for common ground upon which we may work." He also spoke of the necessity of becoming aroused to the terribleness of the results of intemperance and the need of a remedy. Rev. Mr. Butler of Three Rivers suggested several ways of advancing the cause of temperance, among which he spoke of the educational. He urged all to read papers which tell the truth upon the subject. Rev. Mr. Frost of Palmer spoke upon personal example and conversion to God as among the best means. Rev. Mr. Weeks of Three Rivers favored using the subject in personal conversation. Rev. Mr. Jenkins of Palmer had for his watchword, "Quarantine." The meeting was then thrown open, and an opportunity for any who might believe the saloon to be a public blessing to speak; but there was no response. The choir of the church rendered several appropriate selections during the evening.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Nichols—Noble.

Herbert M. Noble and Louise M. Nichols were married at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs Warriner, at Silver street Tuesday by Rev. William H. Marble, in the presence of about twenty relatives and friends. The house was prettily decorated with ferns, and the ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreen and bitter-sweet. The bride wore a very handsome dress of cream satin trimmed with the same and pearl beading, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The numerous gifts included silver, china, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Noble are taking a carriage drive as far as Pittsfield, stopping at Westfield and Becket on their way, and are expected to return Saturday evening. They are to go to housekeeping in Noble's block on Main street.

Charles W. Carter, 71, of Springfield, who died Tuesday afternoon, was born in Belchertown, where he resided till he was 21.

The Belcher House is getting famous for driving parties who come to town to see the ruins of the late fire and take dinner at the hotel.

The library will be open hereafter only on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week, according to the winter arrangement of hours.

W. E. Bridgman will probably have to buy a new safe, as it is said to be inexpedient to try to repair the one the burglars smashed a few weeks since.

The old Peck place, owned by Edgar Lane, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The house was unoccupied for some time, and the fire was probably the work of an incendiary.

The social circle of the Congregational church has elected these officers: President, E. F. Towne; vice president, Mrs. H. D. Hoag; secretary, Miss Delia Stacy; treasurer, Mrs. Alice Kendall; supervisors, Mrs. Fannie Walker, Mrs. C. B. King, Miss Joan Ferry; directors, Mrs. Oliver Hyde, Mrs. Hazen, Mrs. Ansel Shaw, Mrs. Henry Hoag, Mrs. Alice Kendall.

Those who were burned out in the recent fire are getting into new quarters as fast as possible. J. R. Gould is doing business at his storehouse, which he has changed into a market. It is understood that he will move the building nearer the site of the old market, and enlarge it to meet the needs of his business. C. H. Snow is putting in stock at E. S. Bridgman's rooms, where the post office was kept. R. K. Shumway and W. F. Carter have leased the shops at the north end of Main street for painting and repairing carriages, wagons and sleighs. A. L. Fletcher's shoe shop will be at his house on Maple street until his room in Gould's building is ready.

WILBRAHAM.

Luren Potter has sold his farm in Longmeadow and has moved to his father's farm in this town.

The will of Algernon S. Flagg, late of Wilbraham, was filed last week. He leaves to his son, John S., of Boston, a quantity of dental tools and war relics. To the latter's children he gives $25 each. To his deceased daughter's children he gives $50 each. The rest of the estate is left to his wife, Nancy Maria Flagg. The will is dated November 26, 1892.

The senior class of Wesleyan academy held its reception in Club and Philo halls Saturday evening. M. E. Knight was host and Louise H. Evans hostess. During the evening a piano solo was rendered by J. B. Hall, a declamation by G. I. Parker and selections by the octet, composed of the following members: Misses Atkins, Hill, Herrick and Penfield and Messrs. Von Bast, Giddings, Knox and Barton.

A tea and reception were given at Wesleyan academy last Friday evening. After the tea was served in Rich Hall by Mrs. Russell a reception was given by the preceptress, Miss Wythe, to Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Smith, who are to move from Wilbraham and live in New York. Among the guests were Rev. Mr. Newhall and wife, Rev. Mr. Nichols and wife, Rev. Mr. White and members of the faculty. The parlors were decorated with autumn leaves and plants.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of Rev. M. S. Howard's ministry over the Congregational church in this place was observed this week with impressive ceremonies. The exercises commenced Sunday with an anniversary sermon by Mr. Howard in the morning, and a simple service of song in the evening. The church platform was prettily decorated for the occasion with potted geraniums and asters, while in front of the organ loft was displayed in white letters against a dark background of evergreens "1868–1893." The exercises were concluded Monday evening with a reception and social in the chapel of the church. An arch covered with evergreen and autumn leaves extended over the platform, and in the background was a bank of evergreens and plants. After the reception the company adjourned to the main part of the church, where the exercises were opened by an organ voluntary by Miss May Howard, followed by a selection by the choir. Rev. Nicholas Vanderpyle of Grace Union church of North Wilbraham congratulated Mr. Howard on his remarkable record, and Rev. Fayette Nichols of the Methodist church spoke on the present relation of the two churches. Miss Colburn of Wesleyan academy gave a vocal solo, and was followed by an address by William R. Sessions of Hampden, and H. M. Bliss presented Mr. Howard with a purse containing $75. Rev. Dr. Michael Burnham and Rev. R. W. Brokaw of Springfield extended their congratulations, and Rev. William R. Newell of Wesleyan academy spoke on the pleasant relations of the church and academy, and the influence Mr. Howard had exerted on school and scholars. Rev. L. H. Cone of Springfield next spoke on his long and friendly relations with Mr. Howard, and E. D. Howard, son of the pastor, responded, thanking the many friends for the kindness shown to the family.

WARE.

The ladies of Trinity Episcopal society will serve a supper at their church parlors next Thursday.

The Ware high school athletic club gave a fine entertainment Tuesday evening, followed by a social party. About $25 was added to the fund for a gymnasium for the school.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A vagrant who has been hanging around Brewer, Me., takes a portable tin kitchen with him wherever he goes and turns up his nose at any tea but his own brew, although he will eat some other cook's doughnuts if it becomes necessary.

President Cleveland has appointed the commission to the five civilized tribes of Indians which was authorized by the last Congress. Henry L. Dawes of Massachusetts will be chairman of the commission, with a salary of $5000 annually.

In accordance with the expressed wish of Lucy Stone her body will be cremated. Mrs. Stone had always been in favor of this method and she left careful instructions as to the disposal of her own body.

Right Rev. Louis de Goesbriand, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Burlington, Vt., and the oldest bishop in the United States, celebrated the 40th anniversary of his elevation to the bishopric Monday.

Rev. and Mrs. Edward Beecher celebrated the 64th anniversary of their marriage at their home in Brooklyn last Friday. Mr. Beecher is the second son of Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher and brother of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

Franklin Haven, who was president of the Merchants' National Bank of Boston for a continuous period of fifty years, during which time he was one of the most conspicuous figures in financial circles, died Tuesday at Beverly. He was about 90 years old.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

The wisest course in politics is to vote for the best man, and you cannot be mistaken. So, in the use of blood-purifiers, you can't be mistaken if you take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, because all parties agree that it is the best—the Superior Medicine. Try it this month.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., November, 1893.

A big break in prices.

The most unheard-of things.

Coats and capes for half; new and fashionable styles at that.

A broken market has broken the prices; and we are in a position to avail ourselves of the fact splendidly.

Last week brought us hundreds, the choice of two manufacturer's stocks, at wonderful prices.

We are selling these at about half price; some more than half price, some less. But what we chiefly want you to know is that every garment is marked so low that nobody can help buying, if she wants a coat or cape at all.

|---|---|
| Everything on 1st table | $ 2.50 |
| Everything on 2d table | 5.00 |
| Everything on 3d table | 7.50 |
| Everything on 4th table | 10.00 |
| Everything on 5th table | 15.00 |
| Everything on 6th table | 20.00 |

Instead of buying what you intended to pay for a garment this season, bring only half of it; for half in this sale will probably be enough. The stock is big enough to stand the raid of several days, and there is a fit for everybody.

The failures that have occurred in cloaks and clothing in New York the past week are the result in the main of the strained condition of things in the whole financial fabric this side of the ocean. Accidents that might be almost harmless in an easy time are striking the unprepared as a little wind tips over the lightsome boat when the mast already leans to the lee. It is not the failures that bode the worst. It is the steady, long continued fall in values that is undermining the foundations of the soundest institutions almost. That fall is still going on, and nobody knows when or where it is going to stop. It is a critical time.

More of the imported dress patterns at $5; but they will not stay.

A washout without the help of Pearline, is a wash that has been done with hard work. The clothes have been wrenched and twisted; the woman who washed them is tired out. Pearline does it better, and does it safely. It takes the dirt away too easily to call it work. It gets twice as much done; it gives half as much to do.

Beware of imitations. 232 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

In Private Practice.

Such strong proofs of the marvelous cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice lately through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam, N.Y., states where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease, ulceration of the stomach, complicated with sickness peculiar to her sex; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon kidneys, liver and blood, in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed. Druggists sell it.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

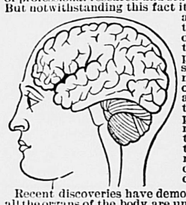
No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Something for Nothing.

Should anybody come to you and whisper "I've a scheme
For getting cash, hand over fist, an endless, golden stream,"
And add, "I'll let you in on this!" why, then, if you are wise,
You'll spurn the bait and never try to grab the golden prize;
For he's got a string tied to it,
Or, of course, he wouldn't do it;
He is very sure to work the razzle-dazzle after a while;
So distrust the souls who offer,
'Cause it's you, to fill your coffer,
For the men with gold to give away have all gone out of style.

When anybody smiles on you and warmly takes your hand,
And shows a depth of friendship it is hard to understand,
And doesn't seem to have a joy but what he'd have you share;
Now, such a heart may be all right, but—just the same, beware!
For he's got a string tied to it,
Or, perchance, he wouldn't do it.
You have got to pay the price—aught else is a delusive hope;
And here's a thought to ponder,
As about the world you wander—
Anything that's worth the having's always anchored to a rope.

THE COLONEL'S BABY.

The stage coach was nearly full.

Everybody knows what that means on a burning August afternoon, when the sun glows like a live coal in the fervid sky, and the dust rises up in dense columns around the slowly revolving wheels. All the passengers—poor, travel-worn mortals—were tired and cross; veils became an abomination, and the palm-leaf fan, wielded by the stout lady in the corner, was eyed with an envious glance by everybody else.

Old Mr. Thorne was fast asleep and snoring in his nook—probably wandering through green fields where dust never sullied the daisies and hot roads were unknown, in his peaceful slumbers. But Isabel and Minnie, his two daughters, could not sleep, and consequently reaped the full benefit of dust and sun and jolting wheels. Isabel's pretty forehead was corrugated with a regular unbecoming frown, and her red lip slightly elevated, while Minnie leaned out of the window, trying to be patient, but finding it very hard work, poor little thing!

"I wonder if we are almost there," she said at length, with a soft, weary laugh.

"Not within half a dozen miles," answered Isabel, pettishly. "Why on earth don't they have some more respectable conveyance than a lumbering stage coach to carry people to the Sulphur Springs!"

"It is not so very bad," sighed Minnie, meekly, "that is, it would not be if the weather were not quite so warm, and the dust were not so intolerably thick."

"No of course, not!" returned Isabel, ironically. "But you always were a poor, little, mean-spirited creature, Minnie, perpetually trying to make the best of things. Dear me! what are we stopped here for? Good gracious! if they are going to squeeze in any more passengers, I shall certainly faint away!"

Regardless, however, of Miss Thorne's countenance of despair, the driver ruthlessly opened the door, and their party was augmented by a tall, rather pleasant-looking gentleman, followed by a trim English nurse, who was carrying a rosy little babe with a nest of lace around its tiny head, and long sweeping skirts of white cambric, loaded with dainty embroidery.

The woman looked hesitatingly round. Isabel gave her draperies an extra toss over the cushions, and applied her cutglass vinaigrette to her nostrils, without seeming to notice the intruder. Minnie, however, whispering, "Move, Isabel—there is more room on the seat," compressed herself into as small a space as possible, and beckoned to the nurse to take the place thus vacated.

"Minnie, how can you be so absurd?" said Isabel, petulantly. "See how you are crushing my dress! O, dear me! if that child isn't beginning to cry! I hate babies!"

Old Thorne straightened himself into a sitting posture, and rubbed his heavy eyes, as the feeble wail of the little one fell on his ear.

"What's the matter, Bell?" he asked, sleepily.

"The matter? Why, a cross baby, to be sure. A pleasant ride we shall have to Rockade with that squalling in our ears the whole time? I do think babies ought to be kept at home!"

"Bell?" remonstrated Minnie, blushing to the very tips of her ears with keen mortification. But Isabel merely tossed her head without looking around, too ill-humored even to notice the soft pleader at her side. And still the incorrigible baby, after the fashion of all babies, kept up its piteous wail in spite of the nurse's attempts to soothe it and divert its attention. The woman looked in despair—the gentleman's brow flushed with annoyance.

"Let me take it," said Minnie, softly "I think I can quiet the little thing."

"I am afraid it will annoy you," said the gentleman opposite. "I am sorry——

"Oh, no, not a bit," said Minnie. "I am very fond of babies. Do give it to me, nurse!"

It was strange how soon the baby discovered that it was in loving hands. Gradually the little wrinkled forehead smoothed out like wax—slowly the tears ceased and the scarlet lip stopped its quiver as Minnie laid off the smothering cap, which all nurses seem to consider a necessary ingredient for the suffocation of infants, and smoothed the silky hair and whispered coaxing "baby-talk" in the little pink ears.

"Bless me, miss, I do believe you've got a spell about you!" ejaculated the relieved nurse as the little creature's dimples broke out into a smile, which revealed six infinitesimal teeth.

Yes, Minnie had a spell: but it was only the spell of sweet good-humor and sunny temper.

"I wonder who has arrived this season," said Isabel, as she arranged her rich, brown masses of hair before the mirror in her room at the chief hotel at Rochhale Springs. "They tell me every room is crowded. Laura Todd wrote me word that Col. Tremaine was to be here, and he alone is sufficient inducement to bring plenty of belles to the place?"

"Who is Col. Tremaine?" asked Minnie, who was patiently helping Isabel to braid the long, shining tresses.

"Why the wealthy widower who owns that superb place at Rivermore—don't you remember hearing of him! My dear, your memory is getting defective!"

"O, now I recollect," said Minnie. "But I should never have thought of him again!"

"Just like you!" exclaimed Mabel. "Minnie Thorne, I'll wager anything you'll marry a nobody yet!"

"Very likely," returned Minnie laughing. "Wealthy widowers don't trouble themselves with insignificant little mites like me. You may win the golden prize, however, Bell, if you choose to try."

"I certainly shall do my best," said Isabel, glancing at the mirror with a throb of conscious pride. Truly the face reflected there might give pleasure to the most fastidious, with its golden-brown braids and velvety black eyes, contrasted so royally by peach-blossom cheeks and lips like the scarlet heart of a pomegranate! While Minnie's blue eyes and smiling mouth had but the charm of truth and frankness to set off their delicate outlines.

"Hello, girls, what do you think?" exclaimed Mr. Thorne, thrusting his bald head into the room as his daughters were just preparing to descend to the dinner table, "Col. Tremaine is here—and he is none other than the tall gentleman who rode down in the stage coach with us!"

"Not the gentleman with the nurse and baby?" shrieked Isabel.

Mr. Thorne nodded.

"Nonsense, papa! Some one has been grossly deceiving you!" exclaimed Isabel. "Col. Tremaine, who owns the finest carriage and horses in the country, would never dream of traveling in a rusty old stage coach!"

"Not under ordinary circumstances, probably," returned her father; "but I was just introduced to the Colonel himself, below stairs, and in the course of conversation he mentioned that his own carriage broke down on the road, constraining him, however unwillingly, to inconvenience the passengers in our coach with his presence. And he warmly expressed his gratitude to my daughter for her kindness to his motherless infant. What do you think of that, Minnie, my puss?"

It would be difficult to tell which blushed deepest, Minnie or Isabel—but the rosy color was brought to their cheeks by widely different emotions.

The long, bright summer days crept on, with skies of blue, quivering light and sunsets of fire and incarnadine. Newport and Saratoga, Lake George and the Catskills succeeded one another on the traveling program of the Thornes, and, greatly to the annoyance of the "reigning belles" in general, Col. Tremaine accompanied the party wherever they went.

It was a lovely morning in early October, the woods all touched with frosty crimson, and the asters and marigolds waving their golden spears along the shores of the Niagara river, when Minnie Thorne came into her sister's room in the great hotel. She had been wandering through the leafy wilderness of Goat Island with Col. Tremaine, but that was not sufficient reason for the deep color that suffused her cheeks, nor was the moisture upon her eyelashes altogether the spray of Niagara.

"Isabel!" she whispered, laying her head on her sister's shoulder, "I am very, very happy. Col. Tremaine has asked me to become his wife!"

Isabel was naturally good-hearted, and she smoothed her own pang of keen disappointment with an effort, as she folded Minnie in her arms.

"I am glad of it, Minnie—you will make him an excellent little wife. But to think of his choosing a homespun body like you!"

The real clue to the matrimonial mystery was never discovered until one day, and long after the wedding, when Mrs. Tremaine was bending caressingly over her little step daughter, murmuring the cadences of a sweet cradle song. Suddenly a hand was laid on her shoulder. She startled and smiled to meet the tender light of her husband's eye.

"Sing on, Minnie," he said loudly. "I like to see you with Bessie on your lap. You were sitting just in that attitude with that same smile on your face, the day I fell in love with you."

"I don't know what you mean Charles."

"Don't you remember a warm day in August love, and a baby, that would cry in a crowded stage coach, and a blue-eyed little damsel who soothed the child and tended it, even though her haughty sister declared 'she hated babies!' I felt a sort of intuition that the blue-eyed lassie would make a tender mother to my little orphaned one, and then and there lost my heart! Dearest, I have never regretted the loss."

Isabel, sitting in the next room, by a honeysuckled-shaded bay window, heard every word of this little conversation—and she could not help thinking how slight had been the words and glances that had decided the destiny of her sister's life and her own.

If you throw a pebble into the glassy, bosom of the stillest lake, the circling ripples widen around it with constantly extending spheres, long, long after the stone is forgotten. And even so it is with every work and deed of our lives.—N. Y. News.

Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

THE FACT

That AYER'S Sarsaparilla CURES OTHERS of scrofulous diseases, eruptions, boils, eczema, liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, rheumatism and catarrh should be convincing that the same course of treatment WILL CURE YOU. All that has been said of the wonderful cures effected by the use of

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

During the past 50 years, truthfully applies to-day. It is, in every sense, The Superior Medicine. Its curative properties, strength, effect and flavor are always the same; and for whatever blood diseases AYER'S Sarsaparilla is taken, they yield to this treatment. When you ask for

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Don't be induced to purchase any of the worthless substitutes, which are mostly mixtures of the cheapest ingredients, contain no sarsaparilla, have no uniform standard of appearance, flavor, or effect, are blood purifiers in name only, and are offered to you because there is more profit in selling them. Take

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Cures others, will cure you

At Evening.

Upon the hills the wind is sharp and cold,
The sweet young grasses wither on the wold,
And we, O Lord, have wandered from thy fold
But evening brings us home.

Among the mists we stumbled, and the rocks
Where the brown lichen whitens, and the fox
Watches the straggler from the scattered flocks
But evening brings us home.

The sharp thorns prick us, and our tender feet
Are cut and bleeding and the lambs repeat
Their pitiful complaints,—oh, rest is sweet,
When evening brings us home.

We have been wounded by the hunter's darts.
Our eyes are heavy, and our hearts
Search for Thy coming,—when the light departs
At evening, bring us home.

The darkness gathers. Through the gloom no star
Rises to guide us. We have wandered far.
Without Thy lamp we know not where we are.
At evening bring us home.

The clouds are round us, and the snowdrifts thicken.
O Thou, dear Shepherd, leave us not to sicken
In the waste night,—our tardy footsteps quicken;
At evening bring us home.

HOW PEARLS EXPLODE.

Mr. Enoch Black, swollen with wealth and the pride of accumulation, invited a well authenticated English correspondent of his house to spend Sunday with him at his country seat at Ovington.

The well authenticated correspondent hesitated and suggested other engagements, as if he had not adroitly sought the bidding, and then accepted, thus giving to courtesy the zest of the compliment.

Now in their poorest days little Mrs. Black had never dared resist her husband, and prosperity had deadened her with the bludgeon of surprise.

So when Enoch Black announced that his particular friend, Mr. Chauncey Auckland of England, "an out and out swell and a hummer, too," would be down on the morrow, and that they must all "dust pretty lively, for he knew what was what, and no mistake," Mrs. Black faintly smiled—an expression, by the way, as devoid of comfort as a martyr's resignation.

Her husband understood this peculiarity through that intuition which is such an aid of martial infelicity. He straightway grew angry and sought an explosion in argument.

Craving a subject of common interest for disagreement, he found one in the absence of his daughter.

"Where's Emma?" he asked fiercely.

"I don't know," answered her mother, faintly still, but no longer smiling.

"And haven't I told you that you must watch over the child? Don't you know that she is young and foolish, and that designing people know it, and know, too, that in the course of nature she must inherit all the Black wealth? I shouldn't be surprised if she was walking with Frank Maxon this very moment."

"I shouldn't, either," and the faint smile reappeared.

"Well, I won't have it, that's flat. I said so once, and that settles it for all times. Oh! I know what you would say in your molish way. He's an old friend and industrious and talented and all the rest of the twaddle."

"But my daughter! My dollars! Oh, no! It's not a marriage we want; it's an alliance; that's the word; and when you see my friend Auckland, you will see where we can get one. At least, you would, if you could see anything beyond your nose. But no. I've talked and preached——"

And so on, brr—brr—brr—while poor Mrs. Black closed her eyes as one will before the incessant din of a mill. There was a light step, a graceful young arm thrown protectingly around the matron, and a clear, sweet voice cried: "Why, what's the matter, papa? Are you talking about me?"

There was a hidden flaw in Mr. Black's panoply of conceit which the candid glance of his daughter's eyes could always pierce. Somehow when she looked at him he felt unworthy of his parentage; she was so dainty, so charming, so beautiful, like the first bloom of the arbutus, while he was so rough, so course, so uncouth, like the sodden rock which it disdained.

He now twitched and shuffled his feet as he faltered: "We were only wondering where you were."

"Oh, I have been walking with Frank Maxon. He is a good comrade, don't you think?"

"Hum! Perhaps so, as a comrade."

"I wouldn't want him as a groom—I mean as a servant. He is amusing and clever and so fond of mamma."

"Well, well, my child, it's natural, I suppose, that you should remember your old playmate. But keep him in his place. These young sprigs are apt to be presumptious. You have a position to maintain, you know. What was that French motto you explained to me? Nob—nob——"

"Noblesse oblige?"

"Ah, that's it. That means, I take it, that the possession of stocks and debentures and obligations of all sorts confers a nobility. Now we are rich, remember, very rich."

"Rather, papa, that position imposes lofty principles and noble actions."

"Well, that's what I said, isn't it? Now, in my friend Auckland, who comes to-morrow, you will find one who is your equal in birth, culture and wealth. I know, therefore, that he will appeal to your—ur—higher nature, in a way that no paltry 'good comrade' could."

"We know that I shall hate him, don't we, mamma, dear?" said Emma.

The Black family, with their distinguished guest, lingered over the fruit and coffee of an elaborate dinner the next evening.

Enoch Black had broached his favorite topic of posession, and his friend was meeting him more half way.

"Oh, yes," said Auckland, "we have in our own family a parure of Golconda stones handed down from that historic ancestor of mine who in Elizabeth's time circumnavigated the globe and burned the fleet of Spanish galleons off Trafalgar. You may have come across the incident in your reading."

"Yes," said Mr. Black, who must have happened upon it in a newspaper then.

"It has been sacredly preserved as an heirloom ever since. Even in the days of Charles I., when our gold and silver ware proclaimed our loyalty from the melting pot, it was untouched. Even after the fine and sequestration resulting from Prince Charlie's rising it was spared by distress. And so, too, would the pearls have been, but unfortunately——"

"Pearls," interrupted Mr. Black. "I think I can match you there, or any one else for that matter. You must have heard of the great black pearl, so called, not only on account of its hue, but because it has been in our family many hundreds of years, since the day of—of—Richard the Conquerer, in fact."

"Oh! long before that, papa. Queen Guinevere wore it, you know," said Emma, laughingly.

"Very likely, my dear, very likely. I have a printed catalogue describing it of about that date. My ancestor, who came over in the Mayflower, brought this pearl with him, and without any primogeniture law it has been handed down father to son ever since. Emma, just step to the library and fetch it, there's a good girl. Here's the key."

Now, Mr. Chauncey Auckland, for an Englishman, was very knowing. In exact information regarding "the great Black Pearl" he could give points to its owner. He remembered its sale in Paris, not ten years before, and how all Europe had gossiped about the enormous price which the American parvenu had paid.

He knew, too, where a ready market awaited it without the attendance of any embarrassing questions.

But he was prepared to swallow all the crusaders and knights of the round table with the excellent dinner, in order to get a glimpse of its glory and a hint at its hiding place.

Emma returned with the shagreen case, which her father opened and handed proudly to his guest. The great jem lay in a white satin nest and somberly glowed, like the moon behind a cloud.

Into Auckland's little eyes came a responsive glitter which honor never kindled. The sinews of his hands tightened. He had a fortune in his very grasp.

The windows were wide open, and from the brow of the adjacent hill, over which the curtain of night was descending, stretched miles of woodland. Was he not a fool to yield it back to two frail women and a pudjy old man?

But, no, violence was not his forte. Languor had become a habit and ease a requisite. A night of concealment in the cold, wet brush, surrounded by all manner of creeping things, and followed by days of pursuit! Oh, no!

What he desired he should take, as he always had, but after his own fashion, which left no clew of regaining. He closed the box and returned it to his host.

"It's unique, it's superb!" he exclaimed with unfeigned enthusiasm. "But what a pity that anything so priceless should be so fragile!"

"Fragile!" repeated Enoch, turning pale at the thought. "What do you mean by that? No one is going at it with a hammer, is there? Why, this may have been worn by the Queen of Sheba for ought we know."

"Possibly it was," retorted Auckland, coolly, "but that doesn't effect the mysterious chance which always exists of its destruction. Pearls explode. Didn't you know it. Why, that is what I started to tell you about those rare specimens which once shared with the diamonds the honor of being heirlooms in our family."

"Let me see, was it my great-grandmother? No, my great-great-grandmother, the Lady Catherine, of course.

"It was the eve of the majority ball of her eldest son, Chauncey, whose name I also bear. She went to the secret crypt in the strong room to get the pearls, meet ornaments for such a function.

"She opened the oaken casket, and behold! there, where the milky necklace should lay, was a little gray, feathery ash, and the golden wire and links. The £20,000 vanished into air. The noble dame gave one despairing shriek and expired."

"You don't tell me!" ejaculated Mr. Black, sidling uneasily in his chair. "Explode! Why should they? They ain't loaded."

"I hope they don't make a noise or do any damage, father," said little Mrs. Black, meekly.

"No, madame," said Mr. Auckland, turning courteously to the affrighted matron. "The disintegration is sudden, but noiseless. Science has thus far failed to explain its cause, although a good guess is some subtle disease."

"I didn't bargain to buy an explosive disease," said Enoch, ruefully, quite forgetful of Richard the Conqueror and the Mayflower. "Is there nothing one can do to prevent such a flare-up?"

"I would suggest that it be kept in some cool place where there is a slight current of air."

"Then the inner compartment of my ornamental fire-proof etagere safe is hardly the place. Let me see. There's the ormolu desk by the window in the library. The sides are mere lattice work. Here, Emma, my child, just put the pearl in there and bring me the key."

"But, father," again ventured poor little Mrs. Black, "burglars."

Mr. Black hated to be called "father" by his wife, for he was her senior by a good many years, and it make him feel them. She was well aware of this aversion, but unable to break the habit from nervousness.

"Nonsense!" he blurted forcibly but inconsequently, "there aren't burglars in these days, and haven't I an electric alarm at every window?"

"Yes, father."

"That's a curious little key," said Mr. Auckland, by way of diversion, on Emma's return. "May I look at it? Thanks. Of foreign manufacture, I presume?"

"Yes, Burmah."

This visit proved so pleasant that Chauncey Auckland repeated it several times during the summer. His devotion to Emma became a subject of neighborly comment, which did not fail to reach the ears of Frank Maxon.

At first he outwardly ignored the gossip, much as he feared, but soon an incident caused him to act with the energy which was his characteristic. He met his lady love one afternoon, and began operations at once, as follows:

"Don't you love me?"

"Why, Frank, you know I do. Why else would I be here?"

"And yet you are going to marry this Englishman. I suppose on account of his wealth."

"Frank, be careful. If you doubt me you will no longer be the man that I love, and so I shall no longer love you."

"But your own father told me so. He said that this was an alliance which your affection and his interest made desirable; and he asked me not to be a marplot. Can you wonder that the man that you love doubted?"

"No, dear. Yet you might have trusted. Poor papa! Despite his wonderful executive abilities he is as simple as a child in his weaknesses. This man has studied his weaknesses, and for some reason takes advantage of them.'

"I believe he is an imposter, and I shall make it my business to prove him one."

"Why do you still doubt?"

"Because I believe it my right and duty to shield you from annoyance and persecution."

Frank Maxon found many suspicions on inquiry. His city friends smiled and shrugged their shoulder when Auckland's name was mentioned.

Perhaps he was all right. He was plausible and gentlemanly, but—well after all, it was none of their affairs.

Frank Maxon persisted, and his patience was rewarded. He learned that Auckland had no connection with the English house which he claimed to represent. He learned that he had obtained money through this representataion. Warily he laid his plans. He was ready to strike.

When to their trysting place came Emma in a whirl of excitement.

"Oh, Frank," she cried, "such a misfortune! Poor papa is fairly beside himself."

"Oh, he has discovered, has he? I was just about to inform him."

"Why, how could you know? It's less than a half hour since we found it."

"Didn't I promis you that I would expose his imposture?"

"Frank dear, I don't know what you are talking about. I thind it's a shame when I'm so anxious to tell you. What has 'he' and 'his imposture,' whatever they may mean, to do with our pearl?"

"What pearl?"

"Why, the great black pearl.'

"Why, has he stolen it?"

"Oh, dear! There you go again. Now listen, stupid. That famous pearl, of which my father has been so proud, is ruined, destroyed, a little heap of dust."

"Why, who smashed it?"

"No one; it exploded! Don't interrupt me, sir. You see papa had promised to exhibit it at the loan exhibition. So this noon he took the case from the desk and opened it. And there in place of that lovely gleaming, as I tell you, was a little heap of dust, o feathery ash. Ah, if it only had been stolen, we might recover it."

"It seems to me that I have read of such a casualty, but happening is so rare as to be almost impossible. You say your father took the pearl from the desk? Didn't he keep such a valuable article in his safe?"

"He used to until Mr. Auckland warned him. Oh, it's such a coincidence! The very same catastrophe happened to an heirloom in his family over 100 years ago. That poor Lady Catherine! Her fate was so tragic!"

"My dear, I don't believe in coincidences. They are an excuse for a lack of reasoning. The only heirlooms this Auckland ever had in his family are a noose and a pair of handcuffs. If he predicted such a probability as this it was because he was prepared to make it a certainty. I have only just obtained proofs of his rascality."

"Then he is the 'he' whose 'imposture' you would expose?"

"Yes, dear. Don't you remember?"

"He hasn't troubled me lately, and I've been so happy that I had forgotton."

"Let me think. This great black pearl may prove the talisman of our happiness. Hasten, Emma, to the house and bring me some of that dust."

"I will, oh, I will! You think it isn't destroyed—that he may have stolen it?"

"I am sure—"

"Oh, joy! Papa would do anything for us. And it is to be mine some day—you know when. Wait, wait, I'll be back instantly!"

It was late the following evening that Mr. Chauncey Auckland entered his hotel and sauntered to the desk.

"You sail to-morrow, sir?" said the clerk as he handed him his key. "Well, goodby; a pleasant voyage to you."

Despite his habitual languor Mr. Auckland started as he opened the door of his room, for the gas was burning brightly, the wardrobes and trunks were in a state of confusion, and lolling in the easy chair smoking was Frank Maxon.

"What are you doing here?" asked Auckland fiercely.

Maxon raised his hat from the center table. Underneath lay a revolver, which he leisurly pointed at the Englishman.

"Sit down," he said, and the man sullenly obeyed. He sat for a moment in silence, until he had recovered his self control, and then again asked, but more affably, "What are you doing here?"

"I have been looking for Mr. Black's pearl, but haven't found it. Doubtless you will kindly assist me."

"What preposterous nonsense! Why, he told me this very morning that it had exploded."

"Pardon me. That was a slight mistake. The pearl is all right. It's only your ridiculous story and your career of chicanery that have exploded."

"You can't bully me, sir. I shall ring the bell and have you kicked out."

"You will admit, as a man of acuteness, that I can prevent you if I choose. Well, go ahead. A detective with a warrant is awaiting such a summons."

"You haven't the proof for a warrant."

"For the theft of the pearl? Well, perhaps not. The time has been so short. I have the evidence of your conversation, an analysis of the dust in the shagreen box, which turns out to be ground glass, and several false keys and black beards which I just found in your drawer.

"After a while I can make a case, I think. And there will be plenty of opportunity, for the warrant of which I spoke is for 'obtaining money on false pretenses,' and a score of such charges will succeed it."

Mr. Auckland turned about in his chair and faced his accuser with the tranquil, assured air of a successful business man.

"You have me on the hip," he said. "Now what amicable arrangement can we make?"

"I want that pearl."

"I have an important engagement in London, and I'm booked to sail to-morrow. If I return the gem will you molest me?"

"No. Old Mr. Black is fond of you and very sensitive to ridicule. I would not expose his credulity unless necessary."

"You would best keep papa-in-law under a glass case—for jerked beef, he's very fresh. Well, here it is," and Auckland, with a smile, took the shagreen case from his pocket and displayed its shimmering contents.

"It will be an heirloom," he continued, as Maxon opened the door, "so I fully understand your interest. And I sincerely trust that your good wife may be preserved from the untoward fate of my great-great-grandmother, Lady Catherine. Good night, sir. I am most pleased to have met you."—The Strand.

THE HUMAN FAMILY.

The human family living on earth to-day consists of about 1,450,000,000 souls — not fewer, probably more. These are distributed literally over all the earth's surface, there being no considerable spot on the globe where man has not obtained a foothold.

In Asia, the so-called "cradle of the human race," there are now about 800,000,000 people, densely crowded, on an average of about 120 to every square mile.

In Europe, there are 320,000,000, averaging 100 to the square mile, not so crowded as in Asia, but everywhere dense, and in many places over-populated.

In Africa, there are, approximately, 210,000,000, and in the Americas — North, South and Central—100,000,000, these latter of course relatively thinly scattered over broad areas.

On the islands, large and small, there are probably 10,000,000 more.

The extremes of the blacks and the whites are as five to three, the remaining 700,000,000 intermediate, brown, yellow and tawny in color. Of the entire race 500,000,000 are well-clothed—that is, they wear garments of some kind that will cover nakedness—250,000,000 habitually go naked, and 700,000,000 only cover the middle parts of the body; 500,000,000 live in houses, 700,000,000 in huts and caves, the remaining 250,000,000 virtually having no place to lay their heads.—London News.

"Is it true that Maud Flyppe received a proposal from old Stockson?" "It is. He told her that if she would marry him he would settle $5000 a year on her, pay for her dresses and give her a trip to Europe once a year." "

A REPUBLICAN VICTORY

By the Handsome Plurality of over 35,000.

Few Democratic Candidates Successful in this State.

"Hands Off the Tariff," Massachusetts Says Most Emphatically.

The Senate is Republican, 34 to 6; the House 187 to 53.—New York, Ohio, Iowa and New Jersey all Republican.

The result of the election Tuesday was a surprise to both parties in Massachusetts, for the state which for the past three years has elected a Democratic governor swung once more into the Republican line with a voice which there was no mistaking. Previous to the election both parties were hoping, though not daring to claim much, but with the first return Tuesday night it became apparent that there had been a revolution, which developed into a landslide as the evening advanced, almost every precinct and town showing large Republican gains, until at 11 o'clock the election was conceded to that party by even the most hopeful of the other side. The Republican ticket was successful in nearly all of the cities and usual Democratic strongholds, the Republican vote being about that of a presidential year, while the Democratic fell to the usual off year figures. The total vote is over 350,000, while that of 1891, the last off year, was 331,650.

IN OTHER STATES.

Iowa steps into the Republican ranks with a plurality of 35,000.

The Republican plurality in Pennsylvania will reach at least 120,000.

Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky were the only states captured by the Democrats in this fall's election.

In Ohio, where the campaign was fought on a strictly tariff basis, McKinley gets a majority of 80,000, a most emphatic protest against any monkeying with the present tariff schedule.

Brooklyn elected a Republican mayor, the people having tired of a man who ran things for "de gang," without regard to the interests of the people.

In New Jersey the gang which has for the past few years run everything in the interests of the race track gamblers is dethroned, to the great gratification of the law-abiding element.

Judge Gary at Chicago, who was opposed by Gov. Altgeld and the anarchists because of his part in the trial of the Haymarket assassins, he being the presiding judge, is reelected by about 8000 plurality.

Probably one of the greatest surprises was in New York state, where the Republicans elected the secretary of state by 34,680 plurality, and also get a good majority in both branches of the Legislature. Maynard, the mail-stealing judge, is buried under an 89,669 plurality for his opponent.

MASSACHUSETTS gets one more feather in her cap by the compliment paid her by the foreign experts who have been examining the educational exhibits at the World's Fair, and looking over the ground in different localities on their way home. They say that the old Bay State stands at the head of all in this line.

ONE more proof that the World's Fair has been the best up to date is that the "court of honor" is to be reproduced at South Kensington, London, the superintendent of the work at Chicago having gone there to repeat it.

PALMER NEWS.

How Palmer Voted.

Palmer has once more swung into the Republican line, and although the margin is small it represents a change of 60 votes from last year, when the largest vote in the history of the town was polled. The vote last year was 981, this year 915 out of a registration of 1122. In precinct A there were about 100 who did not vote. The returns were in much earlier than last year, the first to arrive being Bondsville about 6, closely followed by Three Rivers. Palmer was in at 6.15, and Thorndike came last at 7.30. William H. Brainerd has just cause for feeling proud of his vote for county commissioner, running 54 ahead of his ticket and receiving the largest vote of any candidate against whom there was an opponetn. Close behind him came Mr. Loomis for representative, his vote being 47 ahead of the ticket. Mr. Loomis carried every town in the district, and ran behind only in precincts B and D in this town, 21 in the former and 25 in the latter. In his own precinct he ran 39 ahead of the ticket, receiving 109 plurality, while in the same precinct Mr. Brainerd ran 48 ahead of the ticket and received a plurality of 137. The vote in detail was:

The Republicans Celebrate.

The Republicans of the town held no rally before election this year, and so on Wednesday decided to celebrate a little over the result. The matter was not considered until late in the day, and it was after noon when circulars bearing the following invitation were distributed through the villages:

Republicans who are feeling happy as the result of the election, and desire to congratulate each other, are invited to meet at Holden's opera house at 8 o'clock this evening. Don't fail to be present if you want a good time.

Although the notice was short the hall was well filled, many coming from the other villages of the town. Scattered about the floor and in the boxes were numerous tables for the convenience of whist players, while in one corner was a substantial lunch of sandwiches, hot coffee, doughnuts and cheese. After several rounds at whist and the tables had been cleared of the eatables the assembly was called to order by District Attorney Gardner, who gave a resumé of the causes which had led up to the Republican victory of the day before, and congratulated the successful candidates upon their election. He was followed by Dr. R. V. Sawin of Brimfield, Dr. William Holbrook, Judge Robinson, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, Representative-elect H. G. Loomis, R. C. Newell, A. T. Wing, County Commissioner W. H. Brainerd and S. S. Taft, the speeches being interspersed with selections by a male chorus. It was nearly 11 when the company broke up, all voting the the affair a decided success.

Charles Royce of Fitchburg was in town Tuesday.

Charles G. Gardner has returned from the World's Fair.

Mrs. S. C. Hunt's house on Pine street is being painted.

George A. Moore of Hartford spent Sunday with friends in town.

Tickets for "Wanita" are on sale at Allen's drug store for 35 and 25 cents.

Miss Jane Palmer of California is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. E. Dewey.

Mrs. O. D. Wells and Mason Wells have returned from the World's Fair.

Miss Flora Fiske of Monson was the guest of Mrs. E. C. Washburn over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bosquet of Springfield visited friends in town over Sunday.

The Masonic Block on Central street is being painted upon the exterior this week.

Miss Amy Warner of Boston has been the guest of Miss Hattie Blanchard this week.

Freeman W. Shaw, a survivor of the Mexican war, has received an increase of pension.

The Mission Circle of the Baptist church gave a supper in the church parlors last Friday night.

Mrs. S. W. Stanchfield of Jewett City, Ct., was the guest of Mrs. E. C. Sexton the first of the week.

The W. C. T. U. drinking fountain has been removed from its site near the post office into winter quarters.

Herbert Davis will inspect the Ware post of the G. A. R. next Tuesday evening, and the post at Spencer next Thursday evening.

Wallace Paddock of Merrick visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Paddock, on State avenue Tuesday night and Wednesday.

George M. Coney of Southbridge, assistant inspecting officer, inspected L. L. Merrick Post of the Grand Army Wednesday evening.

"Nancy Hanks" passed through Palmer in a special car attached to the 11.43 train yesterday morning, en route to Canton for the winter.

It is requested that all who have a part in "Wanita" meet at the opera house Monday evening promptly at 7.30 for a stage rehearsal.

J. J. Conway has taken the position as engineer at the Palmer Steam Laundry, made vacant by the departure of Edward Murphy.

State Detective Pease of Lee was in town this week. He has taken in hand the investigation of the recent thefts from the Converse House.

Moody's evening school will open in Eager's block Tuesday evening. A good class is promised, both in bookkeeping and penmanship.

Not enough people came to the meeting called last evening to make arrangements for a dancing class to warrant Mr. Holland's organizing one.

Rev. H. F. Moulton, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, will deliver a sermon Sunday morning upon "What shall we do with our burdens?"

A meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The union passenger station is being wired for incandescent electric lights. These will be used in place of the arc lights now in use, which will be removed.

The Woman's Relief Corps will celebrate the seventh anniversary of its organization either the 21st or 22d, as the anniversary day falls on Sunday, the 19th.

The room in Cross block formerly occupied by M. D. Sullivan is being fitted up for a pool and billiard room, and will be occupied by Charles White.

Miss Porter of the state primary school handed in her resignation last week and has accepted a position as instructor of sewing in the public schools of Haverhill.

The eighth annual state convention of the Christian Endeavor will be held at Holyoke next Tuesday and Wednesday. Reduced rates will be made on all railroads.

Frank W. Holt of Montague and Miss Imogene L. McLaughlin of Stafford, Ct., were married by Rev. F. E. Jenkins at the Congregational parsonage Tuesday.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Baptist church held a social and supper in the vestry Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance and a pleasant time.

Rev. S. T. Frost of the Baptist church preached in Gilbertville Monday evening, and Wednesday was called to Ashland to attend the funeral of a former parishioner.

Quite a number of people took advantage of the special train to Springfield Monday night. Some took in the Democratic rally at City Hall while others found other attractions

W. H. Bennett, a lineman for the Palmer and Monson Electric Co., received a bad cut on the head yesterday from a falling pike pole, while setting a pole near the railroad bridge.

A meeting of all persons interested in the formation of a literary society will be held in the library rooms next Monday evening at 7.30, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

A 'coon supper was served Saturday evening to 14 members of the hunt by Landlord Pierce, the 'coons being some of the trophies captured. The supper was enjoyed by all who partook.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Universalist church will hold a social in the church parlors next Wednesday evening. Mrs. F. R. Lawton and Mrs. G. F. Sedgwick will entertain.

A horse belonging to W. H. Williams, which had been left standing on Main street Tuesday afternoon indulged in a little run on its own hook and damaged the wagon about $20 worth.

The number of inmates at the town farm is increasing. At present there are 21 persons there, a gain of ten in the last two months. The present number of inmates is the largest for several years.

The teachers of the high school have been taking their visiting day to-day. Principal Thayer visited schools in Springfield, and Misses Marsh and Fisherdick visited the schools in Norwich, Ct.

The student lamp in the office of Daniel F. Holden started a blaze from a leak in the tank last Friday evening. Serious consequences were prevented by the lamp being thrown out into the street.

The Baptist and Congregational churches will hold a union meeting this evening in the house of the latter. Rev. Mr. Frost of the Baptist church will preach on "The Eternal Punishment of the Wicked."

C. G. Thompson, station agent of the New London Northern road at Monson, and wife are living at the Converse House, preferring Palmer to Monson as a place of residence. Mrs. Thompson's father is staying with them.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Breckenridge were given a surprise to-day by over 40 of their friends, the occasion being the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Friends were present from Holyoke, Hatfield, Ware, South Hadley and other places.

"Worthy of One's Self" will be the morning subject at the Congregational church Sunday. A beautiful antiphonal musical service will be rendered in the evening by two choirs, and the pastor will give an address on "Yoke for Yoke."

The pastor's class at the Congregational church will be postponed next week from Tuesday to Wednesday evening. It will have for its subject "Christ in Judea and Samaria." O. P. Allen will give a study of Samaria and the Samaritans.

At the meeting of the pastoral committee of St. Paul's Universalist church Tuesday afternoon it was decided to hereafter arrange for the meetings of the committees in all departments of the church to be held on the first Tuesday evening of each month.

Bryan Rourke wishes to thank some unknown friends who a few days ago made him a present of a fine heifer calf, which he found in his barn one morning. Bryan says "Shure he's a fine wan," and is growing twice as fast since the election, hence it must be a Republican animal.

The Baptist church and Sabbath school will observe next Sunday as Bible Day. In the morning the pastor will preach on the sweetness of the Bible. A large chorus of children will assist in the singing. In the evening at 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the children of the Sunday school. Meeting for men only in the vestry at 6 o'clock.

An agent of a Worcester piano and organ house was in town last Friday looking for a J. W. Porter, who bought an organ from the firm some time ago and has failed to settle for it. No trace could be found of Porter and it is evident that he is a swindler. The correspondence was addressed to a box in the post office that has been leased by another party for several years. The name was not remembered by the postmaster.

The lesson in the Congregational Sunday school next Sunday will be illustrated by several stereopticon views including Cana of Galilee, Mount of Olives and Jerusalem, the Golden Gate, Mount Gerizim and the Vale of Nablons, Jacob's Well, and several others. This school is committing to memory the 151 facts and incidents in the four Gospels, arranged in their chronological order and in groups to aid in memorizing.

The Natural History Society at the meeting Monday evening voted to hold a social in the library rooms Monday evening, the 20th. A special meeting of the society is called for next Friday evening. All the members should be present, as arrangements will be made for the social. The society has recently purchased a copy of Studer's "Birds of North America," which is said to be as fine a work on ornithology as there is. It is illustrated with 119 plates, lithographed in the natural colors of the birds.

The comic opera "Wanita," which was so acceptably presented by local talent last month, will be repeated next Tuesday evening. Miss Mary P. Hosford, who played the title role in the first production of the opera, has been engaged to take the same part in this presentation. If this production receives the support of the people of this town it is probable that it will lead to the formation of a musical association of some sort among our young people. This being formed, other musical productions and entertainments will be given in the future.

A special treat will be given the people of Palmer next Thursday evening at the Congregational church. Booker T. Washington, perhaps the greatest organizer of colored people the South has produced, the founder and head of the celebrated institution at Tuskegee, Ala., will be present with a student quartette from his institution. Mr. Washington will speak, and the quartette will sing the wonderful touching Negro songs. This meeting will be held in the main audience room to accommodate the numbers who will want to come.

The ladies of the Congregational church met in the parlors Monday afternoon and formed a working club, to be auxiliary to the Ladies' Social Union. It will be known as the Lend a Hand Club, and has these officers: President, Mrs. C. L. Gardner; vice president, Mrs. C. B. Ellis; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. John Sedgwick; working committee, Mrs. Rufus Flynt, Mrs. H. D. Converse, Mrs. C. A. Brown, Mrs. H. W. McGregory and Mrs. A. W. Thayer. The next meeting will be next Monday afternoon with Mrs. F. D. Barton, all ladies of the congregation being invited to attend.

The supper given by the losing side in the Arcanum hunt to their victorious brethren was served by Landlord Pierce at the Converse House Tuesday evening. About 130 in all, including the hunters and their la ly friends, partook of the feast. After the supper all who wished went to the opera house, where dancing was in order. The music was furnished by the Springfield Orchestral Club, with Messrs. Wright and Dietz as prompters. The captains of the hunt, Fred Adams and Silas Keith, were in charge of the floor, assisted by H. L. Holden, E. E. Brooks, C. W. Johnson and B. P. Morse. About 100 were present at the dance, which consisted

There will be an "Indigo" sociable at the Methodist church this evening, comprising both supper, entertainment, and word contest. To the one making the largest number of words out of the letters in "Indigo," a book of poems will be given, and an appropriate prize to the one making the least number.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church entertained about 200 persons at their social, which was under the management of Miss Esther R. Holmes, Tuesday evening. A "doll party," said to be "direct from the World's Fair," was exhibited by Mrs. William Needham during the evening and furnished considerable amusement.

The Christian Endeavor missionary meeting last Sunday evening was largely attended, and good interest was manifested in the programme. Music was furnished by a double quartette composed of Mr. Fitz and Organist Coy, tenors; Mr. C. C. Keep and Henry Miller, bassos; Misses Ada Smith and Addie Peck, sopranos; Miss Minnie Smith and Mabel Gates, altos.

An important meeting of the school committee was held last Friday evening and it was decided that grades seventh and eighth, Miss Converse's school, should go to the State street school house temporarily. The present corps of teachers was reappointed. It was voted not to pay the tuition of postgraduates and special students after this year; voted to authorize the superintendent to buy grammer school dictionaries and Colburn's mental arithmetics for use in the schools. The schools close Nov. 24, and the winter term begins Dec. 4 and ends March 2, with intermission from Dec. 23d to 30th inclusive.

At the business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church last Sunday, the following officers were chosen: President, L. H. Austin; vice president, A. M. Beebe; secretary, Mary E. Anderson; treasurer, J. E. Closson; superintendent of Junior Endeavor society, Mabel L. Anderson; lookout committee, Geo. W. Brown, Myron Blanchard, L. A. Prouty, Hattie R. Pease, Grace E. Webber; prayer meeting, Ada L. Smith, Florence J. Deverell, Maude E. Strong, Horace Broughton, Jr., H. L. Beebe; social, Mabelle K. Flynt, Louise Morris, Grace S. Cushman, F. E. Phillips; flower, Miss Esther R. Keep.

Academy Notes.

Again the students of the academy have been called to mourn with one of their number, Foster Symes, whose father died in Denver on Saturday. He has returned to his home in Pittsfield, but his mates hope to see him back again in the near future.——A German table has been established at Hammond Hall, and every evening the students at this table are obliged to carry on conversation and ask to have their wants supplied, in that language.——Tuesday morning Prof. Burke gave the students an opportunity to express their political opinions, and the result was: Greenhalge, 48; Russell, 24; Banks, 10; woman's suffrage, 1.——The entertainment to be given by the senior class will occur Thursday evening, Nov. 23, instead of Nov. 24, as has been announced.——As all the occupants of Hammond Hall are Republicans, as soon as the election returns were announced a bonfire was decided upon, and Wednesday evening the students collected into one vast pile the necessary fuel. At 10.30 the flames shot skyward, and for two hours their ruddy glare lighted all around.——The athletic concert last Friday evening was a grand success, and the committee cleared $22 as a nest-egg for the spring funds.——L. A. Prouty has been appointed a member of the athletic entertainment committee in place of G. H. Stone, resigned.——Miss Ethel Newton, '94, gave a pleasant party to friends at her home on East Hill last Saturday evening.

GLENDALE.

Arthur Stebbins of Ware, a former resident here, was the guest of Mrs. Austin Davis this week.

Richard Davis was surprised by about 60 of his young friends last Friday evening, and was the recipient of several presents.

There will be a harvest supper at the church next Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock.

WARREN.

The King's Daughters met with Mrs. Charles Deland Thursday afternoon.

Slater & Co. commenced running on nine hours Wednesday morning for the present.

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society met in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Capen and Dr. Albie Tyler from Washington are the guests of Mrs. John Tyler.

The Epworth League held a convention in the Methodist church Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Strickland has rented her house for six months to Mr. Slater, and will spend most of the time in traveling.

The first rehearsal of the Choral Union will be at Brigham's Hall this evening. Edward Severn, Jr., will be conductor, the same as last season.

WALES.

The young people are to hold a social in the Baptist vestry this evening.

The Needham wood lots have been sold, one to A. A. Hubbard and one to William M. Peck.

The town gave its usual Republican majority, making quite a gain over last year on the state ticket. A marked improvement was made in marking the ballots.

H. E. Shaw got up steam Tuesday night and blew his mill whistle to celebrate the Republican victory. Wednesday evening the small boys turned out a torchlight procession and paraded the streets.

Zeno Farrington, a veteran Democrat, has just painted his house and has one of the finest looking houses in town. It is a clear white, with green blinds, and passersby remark that it is white enough for a Republican house.

The Armenian preacher and his little 7-years-old boy entertained the people Sunday and Monday evenings. He gave a history of his people and their customs, and sang in German, Armenian, Greek and English. The little fellow is a wonderful singer for his age. Mrs. Barsmarjian was sick and not able to be present. A liberal contribution was taken to help him on in his work. He will soon return to Armenia, where he is to build a chapel and preach the gospel to his people.

WILBRAHAM.

Miss May Merrick is visiting friends in Springfield.

Dr. Charles Merrick of Worcester was home over Sunday.

Rev. M. S. Howard is visiting his sister at Sing Sing, N. Y., this week.

Mrs. Hiram Clark of Whatcome, Washington, a former resident, is in town.

The house of Monroe Pease on Maple street was destroyed by fire Monday morning.

Marshall Wade of Springfield has bought the homestead of the late J. M. Merrick, and will take possession this week.

Albert Phelps, Arthur Seymour, Frank Larned and Charles Stacy are drawn on the petit jury and have commenced their duties in Boston this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Larned of Maple street entertained about 25 of their friends Monday evening, it being the 10th anniversary of their marriage.

Miss B. Goodale of Nebraska and Mrs. Joseph Price and daughter Miriam of the Black Hills, Dakota, have been the guests of James Merrick the past week.

Frank Larned of Maple street has sold his farm to Mr. Blodgett of Belchertown, who will take possession at once. Mr. Larned will move his family to Chicago.

A union meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of North Wilbraham and the Center was held in the chapel of the Congregational church Tuesday evening.

WEST WARREN.

Charles Cutler is working on his new house.

Dwight Orcutt has started an oyster route for the winter.

Miss Bridget Collins has taken the position of assistant in the post office.

Mrs. James Grant of Brattleboro, Vt., a former resident of this town, is visiting friends here.

Sixteen probationers were baptized at the M. E. church Sunday morning, and two members received by letter.

Frank Pierce of Warren and Miss Minnie Matchett of this place were married at the home of Mrs. Armour last Thursday evening by Rev. Putnan Webber.

C. L. Thompson is once more on duty as night police. John Collins has been filling the position during his illness.

All was quiet at the polls except for a little excitement over the posting of campaign posters on the Fireman's Hall.

Horatio Brown, who has been stopping with his brother-in-law, John Shaw, is soon to go to the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea.

A large 'buss load of people of the Epworth League attended the convention in the M. E. church at Warren Tuesday evening.

The supper given last Thursday eve in the M. E. church was very much enjoyed by all. The Epworth Quartette and Orchestra furnished the music.

M. J. Shea was fined $50 and costs in the superior court at Worcester Friday. Judge Maynard overruled his motion for a new trial on the ground of new evidence.

At the business meeting of the Epworth League Monday evening nine new members were elected. After the transaction of business a short programme was given by the social department, consisting of selections by the E. L. orchestra, readings, games, etc.

WARE.

Virgil Guild is planning to spend the winter in the South.

Charles E. Stevens for councillor was given a handsome vote, away ahead of the ticket.

The ladies of the Unitarian society are to hold a sale of fancy articles in about a month.

Collis & Tucker have one of their greenhouses full of magnificent chrysanthemums, well worth a visit to see.

Additional wells are being put down near the pumping station, to give an increase of water for town purposes.

Daniel Sanford cast his fiftieth vote for governor on Tuesday, not having missed a single year in all that time.

An eight-years-old girl named Gravel died of malignant diphtheria in one of the Stevens tenements on Maple street Monday night. No other cases are reported.

Miss Mary A. Breckenridge has organized a class in physical culture, sessions to be held in the Young Men's Union gymnasium.

Fred A. Volk for representative was badly left—64 behind the vote for Russell. A bright young man, but the times were not favorable for the party he represents.

The plate glass in Marsh Bros'. store, in the side occupied by the Otis Company as a gas office and for the display of material, has been broken by the heat from a gas stove.

Revs. A. B. Bassett and J. P. Harvey attended the sixth annual meeting of the Hartford Theological Seminary at Springfield on Monday, and took part in the exercises.

The Beaver Lake club house is closed for the season, so if you want to show friends some of the beauties of the situation subscribe for Beaver Lake Illustrated, soon to be published by C. W. Eddy.

The high school athletic club has organized with the following officers: President, W. J. Rushmore; vice president, Harry Hitchcock; secretary, F. M. Carroll; treasurer, Benjamin Osgood; custodian, John E. Fitzgerald.

Don't forget the World's Fair stereopticon entertainment at the town hall next Wednesday evening. Over 100 views will be shown, with descriptions which will give a more realistic idea of the Fair than can be had in any other way. Tickets now on sale at Turner's.

The Eastern Hampshire, Eastern Hampden and Western Worcester counties Sunday school district is to hold a grand convention in the East Congregational church on Thursday, Nov. 23. Representative from seventeen Sunday schools are expected to be present.

Tuesday was a fine day and a large number of farmers from the out districts were in town to do their duty at the polls. The registered voters numbered 1192, and the total number of votes cast was 1067. The vote for governor was: Banks 20; Cary 2; Greenhalge 478; O'Neil 1; Russell 528; Clark 38.

Palmer Bros. are to give an illustrated lecture in the town hall next Sunday evening on "Spirit Power," claiming to produce the most wonderful manifestations ever witnessed. The Albany Express says of their lecture: "Spirit forms were seen, felt and heard, and musical instruments were played upon by spirit hands."

The Washington express over the Central road is to be taken off the 10th of this month, but it is reported that a train running on about the same time will run from Boston to Springfield. If this is so it would be a good thing for the Ware business men who wish to do business in Boston and return the same day, as it would be more likely to be on time than now.

We have never believed that political rallies had much effect, but if there ever was one that reached the hearts of the people with convincing power it was that of last Friday evening. Entirely local, the hall packed to overflowing, and the hearers could but feel that the truth was being spoken, not for party effect, but for the best good of the people. The speakers were F. M. Sibley, Edwin H. Baker, Henry C. Davis, William S. Hyde and Henry Bassett.

A two-column article on the Methodist jubilee at Ware, in the Zion's Herald of this week, with the cut of the Ragged Hill church, opens with the following eloquent words:—

The Ragged Hill society, a historic body, a mother of churches, a nursery of primitive itinerants, and the scene of early Methodist toils and triumphs, was located on a shoulder of the mountain to the east of the Ware River, and two and a half miles above Ware village. The hills and many of the dwellings remain; but the farms, once carefully cultivated, no longer give evidence of former thrift. The old cultivators have departed, leaving, indeed, the soil and the inspiring outlook over the valley and upon the hills beyond. The place is beautiful for situation, a mount of vision, a dwelling place to which the earlier inhabitants became peculiarly attached, as to a sacred spot where God revealed Himself, often in power and great glory, and where they built happy homes and reared beautiful families out of which came honored men and women to bless society.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Josephine glove cleaner, for sale only by Mrs. L. E. Carpenter, headquarters for all the latest novelties in fine millinery and fancy goods, kid gloves and notions. 52-32

In cases where dandruff, scalp diseases, falling and grayness of the hair appear, do not neglect them, but apply a proper remedy and tonic like Hall's Hair Renewer.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

"A chemical success and medical triumph," so speaks an eminent physician in reference to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral: and the eulogy was none too strong. No other medicine is so safe and efficacious in all diseases of the throat and lungs.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

"Nothing succeeds like success," and nothing will more quickly insure success than true merit. For 50 years, Ayer's Sarsaparilla has maintained its popularity as the superior blood-purifier. It stands upon its own merits and never fails to give satisfaction.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. If disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures diarrhœa, regulates the stomache and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums and reduces inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." 52-9

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., November, 1893.

It will probably interest you to know that the volume of business in cloaks the past ten days has been something phenomenal.

In order to keep up this pace we have sought and bought another very remarkable lot of coats and capes at about half value. The purchase consists of just the styles everybody is wearing now.

Tight fitting and reefer coats.
English and flounce skirts.
With and without capes.
Fur and braid trimmings.

We shall pile them on tables as fast as you come for them—marking everything to as near half-price as we think practicable.

|---|---|
| Everything on the 1st table | $ 2.50 |
| Everything on the 2d table | 5.00 |
| Everything on the 3d table | 7.50 |
| Everything on the 4th table | 10.00 |
| Everything on the 5th table | 15.00 |
| Everything on the 6th table | 20.00 |

A number of rich imported garments, no two alike, and no duplicates in this region, are marked down from $65, $75 and $100 to $50 each.

It is time all Paris model hats and bonnets were sold. It is time all models from our own workrooms were sold. It is time to put modest prices on them.

|---|---|
| $40 models for | $15.00 |
| 35 models for | 15.00 |
| 25 models for | 15.00 |
| 20 models for | 10.00 |
| 15 models for | 7.60 |

The supply of imported dress patterns at $5 is renewed and brightened every morning, sometimes with patterns worth $7.50, sometimes worth $10, sometimes $12.50.

Many sorts of black dress fabrics, of which we have only one or two pieces of a pattern, are marked down from 75 cents, 37½ and $1, to 59 cents a yard.

"FASHIONS for November," the Springfield Republican says, "is even above its usual high standard."

It contains an engraving of M. Gilbert's famous painting, The Carpet Mender, which hangs in the Luxembourg Gallery in Paris. This engraving, by the way, is one that a few weeks ago took the first prize at the exhibition of the International Wood Engravers, given in London.

Other illustrations include:—

A jacket from Redfern.
A hat from Virot.
New decoration for a cape and street gown.
Evening gown in in ivory silk.
Coiffure for a young lady.
Dinner gown of silk.
Holiday gifts; and how to make them.

In Private Practice.

Such strong proofs of the marvelous cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice lately through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam, N.Y., states where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease, ulceration of the stomach, complicated with sickness peculiar to her sex; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon kidneys, liver and blood, in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed. Druggists sell it.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recomendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

An Awful Impossibility.

The soaking rain is pouring down,—
How it would fill your cup
With bitterness, if some day it
Should start to pouring up!

Umbrellas then would be no use,
And men in rubber boots
Would have to go, while all the girls
Would put on bathing suits.

You'd have a fountain on your lawn
Beside each blade of grass.
To keep your cellar warm and dry
You'd need a floor of glass.

If you were camping in a tent,
You'd have to sleep on top,
And all night you be praying that
The cursed rain might stop.

In fact, great inconveniences,
Too numerous to state,
Would follow, if the falling rain
Should cease to gravitate.

So let us hope there'll be no change,
At least in our town,
And that instead of pouring up
The rain will still pour down.

At Antietam, just after the artillery had been sharply engaged, the Rockbridge (Va.) battery was standing waiting orders. General Lee rode by and stopped a moment. A dirty faced driver about 17 said to him:

Think of such a question from such a source to the general of the army, especially when that general's name was Lee.

"Yes, my boy," the stately officer kindly answered; "I have to put you in again. But what is your name? Your face seems familiar somehow."

"I don t wonder you didn't know me sir," laughed the lad; "I'm so dirty, but I'm Bob."

THE HABIT OF CARELESSNESS.

In youth men are self reliant, self assertive and self sufficient. Soon they find themselves mistaken, possibly in little things at first, for the fact is they are still small in knowledge and influence. Hence the chagrin of the first errancy is softened by the reflection that its consequences cannot work much harm. Too often they fail to emphasize the importance of the value of their utterance as their personal influences widen. Hence their testimony without sufficient proof for themselves begins to work mischief for others. Then follow surprises, misunderstandings, alienations, criminations, heartaches and occasionally something worse. Friendships are broken, integrity is wounded, confidence is shaken, human testimony is suspected.

Now all this is not the result chiefly of any essentially bad trait in human nature. It arises rather from carelessness and a sort of insincere habit of condoning the fault on the score of personal insignificance. "Oh, I didn't mean it!" covers a multitude of these sins among our younger friends. But, alas, "younger friends" soon grow into midlife, and the careless habit, once indulged, barnacles itself upon age.—Boston Commonwealth.

SWEETNESS.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead, but fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving and cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be cheered and made happier by them. The kind things you will say after they are gone say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffin bestow now, and so brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away full of fragrant perfumes, of sympathy and cheering, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them now in my weary and troubled hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered while I need them and can enjoy them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, and a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial.

Post-mortem kindness cannot cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin shed no fragrance backward over the weary way by which the loved ones have traveled.—Henry Spring.

THE ENVY OF KINGS.

The Princes of the Earth May Envy the Poor.

Richness or Power Cannot Make Life Pleasant or Happy.

The True Way to Find Happiness For Those Who Have it Not.

Wealth does not make happiness. It does not make even comfort.

Sickness blights everything.

Kings and princes may envy the poor the blessing of good health.

If you are in pain or suffering you cannot be happy.

This is why the remarks of the well-known Harriet Robinson, of 74 Snell street, Fall River, Mass., have so much weight and are worthy of attention.

"I firmly believe," she said, "that I should not be living to-day if it had not been for Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Such awful pains in my head and back, and my stomach, oh, it was too bad! I am now well and eat naturally. I have no pains or distress. Thanks to Dr. Greene's Nervura I am well again. It was over two years ago that I was cured, and no trace of the disease has returned."

HARRIET ROBINSON.

Another widely known lady, Mrs. N. Blatt, of 73 Mulberry street, Newark, N. J., speaking in the same vein, says:

"I have been suffering with pain in the back and head. I tried doctors but found no relief. I was recommended to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I now sleep soundly and have no pain, and am well, thanks to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy."

If you are a sufferer from disease it is plainly your own fault if you do not get cured. This wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will certainly cure you. It is purely vegetable and harmless.

It is constantly prescribed and recommended by doctors. It is the discovery of a physician. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the famous and successful specialist, in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted without charge, personally or by letter.

THE ESKIMO BULLETIN, THE ONLY PAPER WITHIN THE ARCTIC.

The Eskimo Bulletin is the most unique newspaper in the world and is the only journal published within the Arctic circle. It is printed at Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, in latitude 54 degrees 40 minutes, and is issued only once a year. Cape Prince of Wales is a low sand spit running out just where the Behring strait joins the Arctic ocean. It is destitute of timber, and is about as barren and desolate a spot as could well be imagined. On it, however, is situated an Eskimo village and a missionary school. The teacher is Harrison R. Thornton of this city, from whom a copy of the last number of the Bulletin was procured. It is dated May 1, 1893.

The Bulletin is a small sheet, 12 by 8 inches, printed on one side only, of stiff, white paper. It is printed by the hektograph process, which is simply a method of multiplying copies of writing. The writing is first made on paper with prepared ink, and is then impressed upon gelatine. From the gelatine impressions are taken upon many other sheets. As there is practically one mail to and from Cape Prince of Wales during the year, one issue of the paper during the period is quite sufficient.

This curious little paper contains a variety of news arranged under different heads. In mirthful imitation of the daily papers in other localities it triumphantly carries at the head of its columns the legend, "Largest circulation in the Arctic," and also the additional boast of "Only yearly paper in the world."

The headings are "Local Items," "Rural Notes," "Society," "Fashion," "Marriage Notices." "Whiskey in the Arctic" is the heading over an editorial. Every scrap of news is like a breath from the far North. As space is scanty, condensation is a fine art with the editor. He displays quite a fund of humor, too, and there is a strain of gentle playfulness in nearly everything he writes.

The bulletin has two illustrations, one of the schoolhouse and the other of a scene on Behring strait. The heading is also decorated with a drawing of an Eskimo's head. As the paper is edited by the teacher, Mr. Thornton, it is very probable that it is designed as an auxiliary to his instruction, as well as a circular letter to be sent abroad by the few white inhabitants of that far northern land. He is greatly interested in his work, and his sympathies are wholly enlisted for the Indians under his charge.

Mr Thornton has made a profound study of the Eskimo language, and is engaged in compiling a dictionary of the Aleut tongue. During the progress of his studies he has made a singular discovery. The Greek and Sanscript were the only languages heretofore known to have three numbers—singular, plural and dual. Mr. Thornton has discovered that the Aleut language also has three numbers. This he regards as a discovery of which philologists may well take note, as the origin of the Eskimo has been the subject of much discussion and speculation. Mr. Thornton is gathering a large quantity of material respecting the manners, customs, religious ideas, traditions and lingual peculiarities of the tribes of Alaska, which he will probably publish in book form.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A TRIFLE MIXED.

Mrs. Jason came home the other evening with her face "wreathed in smiles," as the novelists have it.

"Well, what are you grinning at?" was the cordial greeting of her lord and master.

"I heard something funny down town," she answered.

"Well, what was it?"

"Oh, nothing much. I happened to meet little Johnny Figg, who used to keep the apple stand across the way, you know, and he's got a better one down town now. I asked him how he was getting along, and he says to me, 'Oh, I'm still keeping a stand, you see.' I thought it was the cutest thing I had heard for a good while."

"Oh, you did, did you, Maria? If ever I see where the laugh comes in, I'll try and smile, even if I have to get up in the middle of the night to do so," was the crushing reply, to which she deigned no answer.

About 2 o'clock in the morning Mr. Jason was awakened from a dream of being stabbed by a masked assassin, to find his wife energetically nudging him below the fifth rib.

"Oh, Jehiel, I had that wrong," she twittered in a tone of one who has made a great discovery. "Johnny said his business was at a standstill. You see the point now, don't you?"—Tit-Bits.

NO SWEDEN FOR HER.

A lady and gentleman who had been "doing" the fair since it opened sat down to luncheon in the Swedish cafe, where the waiters are supposed to be direct importations from the land of the Swedish nightingale. At least, they are dressed in the costume of the peasantry of that country.

Rye bread and Swiss cheese and beer was the order given, for these two people were doing the fair as they find it. They were waiting for their luncheon, and the woman talked of the beauty of the girl who had gone for it. She wondered if that girl ever saw, ever heard Christine Nilsson, and a lot of other things. The man suggested that his companion might ask the girl and thereby pick up a story.

"But she probably cannot speak English. She is not long from her fatherland, poor thing, and I don't like to embarrass a waiter."

"You might try," said the man.

So when the order was served, the lady looking at the waitress, who, by the way, was a brunette, said: "I thought Swedish girls were blonde; is it not so?"

"Most of them are," was the quick reply, in good English.

Encouraged, the lady continued: "Tell me, my good girl, how long have you been away from your native country?"

"About nine years."

The lady somewhat cooled: "Nine years from Sweden?"

"Sweden? Who said I was from Sweden?"

"Then where is your home?"

"Milwaukee avenue. Sixty cents, please" (to the gentleman)

And the lady vowed that she would not indulge in any more musings over the foreigners at the fair.—Chicago Tribune.

"They call young seals 'puppies' don't they," said Maud to Mamie.

"I believe so."

"Isn't it perfectly lovely!"

"Isn't what lovely?"

"To know what the poets mean when they say 'My bark is on the sea.'"—Washington Star.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

READ.—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other plug tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the toughest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TIN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely,

THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

A list of the people obtaining these prizes in this county will be published in this paper immediately after February 1st, 1894.

DON'T SEND ANY TAGS BEFORE JANUARY 1, 1894.

Best Cure For

All disorders of the Throat and Lungs is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has no equal as a cough cure.

Bronchitis

"When I was a boy I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary remedies, but recommended me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take a bad cold, and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."—J. C. Woodson, P. M., Forest Hill, W. Va.

Cough

"For more than twenty-five years I was a sufferer from lung trouble, attended with coughing so severe at times as to cause hemorrhage, the paroxysms frequently lasting three or four hours. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after taking four bottles was thoroughly cured."—Franz Hoffman, Clay Centre, Kan.

La Grippe

"Last spring I was taken down with la grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete."—W. H. Williams, Cook City, S. Dak.

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Consolation.

In the bitter waves of woe,
Beaten and tossed about
By the sullen winds that blow
From the desolate shores of doubt,
Where the anchors that faith has cast
Are dragging in the gale,
I am quietly holding fast
To the things that cannot fail.
I know that right is right,
That it is not good to lie;
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy;
I know that passion needs
The leash of a sober mind;
I know that generous deeds
Some sure reward shall find;
That the rulers must obey,
That the givers shall increase;
That duty lights the way
For the beautiful feet of peace;
In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars have all gone out,
That courage is better than fear,
That faith is better than doubt.
And fierce though the fiends may fight,
And long though the angels hide,
I know that truth and right
Have the universe on their side;
And that somewhere beyond the stars
Is a love that is better than fate;
When the night unlocks her bars
I shall see him—and I will wait.

THE CHARITIES OF DIVES.

The clergyman had just raised his reposeful, mild face from under cover of his delicately veined hand, behind which he had been silently praying as the soul of John Parker passed away, and said, in a rich voice, perfectly modulated to clerical sympathy, as in explanation of the physician's movement away from the bed, "Our brother has gone." The wife's head sank lower yet on the other side of the couch, as she let her silent crying become more audible and visible. The assembled family stood or kneeled in the hush of first grief, while the benevolent though strongly marked face of the father lay white and ghastly, in the relaxation of death, on the wrinkled pillow. A friend left the room, with noiseless purpose; and all knew, with a shudder, that he had gone for the undertaker. Now a little movement came into the group; and as the clergyman led the heart-bleeding widow away, steadier hands came, and the elegant chamber of death witnessed the beginning of the dread preparations of burial.

John Parker had been a philanthropic millionaire, living well, giving nobly, a prominent figure in a city church, and interested in all good work; and he had died amid an aroma of modern evangelical religion,—hymn singing and prayer. But John Parker need not be spoken of with the melancholy cadence of a past tense. John Parker, at this moment of family grief, is; and is now treading the new paths of the the new life beyond the veil. By the time the streamer of crape had been formally attached to the front door, and the business of mourning set about as the mourning of such a man should be, John Parker, the real, the ego, the immortal,—not the stiff mask that lay in the darkened bed chamber, but John Parker himself,—was journeying out into an unfamiliar land. Entirely lost at first, it was not long until he fell in with other men, apparently bound, like himself, for some unknown realm in this gray waste of trackless space. As if hardly knowing how it came about, quite a little company had soon come together out of the yielding mists, and under a but half-realized guidance were traveling toward an unrevealed domain. The talk, like that of chance traveling companions meeting on board ship, was casual and shifty—now of this or that topic of the world left behind, but constantly betraying an intertwined desire and fear on the part of all to discuss the possibilities of the future.

It occurred to John Parker, presently, that this was not the attitude of mind for a man who had made his "calling and election sure," and had vouched for this assurance to "seeking souls" for many a year. These other strangers might not have, like himself, obtained "the priceless gift" and lived a life full of charity and good works; and, at all events, this was no time, with the hazy unknown all about him, to lose hold of the anchor of faith. Putting the result of this thought into speech in the exhortatory form so customary to him in life, he said:—

"Well, it is a great comfort to me, in this hour of trial, to remember that my Master has enabled me to do much on earth for His cause and people. I have not hesitated, and I thank God for it, to use the means he has given me to help on his work."

"Ah, yes!" said a scholarly looking old gentleman not far from him, his face brightening up at this indirect avowal of a future hope. "It is now that his charities come back to one with interest. How true it is! 'Cast thy bread upon the waters!' How true!"

A heavy-browed man, with ponderous gait, looked up at this with a new interest, and said:—

"Gentlemen, you are right. Now is the time that a fellow's loans to God should fall due."

He intended to say more, but the irreverence of the speech struck him now as it had never done in his business office, and he paused to try and better it. His mind found it hard, however, to fall into the channels of speech he had always so rigorously dammed up as but the runnels of "cant"; and there was quite a silence before John Parker again took up the theme. A little more force and importance in his voice evinced his intention to let the last speaker know that his blasphemy had shocked all good men.

"A little over a year ago," he said, "I was divinely led and enabled to build a new wing to the hospital in my city. It had been long needed, for many poor patients had been turned away of late and compelled to bear their affliction—heaven-sent, no doubt, for their own good—in their—ah—very unsanitary homes in the factory district."

Two tall, masterly figures were walking in the very front of the little group, and one of them looked back at this for the first time, but said nothing.

"God had prospered me exceedingly of late," went on John Parker, "and I fitted up this wing of the hospital with all the modern appliances, and the clergy and the press thought it in every way admirable. That great satisfaction should"—

But here the tall figure in the front, who had looked back, spoke:—

"Did not God care to prosper the poor in the factory district?" he asked.

There was a silence for a moment; and then John Parker, wrapping himself about a little more sternly in an invisible cloak of authoritative mystery, replied:—

"The ways of Providence are inscrutable, my brother. We cannot venture to interpret them."

"Ah! yes; and you must not forget my friend," said an eager faced clergyman with wavy hair and quick, nervous hands, walking quite away at the other side from John Parker, and addressing himself to the tall figure, "God does not will that all shall prosper in worldly affairs. To some He gives riches; to others knowledge; and others, again, He chasteneth. Some must go through the fires of affliction and poverty and suffering, that they may come out as gold tried in the furnace."

But the tall figure had turned quietly away and moved on.

"Yes; and I can tell you, my brother," said John Parker to the clergyman, "that wealth brings perplexities and trials which are quite as heavy as any the poorest can know."

A thinly clad woman, with a young though care creased face, who had shivered much at first, and whose finger tips were dotted with needle wounds, looked up doubtfully at this; but the wan infant in her arms moved, and she forgot the others in a moment.

The scholarly old gentleman was the next to speak. "My charities," he said, "have generally been given through the church. There is a system about it there, and no undeserving person gets too much. We have a committee, you know—you can't do much without a committee—and 'visitors' who go about to the paupers' houses, and then the approved families send a member each Tuesday and Saturday to the charity office to get bread or coals or a bowl of wholesome soup—very good soup, indeed." And he smacked his lips like a zealous restaurateur recommending his cuisine.

A workman with sharp, rebellious eyes and a firm mouth drew near at this, and asked, in a distinctly aggressive and quarrelsome tone, "Did you ever do nothin' to stop the manefactur' of 'pawpers,' as ye call 'em?"

"My!" said the old gentleman, evidently startled. "I meant no offense, sir; no offense."

"I guess I'm beyond takin' offense," said the workman in a hard voice and with a harder smile; "and now thet we're all out of the world, I guess we'd better keep out of this talk."

"No! no! my good man," said the old gentleman eagerly. I want to tell you what we did do in the way of giving work to those who wanted it. We leased a yard and bought wood and paid men by the cord for cutting it, and then sold the wood. We tried oakum picking, too, but that did not pay very well."

The two stately figures in front, whom now all recognized to be the leading party, looked toward one another when the old gentleman was speaking, as if interchanging thought through the eyes, and then the one who had spoken before turned and asked:—

"Is there a scarcity of work now on the earth?"

"Oh, yes," rejoined the old gentleman, with a committee-room air, "the 'out of works' make our most perplexing social problem."

"The 'out of works'?" repeated the questioner, doubtfully. "Ah! you mean those who have secured taxing privileges, and eat the food of others' raising."

The penetrating tones unnerved the "committee-man," and rendered his reply more like a student's answer than an expert's dictum. "I mean those who are poor and are willing to work, but can get none," he said.

"They can always till the soil," returned the stern, tall figure.

"Can they?" broke in the workman. "That's all you know about it. There is no land to be had at livin' rates and within livin' distance of a market."

The strong face of the stern questioner melted into the utmost kindness at the interruption of the workman, jagged and hostile as it was; and something of a quizzical look came into his eyes as he asked, with what seemed mock curiosity:—

"Is the earth so full then?"

"Full of rent-takers and mortgage-holders," growled the workman under his breath; when John Parker, fearing that this ill-informed stranger might take this answer literally and fail to comprehend it, volunteered:—

"The most desirable farming lands have been taken up, you will understand, sir. Somebody owns them, though they may not use them."

Again the two leading figures exchanged that look which seemed so full of speech for them both and the spokesman said:—

"It is the old trouble, then: the strong have usurped a taxing power; and though the poor do plenty of work—far too much—the idle tax gatherers, like the old 'publicans' and those they served, reap the benefit. Your charities, my good friend, only gave work to those who had too much. Their need was justice. And as for land! You who had families, tell me this: could one child at your table obtain a claim to more bread than he needed while another was hungry? Bread, in that case, was a father's gift. So is the land."

And the tall figure moved on again, and all was silent.

When their spirits had been revived a little by mutual experimental and tentative chat, a tall, serious-faced gentleman who had hitherto not spoken remarked that he was interested in the educational work, and that he had given quite freely to it toward the end of his life.

"That was my line, too," said the heavy-browed man, who had not spoken since he was so severely snubbed for his blunt, pseudo-blasphemy at the opening of the conversation.

The first speaker did not look as if he relished the coincidence, but soon both got to telling the particulars of their beneficence. The burly individual had favored mechanical and scientific schools, while the serious-faced philanthropist had interested himself exclusively in theological colleges. They had both evidently been large and generous givers. Ever since the last masterful interruption from the mysterious leading figures, they had talked with an uneasy eye on their dim shapes through the shadows, and were not startled, though none the less uneasy, when the same one turned around.

"You gave away a great deal," he said, at length. "How did you manage to earn it in a lifetime?"

The burly gentleman plainly took this question at once to himself. He acted like a man who had answered such a query—at least in the privacy of his own conscience—many times before.

"Well, they took my money, anyway, and were mighty glad to get it," he blurted out, in conscious defiance. "I made it in beer; that's how I made it. And beer is one of God's good creatures." And he looked around, challenging contradiction. None came. Men do not willingly jostle each other when floating on a few thin planks over an unknown sea. But the refusal to be classed with this beer brewer shone unconquerable from the faces of his fellow-philanthropists, and presently his serious-faced colleague in the educational work said, with peculiar emphasis, addressing markedly all but the man of malt:—

"My money was made legitimately in an honored business. I was a maker of agricultural implements."

"So was I," laughed the keen-eyed workman; and the laugh jarred.

"A—eh—a manufacturer?" asked the educationalist.

"No," returned the workman bluntly. "I did the work."

"That is—you—eh—you did the mechanical work," interpreted he of the serious face.

"That's what I said," was the reply. "I didn't have nothing to do with tariffs nor taxing the farmers"—this with a swiftly hostile glance—"nor searching out markets; I just made the machines. I'm not sayin', ye'll understand," he went on, shaking an argumentative finger, "that the manufacturer doesn't work, but he don't work any harder than I do, at least, than I did," remembering that he had lately changed worlds, "and I doubt, if you count out as not true productive work the time he spends raising prices and screwing down wages, whether he worked as hard as I did. And yet he made millions; and I"—his eyes blazed red, and he gasped as he spoke—"well, my wife died of consumption a year ago because I couldn't send her to a dry climate; and now I've followed."

"Ah! you were a publican, then," said the tall figure from the front, who had followed this speech carefully, addressing the manufacturer. "You had a right to take taxes from the farmers."

"Oh, no!" expostulated the agricultural implement manufacturer. "We in our country had a protective tariff on agricultural implements, it is true; but if I had my price lists with me, I could show you that it added very little to the cost of our implements to the farmers."

"And yet," said the tall figure, musingly, turning round again, "the workmen are poor; the farmers are poor; and you make millions."

And thus, as the time wore away, did others tell of the wealth they had given to good causes or left behind them now at their departure; while about them and mournful, countless figures flitted in and out of the shadows, listening sometimes, but never speaking; for they had endowed no colleges, founded no charities, left no monuments; done nothing upon earth but managed to live, and that only in pain and penury. They came emptyhanded, and they were abashed at the "jewels" of good works which the great ones of two worlds were carrying. Poverty on earth had left them poor beyond it; for in the crowded tenement and on the barren fields tempers had soured, intelligence had been dimmed; love and gentleness and brotherly kindness—what room had there been for the growth of these virtues in the mad struggle for bread? They had travelled "steerage" over life's sea, and they were foul with the smells of it. There had been time in the cabin for good deeds, for kindly courtesy, for benevolence and religious service—they had even monopolized the giving of a cup of cold water up there. But down in the reeking hold of the ship, men fought like dogs for clean water, that the fever-red lips of their babes might taste it. Brute passions had sucked rank life out of the miasmic air, and their nerves had not ceased to throb with them yet. Envy had grown into their natures; petty jealousies and class hatred, born of class wrongs, had thrived, not to be put down even by the visitation of Charity in furs, nor the erection of a special mission chapel, where the Elder Brother could be introduced to his "poorer relations." It was too terribly plain that there was no escape from the heritage of poverty.

These two classes of beings, the philanthropists and paupers, were by no means the only figures that flitted through the shadows; for this scene on the farther side of the water-shed of death was a world in misty miniature. Many other faces looked out of the wreathed night shades—the close-lipped face that neither asked nor gave quarter in the game of life; the careless face, now shadowed with apprehension; and very often the unworldly face of one of the mutely following flock of the many and varied religious shepherds. One of those latter, a patient woman with suds-bleached fingers, disturbed by the stories of good works told by the Parkers of the party, drew near, in sheer wanton search for the help of the strong that she had always yearned for in religious matters, to the tall figure in front who had not spoken. Her story was that she had done nothing, while these had done so much.

"My sister!" said the voice of the figure, and it reached in mellow cadence to the uttermost realms of shade, "you are only like unto an unhappy one who lived long centuries ago near blue Galilee, who gave nothing of man-made wealth, for he took nothing."

And as he spoke, he raised a hand as if to bless the woman, and the palm of it was drawn into a glassy scar. In a moment he was gone; and but one tall figure remained, and he was an angel.—*A. R. Carman in Arena

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 17, 1893.

It is reported that the United States may be asked to act as mediator between the conflicting elements in Brazil.

Honduras is sorry for the firing upon a vessel flying the American flag by her forts, and apologizes, which of course we accept and that ends the matter.

It is probable that the United States cruiser New York will be sent to Brazil soon, in view of the revolution which is just now occupying the attention of the people of that country.

Judge John W. Corcoran of Clinton has decided to leave the supreme court bench and resume the practice of law, and among those mentioned as his possible successor is James B. Carroll of Springfield, the defeated Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Harvey D. Bagg, county commissioner for the county of Hampden, died at his home in West Springfield Tuesday morning, at the age of 62. Industrious and honest, with a large gift of common sense and good judgment, the best type of the New England farmer, he will be deeply mourned in his own town and throughout the county.

The new United States cruiser Columbia is acknowledged the fastest war vessel afloat, though she has not yet had her trial trip, which was to have taken place yesterday between Cape Ann and Cape Porpoise, but was postponed on account of the roughness of the weather. On her trip from Philadelphia to Boston she steamed nearly 23 knots an hour.

Some good may yet be expected of New York, when it is decided to prosecute Judge John Y. McKane of Gravesend, the political boss who carried matters with such a high hand just before the election, and who, when served with a paper from the supreme court, remarked that he didn't care a d——n for the court. Governor Flower has appointed two lawyers to take charge of the prosecution.

The discipline at the Charlestown state prison seems to have been decidedly better since Warden Bridges took hold of the institution, there having been few riots and no such sensations as the public were frequently treated to before. But a few days ago a Boston paper printed a sensational story to the effect that many of the men were kept in solitary confinement, and were being driven insane by it. The facts are that the worst of the men, about 30 of the most desperate element, have been so confined, but the prison commissioners uphold the warden, who is getting better order out of the convicts than has been customary, and who say that no man has been shut up who did not deserve it.

President Cleveland has decided that our minister at Hawaii not only made a mistake in recognizing the provisional government which was established in that country by the overthrow of the queen, but that the overthrow was assisted by the landing of the troops from the war vessel then in the harbor, and it is supposed that Minister Willis, who recently sailed for that place, has received instructions tending to restore the monarchial government and give Queen Liluokalani back her throne. By this action the president has practically characterized as untrue the reports of Mr. Stevens, who was minister at Honolulu at that time, and many others of undoubted standing, who assert that the troops were not landed until after the queen had been dethroned, the provisional government established and the new constitution read to the people, the troops then being landed merely to protect possible injury to American interests. Any attempt on the part of the administration to restore a monarchial form of government at Hawaii will arouse a good deal of opposition in this country.

An attempt on the part of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad to "bottle up" the New York and New England road and cut off a good slice of its through traffic seems to have been made in the arrangement of the new time schedule by the former road. The New York and New England road runs its New York trains over the New Haven tracks, as does the Boston and Albany road, and although the distance between the two cities is several miles less by way of the New England road, it has been compelled to make the time the same as that of trains by Springfield and the Boston and Albany, the New Haven road not allowing a schedule over their tracks which would make quicker time between terminals. In spite of this the New England had built up a service which was the heaviest of any between the two cities. Now on the plea of "economy" the New Haven road practically abolishes the two through trains a day which the New England people had by running them out of New York attached to the rear of other trains, and at hours which do not accommodate Boston travel. The same method of getting the New England's Boston trains into New York is employed, and is well calculated to drive through passengers over some other road. As the New England road has been long trying to get an independent entrance into New York, but so for unsuccessfully, this move is undoubtedly intended to decrease its earnings and make it unpopular with travelers. It is a little peculiar that the "economical" streak of the New Haven road should strike so hard a blow at its competitor for the through travel between New York and Boston.

In response to requests Rev. H. F. Moulton will speak in the Universalist church next Sunday morning on "The Doctrine of the Endless Punishment of the Wicked—not in accord with the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, not believed by many great and good men throughout the ages, and against the scholarly trend of the religious thought of to-day." All are invited.

R. A. McQuaid of Chatham, formerly of this place, has received the second prize of $125 among the division superintendents of the Boston and Albany road for excellence of his division. Among the section masters in the second division—Worcester to Springfield—F. H. Strickland of Wilbraham received the first prize, $100, and P. Prou of West Brimfield the third prize, $50.

The Woronoco whist club met Tuesday evening with Miss Annie Fish. The next meeting will be in three weeks, on the first Tuesday evening in December. It is rumored that this vacation is to give the young men of the club an opportunity to get their courage up to a point which will enable them to escort the young ladies home after the play, as they do not fancy being compelled to travel the streets alone at late hours of the night.

The Universalist Minister's Association of Western Massachusetts held its regular monthly meeting in St. Paul's Universalist church Monday. The subject for discussion was "The awakening of greater interest for our faith in Western Massachusetts." The following ministers took part in the discussion: Messrs. Crosley of Springfield, Blackford of Monson, Moore of Warren, Farnsworth of Charlton, Druley of Stafford Springs and Moulton of Palmer.

The steamer made quick time to the fire at Monson Monday morning, 23 minutes from Allen's livery stable in Palmer to the Cushman House in Monson. The lead horses rather took things into their own keeping at this point and started on a run, the result being that the steamer collided with the freight platform at the corner of the railroad depot, the pole being broken, which delayed the arrival of the apparatus at the fire, where it did good work, however, when it did arrive.

Business at the district court has been rather dull this week, the only cases since last Friday being those of Thomas Burnett of Rochester, N. Y., who on Monday was sent to the state farm at Bridgewater for a year for vagrancy, and John Higgins, who was up for drunkenness this morning, being held over until Monday for sentence. To-morrow the civil cases of Stewart vs. Fuzzey, both of Wales, and Harris of Palmer vs. Foley of Monson will be tried.

The Ladies Social Union of St. Paul's church held a social Wednesday evening. Mrs. F. R. Lawton and Mrs. G. F. Sedgwick entertained. Supper was served at six in the dining room, after which an entertainment was given in the lecture room, consisting of the following: Reading by W. W. Leach; piano solo by Mrs. Small; reading by Mrs. Robinson; piano duett, Misses Royce; reading Miss Clara Moffatt; vocal duett, Mrs. Robinson and Mr. Royce; piano solo, Mrs. Auger. This was the largest social of the season, 150 being present.

A meeting was held in the library rooms Monday evening for the purpose of forming a literary society, and the Quaboag Literary Circle was inaugurated, these officers being chosen: President, Rev. F. E. Jenkins; vice president, A. N. Thayer; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. B. P. Morse; directors, the president and vice president, with Mrs. H. M. Auger, Dr. W. H. Stowe and O. P. Allen. Another meeting will be held next Wednesday evening to perfect the organization. The meetings will probably be held fortnightly, and American history will be studied.

The Woman's Relief Corps has perfected arrangements for the celebration of the seventh anniversary of its organization next Wednesday. The corps of Spencer, Brookfield, West Brookfield, North Brookfield, Warren, Monson and Ware have been invited to be present in the afternoon and evening, and will be entertained with a programme made up of readings, music and a farce, and refreshed by a collation at six. In the evening there will be more music, etc. The affair is in charge of Mrs. C. B. Ellis, Mrs. J. E. Weld, Mrs. B. Fish, Mrs. M. A. Royce, and Miss M. R. Paine.

The Natural History Society will hold a social in the library building Monday evening. Refreshments in the shape of cake, coffee and cocoa will be served. There will also be offered for sale fancy wooden articles, such as candlesticks, plates, etc., turned from bits of wood left from the trimmings of the library rooms. All these articles are guaranteed to be from the original wood, and the supply is limited. All members of the society are requested to be present at a special meeting to be held this evening, as the arrangements for the social will be perfected and the committees appointed.

There was a great hue and cry about 5.30 Monday afternoon in front of the Commercial Block over a stolen horse. The owner of the animal was sure that he had hitched it right there, in the same place where he always hitched it when he came to town, soon after 3 o'clock, and now it was gone, and "something had got to be done about it, right off, QUICK!" It was suggested to him that perhaps he had made a mistake in the place, but he knew better. The police headquarters were anxiously inquired for, and a telephone message sent for Deputy Sheriff Brainerd, who however was out of town. In the meantime several persons set out on a search for the missing steed, and found it hitched in front of the Cross block, directly across the street.

It is to be hoped that the people of Palmer will give Col. E. W. French of Chicago, the master entertainer, and Ralph Richards, the versatile young impersonator, a rousing reception at the opera house next Monday and Tuesday afternoons and evenings. They have been secured in order that all who have not seen the great World's Fair may hear an eloquent lecture concerning it and Columbus, the discoverer of our land, and see a thousand magnificent views illustrating the Exposition, the life of Columbus, and the city of Chicago. Col. French is the most eloquent of all platform artists. He was for two years the official lecturer of the Columbian Exposition, traveling over this country and England, and he will put on exhibition here his magnificent collection of stereopticon views of this, the greatest of all "World's Fairs," (the fair proper and Midway Plaisance up to date,) the life of Columbus and the City of Chicago. This is one of the few attractions coming which will be found just as advertised. Prices, adults 25 and 35 cents; afternoon matinee, children 10 cents.

A new time table will go into effect on the Boston and Albany road Sunday, with important changes. Going west the forenoon trains will run the same at present. Conductor Camp's Springfield local will leave from the Ware branch track two minutes later, at 2.11 p. m. The 5.28 Western express is discontinued, and in its place the Western express now passing here at 4.17 p. m. will stop every day in the week. This train will reach Chicago via both the Michigan Central and Lake Shore routes at 5.30 the next afternoon. The New York express passing at 6.06 p. m. will stop week days but not on Sunday. The Springfield accommodation will leave four minutes later than at present, at 6.14. Going east there is no change in the forenoon trains. Conductor Camp's accommodation will leave Springfield five minutes later, at 6.40 p. m., and reach Palmer at 7.10. The 8 08 Boston train will pass Palmer at 7 01, but will not stop any more. The train now leaving Springfield at 8.48 p. m. will leave Palmer at 8.40 week days only. Sunday trains going east leave Palmer at 8 21 a. m., 7.55 p. m; going west at 4 17 p. m. The evening train on the Ware branch will leave five minutes later, at 7.13.

SEVEN MAGAZINES IN ONE.
ST. NICHOLAS
FOR YOUNG FOLKS.
"Wide Awake" now Merged in it. Enlarged by 200 additional pages in the volume. Everything Illustrated.

OF all publications for boys and girls, St. Nicholas, conducted by Mary Mapes Dodge, is unquestionably the best. It has been praised by the press and the people of two continents—its circulation is unprecedented among magazines for young folks. Beginning with the number for November, 1893, it is enlarged by the addition of 200 pages in the volume, and for 1893-4 it will have the greatest programme in its history, including brilliantly illustrated, describing the quadrupeds of North America in a popular way, by W. T. Hornaday, recently Chief Taxidermist of the U. S. National Museum.

A NATURAL HISTORY SERIES,

"TOM SAWYER ABROAD,"
A SERIAL STORY BY MARK TWAIN, in which the great humorist's famous creations, "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" visit the easter n hemisphere (in a flying machine); a series on

AMERICAN AUTHORS,
by Brander Matthews, setting forth in clear and simple form the main biographical facts and the chief literary qualities of famous men in American literature, including Irving, Cooper, Bryant, Hawthorn, Emerson, Lowell, etc.;

STORIES OF INDIA
BY RUDYARD KIPPLING.
When Rudyard Kippling was a boy in India he used to read St. Nicholas, and now he takes his turn at bringing delight to the thousands of young folk who read it to-day. He has written for St. Nicholas a series of remarkable stories of boy and girl life in the jungle and with animals.

"RECOLLECTIONS OF WILD LIFE,"
by Dr. Charles Eastman, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, and a graduate of a white man's college (Dartmouth); a description of Indian life—in camp and on the war-path—described from the insiue. A novelty in literature.

PAPERS ON THE GOVERNMENT.
"How Money is Made" (the Mint), "How the Treasury is Guarded," "How the Government Promotes Ingenuity" (the Patent Office), "The Dead-Letter Office," "With the West Point Cadets," "How Armies Talk to Each Other," "Life on a Man-of-War," etc.

1000 ILLUSTRATIONS BY THE GREATEST ARTISTS OF THE WORLD.

THE programme of the new volume of The Century Magazine, beginning with the November number, is one of rare interest to every reader of literature. The chief serial feature is

A NEW NOVEL BY MARK TWAIN.
The most dramatic story ever written by America's greatest humorist. Like several of Mark Twain's stories, it has for its scene a steamboat town on the Mississippi River forty years ago. "Pudd'nhead Wilson," a hard-headed country lawyer, the hero of the story, furnishes much of the fun that one naturally expects to find in a work by the author of "The Innocents Abroad," but he appears in quite another light in the murder trial which forms the thrilling climax of the story. The plot introduces a novel and ingenious employment of science in the detection of crime, and the characters are well drawn and their every action is interesting. The Century will contain

A SERIES OF SUPERB ENGRAVINGS OF THE OLD DUTCH MASTERS; Articles on HUNTING OF FIERCE GAME;
Articles describing ARTISTS' ADVENTURES, by leading American artists, with their own illustrations; Articles descriptive of IMPORTANT EXPEDITIONS
in all the great continents, including the adventures of two young Americans who traversed Asia on bicycles. A novel series on TRAMPING WITH TRAMPS;
How a young man, disguised as a tramp, traveled over America and learned the secrets of the "profession";
IMPORTANT PAPERS ON MUSIC
by the greatest living composers and musicians; Unpublished essays by JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL;
Short stories and novelettes by the leading story-writers, essays on timely subjects, humor and fun. In the "Lightest Vein" department, etc., etc. The

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

FIRE LOSS OF $50,000.

Central Block, With its Contents, and Other Buildings, Burned to the Ground.

About 2.30 Monday morning fire was discovered in one of the stores in Central Block, and before the progress of the flames could be stayed not only the block and its contents, but a storehouse in the rear, a tin and stove store at one side, and engine house belonging to the town, and a part of the boarding house of Heimann & Lichten were in ruins, besides much damage being done to other property by the intense heat. Central Block was about 60 by 60, three stories, and was occupied on the ground floor by S. Simmons, clothier, G. L. Keeney, druggist and newsdealer, the post office, G. W. Farrington postmaster, and Norcross Bros., groceries and hardware. On the second floor were Matthew Connolly, tailor, the rooms of the Windsor social club and the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society, and a tenement occupied by J. S. O'Brien. On the third floor was Central Hall, used for entertainments. The fire was discovered about the same time by Mr. O'Brien and Fred Ayer, who lives in the house east of the block. Mr. O'Brien awoke to find the room full of smoke, and with his wife had barely time to escape, being only partially clothed. At the foot of the stairs he thought of some money which he had left behind and started back after it, but found the flames were there before him. So rapidly did the blaze spread that not a thing in the stocks in the stores was saved, nor a single article in the rooms above. A. D. Norcross managed to save the books in the safe of Norcross Bros., but had a narrow escape from being suffocated by the smoke.

The fire when first seen was bursting from the front and rear of Simmons's clothing store, the whole interior being ablaze. As the fire spread several explosions occurred, and the flames then rapidly gained ground. The fire department was soon on the scene, but the two small chemical engines were useless against such a seething mass, and the atttention of the men was directed toward saving adjoining property and preventing the spread of the fire. The tin shop of Cornelius Leary, north of the block, could not be saved, but by hard work the fire was stopped there and kept from the straw works of Heimann & Lichten. On the south of the block the engine house owned by the town was soon doomed, and the L of the boarding house caught when the south side of the block was the hottest. The L was burned to the ground and the fire penetrated into the main part of the building, though it was not wholly consumed. Good work was also done here by the firemen. On arriving at the fire Selectman Gage at once sent to Palmer for aid, and the steamer was sent from that place, doing good work in protecting other property and cooling down the intense heat from the ruins of the block, forcing water up hill through 1500 feet of hose. Valuable assistance was also rendered from the pumps at Cushman's mill. In addition to the burned property, the house of S. Fred Cushman, directly across from the block, received a severe scorching, the roof taking fire on one corner, and the fence in front igniting several times. The house of S. F. Cushman was also somewhat damaged, and also the house of John Herlihy. It was nearly six o'clock before the firemen had a chance to rest for even a moment, and then hot coffee was served by Miss Salena Orcutt, and lunch by Miss Hattie F. Cushman at her father's residence. Landlord Foley of the Monson House also furnished free breakfast for the Palmer firemen.

Central Block was owned by R. M. Reynolds and the Alfred Norcross estate, and cost $30,000. It was insured for $18,000 through the agency of Morris & Farrington of Monson, who placed nearly all the insurance on the property destroyed. The other losses and insurance are as follows: S. Simmons, $5000, insured for $2500; G. L. Keeney, $5000, insured for $3000; Norcross Bros., $7000, insured for $4000; the Windsor Club had $500 insurance on its furniture, billiard and pool tables, pictures, etc., which will not cover the loss; the Father Matthew society's loss is covered by $200 insurance; Connolly had a large stock of winter goods, with no insurance, and his loss will be $500; J. S. O'Brien lost all his furniture and $27 in money, insured for $400; C. J. Leary's loss is $3500, insured for $1250 on the building and $500 on stock; the engine house of the town was valued at $300; Norcross Bros. had $200 insurance on their storehouse in the rear of the block, from which the greater part of the contents was saved; Heimann & Lichten had $3000 on their boarding house, from which all the furniture was removed, but much of it was damaged by careless handling; S. Fred Cushman's furniture was all removed from his house and damaged about $500 by handling, insured; the wires of the Palmer & Monson Electric Co. were damaged by the burning off of the insulation.

The cemetery which stood north of the block, and which contains the remains of many of Monson's old residents, is a desolate looking place, the grass being all scorched, and many of the monuments cracked by the heat.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Simmons, in whose store the flames originated, says he was not in the place after he went in Sunday morning to pull down the curtains. After the discovery of the breaking into Pendergast's market on the same night, and the finding of burned pieces of paper about the room, evidently used by the burglar to enable him to see, it is thought the fire might have originated in this way, the party entering the store accidentally setting fire to something, or leaving a spark which finally started into a blaze. It is reported that a man was seen running from the block with a bundle after the fire was discovered, but if it was set in this way the person who did it would hardly wait until the store was all afire.

NOTES OF THE FIRE.

Much is said in praise of the Palmer fire department, and the effective work done by it.

Cornelius J. Leary is thinking of building a stove and tin shop north of Pendergast's market.

The poor bewildered doves, circling about in the smoke and glare of the fire, presented an uncanny sight.

The post office safe came out of the ruins with but little damage to the contents; none of the stamps were lost.

Mrs. Edward D. Cushman's sealskin cape got mislaid at S. F. Cushman, Jr's., and though found in the forenoon was badly damaged by chemicals.

R. A. Beckwith, who lives in Mrs. Luther B. Peck's house, was struck in the leg by a hard substance sent flying by an explosion, and was considerably lamed.

One of the ten tramps who stayed in the lock-up remarked in the morning that he was glad he was under cover, so the setting of the fire could not be laid to him.

W. N. Flynt & Sons have bought the teams and stock of Norcross Bros. which was saved from the storehouse, and the good will of their trade, and will continue to supply the patrons of this firm.

Heimann & Lichten's employes who were quartered in the boarding house are now boarding with Mrs. Murphy next to the shop, though the firm has engaged 17 rooms at the Monson House for lodging.

Where they are located:—The post office in the old bank building; G. L. Keeney with Frank A. Bills: C. J. Leary in Green's block; Mrs. Ferrell, the boarding house mistress, is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Gage.

The old bank building has been wired, and last evening the current of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company brightened the heretofore dark rooms. It is to be hoped that the government will choose this building for the permanent home of the postoffice, as it is very central, and could be made very convenient. One great advantage would be that the post office would be the only occupant.

Sudden Death of Frederick Fay.

The news of the death of Frederick Fay at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, Tuesday afternoon, was a great shock to Monson people, who knew him so well. He was taken violently ill Thursday night with appendicitis, but was better Friday, and on Saturday was removed to the hospital where an operation was performed at 11 30 p. m., from the effects of which he did not rally. Mr. Fay was the son of Mrs. Sarah, and the late Rufus F. Fay, and was 32 years five months of age. He was born in town, and after leaving the Academy succeeded, with his brother Rufus, his father in the manufacturing of straw goods. About four years ago he went to New York in the capacity of a straw goods salesman, and for the past three years has held that position with Vanherhoff & Co. The body was brought to his brother's home in Monson on Wednesday, and the funeral took place Thursday. Mr. Fay was a very promising young man, of genial disposition, and a favorite wherever he went. The funeral, held Thursday afternoon, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating, was largely attended. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Norcross sang "Come Unto Me," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The floral emblems were many and beautiful, among them being a square and compass from Day Spring lodge of Masons, a harp, a pillow, wreaths and bouquets. The burial was in the Center cemetery.

A Bold Robber.

Seneca Conant, who is about 80 years of age and lives on the road to Wales, about two miles east of the village, was the victim of a bold robbery Saturday evening. About 8 o'clock a stranger called at the house and asked for work. Being told that there was none for him, he then asked for a dollar, but was refused, Mr. Conant telling him that the times were hard and money scarce. The fellow then drew a revolver and threatened to shoot if his demands were not acceded to. Mr. Conant said "You wouldn't really shoot me, would you?" and the fellow admitted that he should hate to do it, then put the weapon in his pocket and seizing Mr. Conant threw him down and proceeded to relieve his pockets of some $6, after which he secured some matches and departed. Mr. Conant followed the fellow to the door, and as he did so two shots were fired from the scoundrel's revolver, but whether with the intention of hitting the old man or only to frighten him is not known. The fellow is supposed to be David Welch, who escaped from Officer Alexander of Palmer on Thursday evening of last week. The same fellow stopped at Mr. Conant's on election day and gave his name as David Welch and his home as Rockville.

Was a Native of Monson.

Rev. Dr. H. M. Tupper, president of Shaw University, at Raleigh, N. C., died there Monday morning after an illness of several months. He was born in Monson in 1831, and went to Raleigh in 1865. He was educated at Amherst College and Newton Theological Seminary, and entered the Union army in 1862 and served until 1865, when he was commissioned by the Baptist Home Mission Society to go to Raleigh. He built a church from timber which was got in the woods near the city, and he and his negro pupils did most of this work and the work on the church building with their own hands. For several years this building served as a schoolhouse week days and a church on Sundays, and is still used for the latter purpose by a negro congregation. In 1866 Shaw university was chartered and the work of erecting the buildings begun—a work which was not completed for several years. The students did most of the work, the money for the materials coming from benevolent people in New England and New York. The university has now over 500 students of both sexes, and has graduated thousands of teachers and ministers.

Harry M. Graves has purchased the Monson Herald.

F. E. Howe is to light his market with electricity.

David B. Needham has been at Huntington a part of this week.

C. M. Gage is contemplating lighting his store by electricity.

Dr. and Mrs. Sawin of Brimfield were the guests of Dr. Jackson Sunday.

Mrs. E. F. Morris is confined to the house with a severe attack of malaria.

Mrs. James Jones of Denver is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. D. Cushman, this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Bell of Granby spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. David B. Needham.

Mrs. Rufus Leach of Somerville is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Day.

Fernando Strong and family of Willimantic spent Sunday with Mrs. Norman Fenton.

Heimann & Lichten are anxious to secure a house to use as a boarding house for their help.

Mrs. Henry Moore of Springfield is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Charles E. Stebbins.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Co. has this week wired the residence of Charles Merrick.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. Coburn on Wednesday afternoon.

Lorenzo Hutchinson is digging away the hill south of his shop, preparatory to putting on an addition.

Selectman Clifford attended the funeral of his particular friend, Dr. Holbrook of Brattleboro, Sunday.

George H. Newton has been appointed administrator of the estate of Margaret Fitzgerald, late of Monson.

Mrs. Mary Tobey Wing of Grafton, formerly of Monson, spent a part of last week with Mrs. Norman Fenton.

Mrs. George C. Flynt entertained a party of ladies, at which whist was the attraction, Tuesday afternoon.

Monson sheltered 11 tramps Sunday night, this number nearly equalling the number (18) kept in a whole year recently.

Mrs. John Orcutt and little daughter Pearl of Somersville, were guests of Albert A. Bedurtha from Friday till Sunday night.

Ralph Clifford has added to his livery a power clipper, for clipping horses, and has already clipped many for outside parties.

The pulpit of the Congregational church will be occupied next Sunday by Rev. N. I. Jones of South Hadley, who exchanges with the pastor, Rev. F. S. Hatch.

Misses Mary J. Gage and Minnie Smith, Mrs. Susan A. Thrall and Mrs. Frank A. Bills of Marcus Keep Relief Corps attended a meeting of the Warren Relief Corps Wednesday.

The meeting at Silver street Sunday was unusually large, 64 being present. A branch Christian Endeavor society connected with the Congregational church will be formed there shortly.

On Monday morning James Pendergast found on entering his market that it had been broken into and some small things taken. He also found burned pieces of paper, which might have been used for lights.

L. W. Sargent, assistant supervisor of drawing in Massachusetts, will speak to the teachers and all who are interested, in the Green street schoolhouse to-morrow at 2.30 p. m. on "Drawing and Its Relation to Nature Study."

A young boy named Lanagan, living on Moulton Hill, was attacked by two ruffians Saturday evening. The horse he was driving was badly frightened and ran away, but the boy did not receive any injury other than a severe fright.

Preparations for the firemen's ball Thanksgiving night are being pushed rapidly, and everything bids fair for making the occasion a grand success. Music will be furnished by the Fadette ladies orchestra, Miss Ethel Atwood, prompter.

Frank M. King of South Monson has received news of the death of the two sons, and critical illness of the three daughters of Rev. and Mrs. Waterman of Illinois. Mrs. Waterman is a sister of Mr. King, and a former resident of Monson.

W. N. Flynt & Sons have contracted with parties in Germany for a quantity of souvenir china. There are to be several varieties of pieces, such as plates, cups and saucers, sugar bowls, creamers, trays, etc.—each piece to have a photograph of some of the principal buildings in town. The soldiers' monument is also to be shown. The work is burned into the china, which is serviceable. It is expected that they are to be here for the Christmas trade.

A man, supposed to be a tramp, whom Mrs. Thomas Parker had fed Monday night, called at her house between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning and demanded admittance. Upon being asked the third time what he wanted he said, with an oath: "You let me in, and you'll find out what I want." Mrs. Parker's daughters called "Help" from the windows, and upon the appearance of Phil Prue, who lives in the basement, the man departed. As soon as Mr. Prue could dress he started in search, but found no one.

The indigo social given by the South Circle of King's Daughters at the Methodist church last Friday evening was a success. After the supper a short entertainment was given, consisting of music, both vocal and instrumental, and readings, followed by a word contest, in which Miss Katharine Smith won the first prize, a book of poems, for forming the greatest number of words out of the letters in "Indigo Social," in a given time, and Robert T. McMaster won the booby prize, a bottle of blueing. The circle cleared over $30.

A meeting of the Windsor club is called for to-morrow evening. The majority of its members and many outside are desirous that the club be continued. It has been organized many years, and at the present time has a large membership and is in a very flourishing condition. The burning of Central Block and the loss of the club's billiard tables, etc., is a great loss, but carrying a good insurance as it did, new quarters and furniture can be readily secured. The club has given Monson people many treats such as lectures, musicals and dances, and it has proved a very good incentive to the young men of the town, as its by-laws and rules allow no drinking or gambling, and the club has kept all the leading magazines and papers for its members.

Academy Notes.

Prof. A. N. Burke and Prof. W. E. Morse spent Monday night in Springfield and attended a banquet at the Massasoit House, where they, in conjunction with 28 others, formed the Western Massachusetts Alumni Association of Wesleyan University. The senior class will give a social in the academy chapel this evening, and will have home made candy on sale.——The meeting of the Linophilian Society is postponed on account of the social until Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.——The rhetoricals this season are of a particularly high order, and as the essays are all chosen from a large number, the last hour Friday afternoon is very interesting, and many of the citizens attend. All are welcome.—— The class of '96 met Wednesday after school and ratified the constitution. This class has yearly dues of 25 cents, and is to have a class pin. The constitution furnished a class motto, and the Greek letters are Alpha, Pi, Epsilon. The class will choose new officers next Wednesday afternoon to serve for one term, instead of a year, as formerly.——The class of '95 is to have a class pin inscribed Phi, Alpha, Theta, costing $2.50 each ——The young ladies of the academy have organized a chapter of the King's Daughters, with 12 members. Miss Alma Bissell, '94, was chosen leader. The name of the chapter is "Christian Courtesy Chapter," and their motto is "There is Nothing so Kingly as Kindness."

The mills are running, but will move cautiously until it is known how much the tariff is to be tinkered.

Mrs. Kline will not go to Germany, as anticipated, on account of her health. It is hinted that quite a snug sum of money has fallen to her.

Joseph Lucy is trapping rabbits and muskrats with good success, while Mr. Maynard is having good luck with 'coons. He hangs out a new skin nearly every day.

Mrs. J. E. Hubbard and children, who have been spending the summer with relatives in Stafford, Ct., Marlboro, Mass., and Wales, have returned to their home in Blue Rapids, Kan. Mrs. Hubbard's mother, Mrs. A. M. Cundall, accompanied them.

BELCHERTOWN.

Clinton W. Randall has gone West, where he will spend the winter.

The grammar and primary schools closed Tuesday, and the high school will close today.

E. J. Griggs post of the Grand Army is holding its meetings in Masonic Hall for the present.

George Gillett, who has been a resident of Belchertown for the past 45 years, died at his home Wednesday at the age of 77. He was a native of Granby, Ct. A widow and one daughter survive him.

L. W. Dillon was before Judge Strickland yesterday for selling liquor to minors and for illegal selling on cattle show day. He was acquitted on the former charge and convicted on the latter, but appealed.

Mrs. Charles Foster, 70, a former resident of Belchertown, died at her home in South Amherst Tuesday morning. She leaves a husband and two children, Charles Hunter and Mrs. William Chamberlain of Amherst.

The Farmers' and Mechanics' Club elected these officers Wednesday evening: President, George L. Kent; vice president, L. W. Dillon; secretary, John Overing; treasurer, W. E. Bridgman; directors, George Davis, Leonard Fosket, Wilson Hamilton, Henry Dunbar, Oliver Hyde.

A resident who a few weeks ago contemplated matrimony, having secured his license and engaged the clergyman, found when he went for his bride that she was gone, another man having persuaded her that to work for wages was more profitable than to marry. After mourning her loss for a few weeks, he has been made happy by her coming to the conclusion that she thought more of him than of money, and the marriage was consummated one evening last week.

WARREN.

Rev. D. O. Clark and family will spend the winter in Worcester.

Mrs. J. W. Hastings is spending a few days with her son in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Daniels have been spending a few days in Stafford, Ct.

A Thanksgiving service was rendered at the Congregational church last Sabbath evening.

Thanksgiving Day.

Now when the frost doth crisp the sward,
And nature, dreaming, lies undressed,
With humble hearts we thank Thee, Lord,
For food and raiment, and for rest.

We thank Thee for Thanksgiving Day,
And all the household joy it brings;
For friendly faces fresh as May,
And mirth that from contentment springs.

How vain the little cares of man,
How very small our biggest heard;

How an Angel Looks.

Robin, holding his mother's hand,
Says, "Good night!" to the big folks all,
Throws kisses from rosy lips,
Laughs with glee through the lighted hall,
Then in his own crib, warm and deep,
Rob is tucked for a long night's sleep.

Gentle mother with fond caress
Slips her hand through his soft brown hair;
Thinks of his fortune all unknown,
Speaks aloud in an earnest prayer:
"Holy angels, keep watch and ward;
Gods good angel's, my baby guard!"

"Mamma, what is an angel like?"
Asked the boy in a wondering tone.
"How will they look if they come here,
Watching me while I'm all alone?"
Half with shrinking and fear spoke he.
Answered the mother tenderly:

"Prettiest faces ever were known,
Kindest voices and sweetest eyes!"
Robin, waiting for nothing more,
Cried with a look of pleased surprise,
Love and trust in his eyes of blue,
"I know, mamma—they're just like you!"

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

FIRE LOSS OF $50,000.

Central Block, With its Contents, and Other Buildings, Burned to the Ground.

About 2.30 Monday morning fire was discovered in one of the stores in Central Block, and before the progress of the flames could be stayed not only the block and its contents, but a storehouse in the rear, a tin and stove store at one side, and engine house belonging to the town, and a part of the boarding house of Heimann & Lichten were in ruins, besides much damage being done to other property by the intense heat. Central Block was about 60 by 60, three stories, and was occupied on the ground floor by S. Simmons, clothier, G. L. Keeney, druggist and newsdealer, the post office, G. W. Farrington postmaster, and Norcross Bros., groceries and hardware. On the second floor were Matthew Connolly, tailor, the rooms of the Windsor social club and the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society, and a tenement occupied by J. S. O'Brien. On the third floor was Central Hall, used for entertainments. The fire was discovered about the same time by Mr. O'Brien and Fred Ayer, who lives in the house east of the block. Mr. O'Brien awoke to find the room full of smoke, and with his wife had barely time to escape, being only partially clothed. At the foot of the stairs he thought of some money which he had left behind and started back after it, but found the flames were there before him. So rapidly did the blaze spread that not a thing in the stocks in the stores was saved, nor a single article in the rooms above. A. D. Norcross managed to save the books in the safe of Norcross Bros., but had a narrow escape from being suffocated by the smoke.

The fire when first seen was bursting from the front and rear of Simmons's clothing store, the whole interior being ablaze. As the fire spread several explosions occurred, and the flames then rapidly gained ground. The fire department was soon on the scene, but the two small chemical engines were useless against such a seething mass, and the atttention of the men was directed toward saving adjoining property and preventing the spread of the fire. The tin shop of Cornelius Leary, north of the block, could not be saved, but by hard work the fire was stopped there and kept from the straw works of Heimann & Lichten. On the south of the block the engine house owned by the town was soon doomed, and the L of the boarding house caught when the south side of the block was the hottest. The L was burned to the ground and the fire penetrated into the main part of the building, though it was not wholly consumed. Good work was also done here by the firemen. On arriving at the fire Selectman Gage at once sent to Palmer for aid, and the steamer was sent from that place, doing good work in protecting other property and cooling down the intense heat from the ruins of the block, forcing water up hill through 1500 feet of hose. Valuable assistance was also rendered from the pumps at Cushman's mill. In addition to the burned property, the house of S. Fred Cushman, directly across from the block, received a severe scorching, the roof taking fire on one corner, and the fence in front igniting several times. The house of S. F. Cushman was also somewhat damaged, and also the house of John Herlihy. It was nearly six o'clock before the firemen had a chance to rest for even a moment, and then hot coffee was served by Miss Salena Orcutt, and lunch by Miss Hattie F. Cushman at her father's residence. Landlord Foley of the Monson House also furnished free breakfast for the Palmer firemen.

Central Block was owned by R. M. Reynolds and the Alfred Norcross estate, and cost $30,000. It was insured for $18,000 through the agency of Morris & Farrington of Monson, who placed nearly all the insurance on the property destroyed. The other losses and insurance are as follows: S. Simmons, $5000, insured for $2500; G. L. Keeney, $5000, insured for $3000; Norcross Bros., $7000, insured for $4000; the Windsor Club had $500 insurance on its furniture, billiard and pool tables, pictures, etc., which will not cover the loss; the Father Matthew society's loss is covered by $200 insurance; Connolly had a large stock of winter goods, with no insurance, and his loss will be $500; J. S. O'Brien lost all his furniture and $27 in money, insured for $400; C. J. Leary's loss is $3300, insured for $1250 on the building and $500 on stock; the engine house of the town was valued at $300; Norcross Bros. had $200 insurance on their storehouse in the rear of the block, from which the greater part of the contents was saved; Heimann & Lichten had $3000 on their boarding house, from which all the furniture was removed, but much of it was damaged by careless handling; S. Fred Cushman's furniture was all removed from his house and damaged about $500 by handling, insured; the wires of the Palmer & Monson Electric Co. were damaged by the burning off of the insulation.

The cemetery which stood north of the block, and which contains the remains of many of Monson's old residents, is a desolate looking place, the grass being all scorched, and many of the monuments cracked by the heat.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Simmons, in whose store the flames originated, says he was not in the place after he went in Sunday morning to pull down the curtains. After the discovery of the breaking into Pendergast's market on the same night, and the finding of burned pieces of paper about the room, evidently used by the burglar to enable him to see, it is thought the fire might have originated in this way, the party entering the store accidentally setting fire to something, or leaving a spark which finally started into a blaze. It is reported that a man was seen running from the block with a bundle after the fire was discovered, but if it was set in this way the person who did it would hardly wait until the store was all afire.

NOTES OF THE FIRE.

Much is said in praise of the Palmer fire department, and the effective work done by it.

Cornelius J. Leary is thinking of building a stove and tin shop north of Pendergast's market.

The poor bewildered doves, circling about in the smoke and glare of the fire, presented an uncanny sight.

The post office safe came out of the ruins with but little damage to the contents; none of the stamps were lost.

Mrs. Edward D. Cushman's sealskin cape got mislaid at S. F. Cushman, Jr's., and though found in the forenoon was badly damaged by chemicals.

R. A. Beckwith, who lives in Mrs. Luther B. Peck's house, was struck in the leg by a hard substance sent flying by an explosion, and was considerably lamed.

One of the ten tramps who stayed in the lock-up remarked in the morning that he was glad he was under cover, so the setting of the fire could not be laid to him.

W. N. Flynt & Sons have bought the teams and stock of Norcross Bros. which was saved from the storehouse, and the good will of their trade, and will continue to supply the patrons of this firm.

Heimann & Lichten's employes who were quartered in the boarding house are now boarding with Mrs. Murphy next to the shop, though the firm has engaged 17 rooms at the Monson House for lodging.

Where they are located:—The post office in the old bank building; G. L. Keeney with Frank A. Bills: C. J. Leary in Green's block; Mrs. Ferrell, the boarding house mistress, is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Gage.

The old bank building has been wired, and last evening the current of the Palmer and Monson Electric Company brightened the heretofore dark rooms. It is to be hoped that the government will choose this building for the permanent home of the postoffice, as it is very central, and could be made very convenient. One great advantage would be that the post office would be the only occupant.

Sudden Death of Frederick Fay.

The news of the death of Frederick Fay at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, Tuesday afternoon, was a great shock to Monson people, who knew him so well. He was taken violently ill Thursday night with appendicitis, but was better Friday, and on Saturday was removed to the hospital where an operation was performed at 11 30 p. m., from the effects of which he did not rally. Mr. Fay was the son of Mrs. Sarah, and the late Rufus F. Fay, and was 32 years five months of age. He was born in town, and after leaving the Academy succeeded, with his brother Rufus, his father in the manufacturing of straw goods. About four years ago he went to New York in the capacity of a straw goods salesman, and for the past three years has held that position with Vanherhoff & Co. The body was brought to his brother's home in Monson on Wednesday, and the funeral took place Thursday. Mr. Fay was a very promising young man, of genial disposition, and a favorite wherever he went. The funeral, held Thursday afternoon, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating, was largely attended. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Norcross sang "Come Unto Me," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The floral emblems were many and beautiful, among them being a square and compass from Day Spring lodge of Masons, a harp, a pillow, wreaths and bouquets. The burial was in the Center cemetery.

A Bold Robber.

Seneca Conant, who is about 80 years of age and lives on the road to Wales, about two miles east of the village, was the victim of a bold robbery Saturday evening. About 8 o'clock a stranger called at the house and asked for work. Being told that there was none for him, he then asked for a dollar, but was refused, Mr. Conant telling him that the times were hard and money scarce. The fellow then drew a revolver and threatened to shoot if his demands were not acceded to. Mr. Conant said "You wouldn't really shoot me, would you?" and the fellow admitted that he should hate to do it, then put the weapon in his pocket and seizing Mr. Conant threw him down and proceeded to relieve his pockets of some $6, after which he secured some matches and departed. Mr. Conant followed the fellow to the door, and as he did so two shots were fired from the scoundrel's revolver, but whether with the intention of hitting the old man or only to frighten him is not known. The fellow is supposed to be David Welch, who escaped from Officer Alexander of Palmer on Thursday evening of last week. The same fellow stopped at Mr. Conant's on election day and gave his name as David Welch and his home as Rockville.

Was a Native of Monson.

Rev. Dr. H. M. Tupper, president of Shaw University, at Raleigh, N. C., died there Monday morning after an illness of several months. He was born in Monson in 1831, and went to Raleigh in 1865. He was educated at Amherst College and Newton Theological Seminary, and entered the Union army in 1862 and served until 1865, when he was commissioned by the Baptist Home Mission Society to go to Raleigh. He built a church from timber which was got in the woods near the city, and he and his negro pupils did most of this work and the work on the church building with their own hands. For several years this building served as a schoolhouse week days and a church on Sundays, and is still used for the latter purpose by a negro congregation. In 1866 Shaw university was chartered and the work of erecting the buildings begun—a work which was not completed for several years. The students did most of the work, the money for the materials coming from benevolent people in New England and New York. The university has now over 500 students of both sexes, and has graduated thousands of teachers and ministers.

Mrs. E. F. Morris is confined to the house with a severe attack of malaria.

Mrs. James Jones of Denver is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. D. Cushman, this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Bell of Granby spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. David B. Needham.

Mrs. Rufus Leach of Somerville is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Day.

Fernando Strong and family of Willimantic spent Sunday with Mrs. Norman Fenton.

Heimann & Lichten are anxious to secure a house to use as a boarding house for their help.

Mrs. Henry Moore of Springfield is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Charles E. Stebbins.

The Palmer and Monson Electric Co. has this week wired the residence of Charles Merrick.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. Coburn on Wednesday afternoon.

Lorenzo Hutchinson is digging away the hill south of his shop, preparatory to putting on an addition.

Selectman Clifford attended the funeral of his particular friend, Dr. Holbrook of Brattleboro, Sunday.

George H. Newton has been appointed administrator of the estate of Margaret Fitzgerald, late of Monson.

Mrs. Mary Tobey Wing of Grafton, formerly of Monson, spent a part of last week with Mrs. Norman Fenton.

Mrs. George C. Flynt entertained a party of ladies, at which whist was the attraction, Tuesday afternoon.

Monson sheltered 11 tramps Sunday night, this number nearly equalling the number (18) kept in a whole year recently.

Mrs. John Orcutt and little daughter Pearl of Somersville, were guests of Albert A. Bedurtha from Friday till Sunday night.

Ralph Clifford has added to his livery a power clipper, for clipping horses, and has already clipped many for outside parties.

The pulpit of the Congregational church will be occupied next Sunday by Rev. N. I. Jones of South Hadley, who exchanges with the pastor, Rev. F. S. Hatch.

Misses Mary J. Gage and Minnie Smith, Mrs. Susan A. Thrall and Mrs. Frank A. Bills of Marcus Keep Relief Corps attended a meeting of the Warren Relief Corps Wednesday.

The meeting at Silver street Sunday was unusually large, 64 being present. A branch Christian Endeavor society connected with the Congregational church will be formed there shortly.

On Monday morning James Pendergast found on entering his market that it had been broken into and some small things taken. He also found burned pieces of paper, which might have been used for lights.

L. W. Sargent, assistant supervisor of drawing in Massachusetts, will speak to the teachers and all who are interested, in the Green street schoolhouse to-morrow at 2.30 p. m. on "Drawing and Its Relation to Nature Study."

A young boy named Lanagan, living on Moulton Hill, was attacked by two ruffians Saturday evening. The horse he was driving was badly frightened and ran away, but the boy did not receive any injury other than a severe fright.

Preparations for the firemen's bali Thanksgiving night are being pushed rapidly, and everything bids fair for making the occasion a grand success. Music will be furnished by the Fadette ladies orchestra, Miss Ethel Atwood, prompter.

Frank M. King of South Monson has received news of the death of the two sons, and critical illness of the three daughters of Rev. and Mrs. Waterman of Illinois. Mrs. Waterman is a sister of Mr. King, and a former resident of Monson.

W. N. Flynt & Sons have contracted with parties in Germany for a quantity of souvenir china. There are to be several varieties of pieces, such as plates, cups and saucers, sugar bowls, creamers, trays, etc.—each piece to have a photograph of some of the principal buildings in town. The soldiers' monument is also to be shown. The work is burned into the china, which is servicable. It is expected that they are to be here for the Christmas trade.

A man, supposed to be a tramp, whom Mrs. Thomas Parker had fed Monday night, called at her house between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning and demanded admittance. Upon being asked the third time what he wanted he said, with an oath: "You let me in, and you'll find out what I want." Mrs. Parker's daughters called "Help" from the windows, and upon the appearance of Phil Prue, who lives in the basement, the man departed. As soon as Mr. Prue could dress he started in search, but found no one.

The indigo social given by the South Circle of King's Daughters at the Methodist church last Friday evening was a success. After the supper a short entertainment was given, consisting of music, both vocal and instrumental, and readings, followed by a word contest, in which Miss Katharine Smith won the first prize, a book of poems, for forming the greatest number of words out of the letters in "Indigo Social," in a given time, and Robert T. McMaster won the booby prize, a bottle of blueing. The circle cleared over $30.

A meeting of the Windsor club is called for to-morrow evening. The majority of its members and many outside are desirous that the club be continued. It has been organized many years, and at the present time has a large membership and is in a very flourishing condition. The burning of Central Block and the loss of the club's billiard tables, etc., is a great loss, but carrying a good insurance as it did, new quarters and furniture can be readily secured. The club has given Monson people many treats such as lectures, musicals and dances, and it has proved a very good incentive to the young men of the town, as its by-laws and rules allow no drinking or gambling, and the club has kept all the leading magazines and papers for its members.

Academy Notes.

Prof. A. N. Burke and Prof. W. E. Morse spent Monday night in Springfield and attended a banquet at the Massasoit House, where they, in conjunction with 28 others, formed the Western Massachusetts Alumni Association of Wesleyan University. The senior class will give a social in the academy chapel this evening, and will have home made candy on sale.——The meeting of the Linophilian Society is postponed on account of the social until Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.——The rhetoricals this season are of a particularly high order, and as the essays are all chosen from a large number, the last hour Friday afternoon is very interesting, and many of the citizens attend. All are welcome.——The class of '96 met Wednesday after school and ratified the constitution. This class has yearly dues of 25 cents, and is to have a class pin. The constitution furnished a class motto, and the Greek letters are Alpha, Pi, Epsilon. The class will choose new officers next Wednesday afternoon to serve for one term, instead of a year, as formerly.——The class of '95 is to have a class pin inscribed Phi, Alpha, Theta, costing $2.50 each ——The young ladies of the academy have organized a chapter of the King's Daughters, with 12 members. Miss Alma Bissell, '94, was chosen leader. The name of the chapter is "Christian Courtesy Chapter," and their motto is "There is Nothing so Kingly as Kindness."

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Nancy Burt, 70, daughter of the late Julius and Prudence Burt, formerly of this place, died at Wilbraham about 8.30 Tuesday afternoon, after an illness of only ten days. She leaves a sister, Miss Margaret S. Burt of Wilbraham, and two nieces, Mrs. A B. Rogers and Mrs. J. B. Rogers of Springfield. The burial was at Springfield.

HAMPDEN.
